Still Impy thought himself head of the home. Little Mrs. Impy watched him strut and swagger and boast and she grinned as she watched. Sometimes, right in the midst of his strutting she would tell Impy to do something and right away he would do it. In short, that Chipmunk home was managed and managed very well indeed by little Mrs. Impy, who had been lively, pretty little Miss Frisky. And she was quite willing that Impy should continue to think himself the head of the home if it gave him any pleasure.

NORTH STONINGTON GRANGE FAIR ATTRACTS CROWD ON OPENING DAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NORTH STONINGTON, Sept. 16.—The 29th annual fair of North Stonington Grange, Inc., opened here at the fairgrounds today and will continue through Thursday. Favored with perfect weather and with a larger entry list than ever the fair officials expressed the opinion this afternoon that this year's fair will be the most successful ever held by the association. The grounds were open from 8 o'clock until midnight.

Wednesday will be Old Home day and during the afternoon and evening there will be band concerts by the 192nd Artillery band of New London. There were 300 persons on the grounds during the morning and afternoon, today, and tonight as many more persons attended, a dance featuring the evening's programme. Thursday, there will be an added attraction, music and ledgermain by a Hartford entertainment agency.

A chowder dinner was served this noon by the women of the grange and Wednesday there will be a New England boiled dinner at the Grange dining hall.

The main exhibition hall is filled with a wide variety of exhibits. The exhibits of vegetables, flowers, canned goods, poultry, clothing, sewing, etc., are much larger than in several years past, but the cattle exhibit is not as large as usual. This is true this year at nearly all New England fairs, because of numerous restrictions placed on cattle.

The canning, fancy work and flower exhibits are, as usual, on display in the large exhibition hall. Near the front entrance are exhibits by dealers and merchants. They include the Culley Hardware Co., of Westerly, featuring the Philgas service. They are showing a gas stove and a heater.

There is also a Philgas display by E. F. Clay of Stonington, who is showing a gas stove and heater. The Pucol Electric shop, of Westerly, is showing the General Electric radio and also electric washing machines. J. Raymond Dunham, of Stonington, has a Silent Glow display at the hall.

Tent For 4-H Clubs

Under a large tent is an extremely interesting 4-H club display in which are entered exhibits by 4-H club members from various sections of the county. Randolph W. Whaples, county club leader, and Miss Grover, of the New London County Farm bureau, are in charge of the exhibits. In the poultry department there are 130 birds, White Rocks, Barred Rocks, R. I. Reds and Leghorns. For the best pen Harold Helmboldt of Lisbon won first prize, a cup. For the best cockerel, Eugene Frank of Montville, won the first prize, a medal. His entry is a white leghorn. He also won the prize medal for the best pullet, a R. I. Red. The cup won by Harold Helmboldt is the one offered by the Tioga Grain Co Eugene Frank won the Campbell cup offered for one year to the boy or girl showing the largest and best exhibit of poultry at the fair. The cup must be won three times before it becomes the permanent property of the holder. Donald Chappel of Stonington won the cup last year and the year before.

The 4-H club members are showing 32 sheep and Louis Thorp of North Stonington has charge of the exhibit. The sheep exhibitors include Gilbert Hagen, Ledyard; George Clarke, Ledyard; Louis Thorp, North Stonington; Richard Palmer, North Stonington; Birdsey Palmer, Jr., North Stonington; Clinton Arzanemski, North Stonington; Harold Gray, North Stonington.

The Busybirds Poultry club has a garden club display as have also the Pendleton Hill Wide Awakes. Individual garden displays have been entered by Kenyon Wilcox, of Norwich Town, Merl Ellas, North Stonington. An exhibit of 25 varieties of flowers is shown by William Wilcox and Stewart and Beatrice Babcock, of Norwich, are showing honey. Raymond and Wilton Thorp have a dairy exhibit.

Clothing Exhibits

In the clothing exhibit are displays by the Nimble Workers of North Franklin, the Luckies of North Stonington, the Moses Six club of North Franklin and the Busy Girls club of North Franklin. There are individual clothing exhibits by Mary Idzkowski and Elizabeth Smith of North Franklin.

Clubs Making Exhibits

Clubs with canning exhibits are the Luckies of North Stonington, the Nutmeg Preservers of Griswold, Happy Maids of Ledyard and the Duwell Cooking club of Preston. In the poster contest is a group of four made by the Smith School Better Bodies club of Franklin. There are several individual posters by the Groton Heights Health club members. There are 335 jars of canned goods on display.

The midway is larger and more lively than ever. There is the familiar merry-go-round, the tin-type man, the man who guesses your weight or returns your money if he doesn't guess right, fortune tellers, blanket, candy and novelty stands, soft drink emporiums, a lunch stand, etc

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

A double feature bill which is one of the best ever presented at the Palace theatre will be shown for three days starting tomorrow. The program combines "The Czar of Broadway," a thrilling crook picture with a comedy, "Dough Boys" which stars Buster Keaton.

One of the most amazing revelations of the power of underworld politics is made in "The Czar of Broadway," which stars John Wray, Betty Compson, John Harron and many others. The clever maneuvers of the underworld characters in their attempts to run the governments of our cities is something which will make everyone gasp. The thrilling situations which confront a young newspaper man who is trying to get the "lowdown" on the underworld add greatly to the entertainment of the production.

With the influx of war books and pictures of late is rather a relief to find something that is a bit different although it is along the same line. "Dough Boys" in which Buster Keaton is starred is the story of a millionaire's son who is trying to get himself made into a soldier. He turns every tragic situation into one of fun and even while a big attack is being held he is serenely unconscious of it and displays no alarm and no fear.

While the film is just as elaborate as any of the serious war pictures it is so cleverly interspersed with jokes it almost pokes fun at every war thrill. There is a pleasant love theme running through the story too and Sally Eilers is the girl who plays the part of Mary, a war entertainer at the front. Cliff Edwards also has an important part but as usual he does his stuff on his ukulele.

"Big Boy". Al Jolson's latest picture will be shown at the Palace for the last times today. Jolson sings many hits and performs in his usual excellent way.

Norwich Produce Market

Prospects for all crops except hay and tobacco are greater than average according to the joint report by the United States and Connecticut departments of agriculture. Connecticut potatoes show a slight improvement in probable yield over a month ago and the forecast is now placed at 2,320,000 bushels. This compares with 2,030,000 harvested in 1929 and 1,998,000 bushels for the five year average. Production for the three southern New England states is expected to exceed that of a year ago; for the three northern states it is likely to be less. The Main crop is now forecast at 41,360,000 bushels, or about 16 per cent. below the record 1929 crop.

Total apple prospects are placed at 1,804,000 bushels, or approximately double what they were last year. All the important varieties show prospects of heavier production than last year. The Baldwin crop is expected to be the largest since 1926, while McIntosh may exceed the past two years. All the New England states except Maine and Vermont show larger production totals this year than were harvested in 1929.

BLUE GRASS NOW RAISED ON OHIO PASTURE LANDS

LONDON, Ohio —(P)— Kentucky's almost exclusive claim to blue grass is being menaced by other mid-west states—notably Ohio.

Pasture lands in Ohio are producing large quantities of the valuable seed and other states, including Missouri, Iowa and Nebraska, have "cut in" on an industry that once was Kentucky's own.

Increasing necessity for mid-west farmers to turn every item of farm production into cash is believed responsible for the practice of harvesting blue grass seed. Average yields in Kentucky are 10 bushels an acre, while Ohio fields produce from three to 16 bushels.

Irish Egg Production Jumps.

DUBLIN —(P)— Fifteen years ago the average Irish hen laid 55 eggs a year. Now the average is 140 and reached 200 in commercial flocks.

The silent fisherman is the most successful. Girls should remember this when angling for husbands.

POETRY

The Acorn and The Pumpkin
(From the fable of La Fontaine)

What God does is well done. I need not Questioning the wide world round to prove it so:
Suffice it to adduce the Pumpkin
Which so perplexed the pensive Bumpkin.
Observing on his morning walk
The big fruit rolling from its tiny stalk,
"What was its Maker thinking of?" said he.
"Had He no eye for what was proper?
The place for hanging such a whopper
Was one of yonder oaks—like fruit, like tree.
'Tis pity, Lumpkin, you weren't there
When He whom Parson lectures you about
Was thinking His arrangements out—
The world would be a better place, 'tis clear.
An Acorn, now, no bigger than my thumbkin,
Would be the very thing for here.
God made a mess of it, I fear!
The more I look, the more it seems to Lumpkin
That there has been a sad mistake . . .
But hold!" thought he, "you shouldn't go so deep:
That brain of yours will keep us wide awake."
Thereafter beneath an oak he went to sleep:
An acorn dropt, and hit him on the nose.
Waking, he put his hand up, sore afeared,
And found the midget sticking in his beard.
"Hullo," he cried, "I'm bleeding! Well, that shows!
Where should I be if this had been a Pumpkin?
God would not have it so, and He was right—
I now completely see His point."
And home he went in high delight,
His world no longer out of joint.

—Edward Marsh, in London Mercury.

MACHINERY FROM NORWICH MILL CROWDS OUT N. LONDON THREAD DEPT.

(Special to the Bulletin)

The principal reason for the transfer was said to be to permit more room for the installation of weaving machinery, which was recently brought to the New London mill from the company's mill at Norwich.

Perkins, 120 Second street, Medford, Mass., was arrested this afternoon by Patrolman William Riordan, charged with violation of the city's traffic laws, blocking traffic at Main and Masonic streets, and parking overtime. Perkins, however, was released with a warning to heed the traffic rules in the future, after the arresting officer had requested that the autoist be released.

Joseph Spakowsky, of East Lyme, was arrested in that town this afternoon by State Police Officer John Smith, charged with breach of the peace and intoxication. He was brought to New London and locked up for tonight and tomorrow will be presented in the Montville justice court.

WM. TAYLOR'S CAR UPSETS NEAR GALLOWS LANE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 16—William Taylor, Waterford, was injured this afternoon when the automobile he was driving overturned, the driver sustaining lacerations of the face and knee. He is now a patient at Lawrence-Memorial hospital. Taylor was driving on the New London-Norwich highway and on his way to his home. When near Gallows lane, from some unexplained cause, he lost control of the steering wheel, the auto skidding and finally overturning. Taylor was rescued from beneath the machine by a passing autoist, who took him to the hospital. The New London police were informed of the accident and Motorcycle Officer August Ray had the car removed from the highway where it had been obstructing traffic.

Scandalizing Minors

William Lewis, submarine base sailor and Mrs. Margaret Cowles, Waterford, were in Waterford town court yesterday charged with adultery. The case was continued a week in order that a more complete investigation may be made. Lewis and the woman were arrested at the Cowles residence Saturday night by State Police Officer William Eling MacKenzie, after complaint had been made because of the conduct of the man and woman, also because of children being permitted to be in the house.

FUNERAL

William H. Wordell

The funeral of William H. Wordell, former proprietor of Wordell's restaurant at Ocean Beach, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at 48 Hempstead street. The services were conducted by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth, pastor of the First Church of Christ and were attended by a large assemblage, including patrons of the restaurant for many years and residents at Ocean Beach. The bearers were David B. Clark, Samuel M. Prentis and Arthur Greenleaf, the last named of Groton, and three members of Niagara Engine company, of which organization Mr. Wordell had been a member for many years. Burial was in a lot recently purchased by Mr. Wordell in Cedar Grove cemetery.

Threw Stone Through Windshield

Alex Hornich, of this city, was arrested last night by State Police Officer Arthur Johnson, charged with breach of the peace. He furnished a surety on his bond of $500 and will be presented in Groton town court next Monday. Hornich was in Groton last Sunday and had been drinking. While walking along Poquonoc road and near the mill of the Max Pollock company, an automobile in which were several occupants, approached. For some strange reason, Hornich seized a stone and as the auto was passing hurled the missle through the windshield. Two of the passengers were injured. Hornich succeeded in making his escape, but yesterday his identity was revealed resulting in his arrest.

An automobile driven by Paul Calick, Brooklyn, N. Y., and a car owned by Lieut F. Schwab, U. S. S. Oglala, stationed at this port, but whose home is in Brooklyn, and in which car were the driver, David Herson and Mrs. Schwab and the latter's daughter, Hazel, collided yesterday afternoon between the Golden Spur and East Lyme. Both automobiles were damaged and Calick sustained a lacerated lip, while Mrs. Schwab received lacerations of the left eye and left hand, while the daughter also received slight cuts. Calick and Mrs. Schwab and her daughter were brought to New London and taken to Lawrence-Memorial hospital. Calick will be arrested during the week on a charge of reckless driving and will be presented in the East Lyme justice court. Calick drove from a side road to the Boston Post road and in making a turn operated the car to the opposite side of the highway with the result that it crashed head-on with the other automobile, which was about to pass the intersection.

Gene Tunney Passes Through

Gene Tunney, former heavyweight champion of the world, who won the title by defeating Jack Dempsey, was a visitor in this city for a brief time today. The ex-champion arrived in port on a power boat and after disembarking at the municipal pier, went to the union station. There he boarded a New York-bound train, presumably destined for Greenwich, where Tunney spends his summers since his marriage with Polly Lauder, whose parents reside there.

Angela Matthews, of Hartford; Edward Sullivan, 28 Eighth street; Harry Arnhold, Waterford; Mrs. Charles Kaufman and infant daughter, 276 Montauk avenue; Iva Evanson, yacht Alcone; Milton Wallace, Mystic; Elias Green, 4 Bishop terrace, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

Joseph W. Bernard, of New Haven, arrested in East Lyme yesterday by State Police Officer William MacKenize charged with reckless driving will be tried in Waterford town court Monday next.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the return of the drivers' licenses of Theodore Smith, submarine base, and Estelle Harvey, 76 Shaw street.

Stole Sailor's Handbag

J. A. Allain, a sailor, stationed on the U. S. S. Camden, made complaint to the police last night that a handbag containing a pea coat, underwear and navy papers, had been stolen from him. Allain said that he left the bag on the platform of the Union station while absent but a short time, but that was long enough to permit a thief to steal his property.

A frieght car of the New Haven railroad was broken into last night and some of its contents stolen. The car was on the lumber siding of the Raymond & Alexander company in the Fort Neck yard and two men, apparently Italians, were seen to go to the car, break the seal and remove such of its contents as they could carry. The men got away before the railroad and New London police were informed of the theft.

Patrolman Joseph Sullivan, in making his rounds last night discovered the entrance to the Nutmeg Beverage company, 23 Hamilton street, unlocked. The officer secured the building for the remainder of the night.

Wives Get Husbands in Court

But a solitary case occupied the attention of the police court today and strange as it may seem the man accused was not charged with intoxication. Maltino A. Macklin, 11 Harrison street, a sailor, was charged with breach of the peace upon complaint of Isaac Baton, another sailor. Macklin was found guilty. Macklin and Baton, who are Negroes, are married and are neighbors. When Macklin returned to his home last evening his wife informed him that Baton's wife had abused her. Macklin went to the Baton home and a row was the result. Baton claimed that Macklin had attacked and beat him, but there was no evidence in possession of the prosecutor to warrant a conviction, so the court found Macklin not guilty.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Hillcrest Theatre

Bringing one of the most noted of stage dramas to the speaking screen with Constance Bennett and Lew Ayres in the leading roles, "Common Clay," Victor Fleming's first production for Fox movietone, is going to attract unusual interest at the gala reopening of the Hillcrest theatre in Taftville. Mr. Schwartz, who, for ten years has been giving the people of Taftville and its surroundings the best of silent pictures, has just finished the installation of the latest type Western Electric Sound system at the Hillcrest, which means that from now on, the Hillcrest screen speaks!

The story revolves around the fall and rehabilitation of a fun-loving girl. Told in a convincingly dramatic manner and with a vivid background of modern social life, "Common Clay" is one of the most significant offerings of the season.

Added talking features include Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy in their latest comedy riot, "Barbed Wire," "Flip the Frog," Pathe Sound News and a special novelty attraction.

Our policy will be two matinees Saturday and Sunday at 2 p. m.

Broadway Theatre

Elsie Ferguson makes her return to the screen in her first talking picture role in "Scarlet Pages," the First National and Vitaphone drama which opens at Warner's Broadway today.

A few years ago, Miss Ferguson was one of the leading actresses of silent films. During the past several years, she has been a prominent footlight star both in New York and other leading theatrical centers.

In "Scarlet Pages" Elsie Ferguson enacts a brilliant woman lawyer who takes the case of a girl charged with the murder of the man she believes to be her father. One of the most sensational screen trials is filmed and recorded in this dramatic story of a woman who sacrifices her career to save her daughter from disgrace.

Marian Nixon enacts the girl while the all star cast includes Grant Withers, John Halliday, Neely Edwards, DeWitt Jennings and others. Ray Enright directed "Scarlet Pages" which is based on the successful stage play by Samuel Shipman and John B. Hymer.

SOME burners wear out more quickly than others. It will pay you to find out why. Some burners have better servicing facilities than others do. Find out about this, too.

The truth is, no burner can run indefinitely without some adjustments. After some years, you may even have to replace minor parts. Lasting satisfaction depends on the character of the burner you buy and what servicing is available after you've bought it.

We built this burner to go longest without attention, to require the fewest possible replacements, to cause you the least bother and outlay of money. And the Flexible Flame has proved that it has these advantages. It's sturdily built. Every bit of its mechanism is away from destructive heat. There are very few moving parts to wear out.

But when it does need a little attention, you're sure to get it, for it is installed only by the most reliable and experienced dealers in each community, whose expert service is always available. This, together with the fact that the burner is backed by an institution of the size and permanence of the Gilbert & Barker Manufacturing Company, insures that your investment in a Flexible Flame Oil Burner will provide a permanent source of comfortable home heat.

LEGION DELEGATION AT FUNERAL OF JOHN J. WHITE

The funeral of John J. White was held Tuesday morning at 8:30 from his home, 156 West Town street. In the Sacred Heart church at nine o'clock, the pastor, Rev. Edward J. Quinn, sang the high mass of requiem. There was a very large attendance of relatives, friends and neighbors.

For the processional the organist, Mrs. William A. Murphy played Chopin's funeral march. At the offertory, Miss Mary Buckley sang De Profundis, and following the final absolution by Father Quinn, she sang Jesus Lover of My Soul. As the body was borne from the church, the choir sang Lead Kindly Light. During the mass, Rev. John J. Reilly of St. Patrick's church was seated in the sanctuary. The flowers were exceptionally beautiful. The bearers were John, Harry, Edward, Richard and Charles Bannister of Wakefield, R. I., cousins of Mr. White, and William McGrath. Burial was in the family plot in St. Mary's cemetery, where the committal prayers were read by Rev. Father Quinn with responses by Rev. Father Reilly.

The J. J. Lyons Co., was in charge of the funeral arrangements. Attending the funeral was a delegation from the American Legion, including P. J. McMahon, Charles Colt, Harry F. Powers, C. E. Whitaker, Imbert Fellows, Dr. T. F. O'Neil, and E. F. Farnham.

Mr. White, who had been confined to his bed for several months previous to his death, was able and capable in many lines, well informed, a most engaging and companionable friend. His death has especially saddened his associates in the Legion post.

NORWICH BROADCAST IS RECEIVED IN HONOLULU

In a letter to Mayor Lee Roy Robbins from C. H. Case, Honolulu, the latter expresses his pleasure in receiving a copy of the Norwich broadcast. The letter follows:

Sept. 4, 1930.

Mr. Lee Roy Robbins,
Norwich, Conn.

Dear Mr. Robbins:

I have just read with the greatest interest the broadcast souvenir of "Norwich the Rose of New England," which you kindly sent to my son Dr. Lloyd E. Case. So much did these interesting things about Norwich appeal to me that I would very much like to have a copy for my own, that I may read it whenever inclined. For fifty years I lived in Norwich Town and Bean Hill, and every part of the dear old home town is enshrined in my affections. All this is enhanced by being five thousand miles away from the old scenes. If it is not asking too much I would like a copy sent to my daughter, whose address is—Mrs. Charles Tyler, Makawao, Maui, T. H.

Dr. Lloyd Case is at present in California where he has been attending the veterinary convention. I know he will be pleased with your kind remembrance of him in sending the "Souvenir."

From a lover of your home town,
C. H. CASE.

Illustrated booklets of the Norwich broadcast are still available at the office of the Bulletin-Record at 25 cents per copy or 30 cents by mail.

TWO TRIALS TODAY IN SUPERIOR COURT; NOLLE IN CASE OF NORWICH DOCTOR

Two trials are set down for this session of the criminal term of the superior court in New London this (Wednesday) afternoon, these being in cases of two of the accused who pleaded not guilty Tuesday afternoon on the opening day of court. They both elected to be tried by the court so that Judge Christopher L. Avery will sit at their trials.

The two to be tried are Thomas C. Smith of New London accused of theft of $85 from Mrs. George H. Chapman on June 25, 1930. Smith found the money in a pocketbook in the street, it is claimed, and did not return it to her although her name was in the pocketbook.

The other trial is in the case of Theodore Schultz of Norwich, who pleaded not guilty to the charge of transporting illegally two gallons of alcohol in a motor car on May 23, 1930. He is defended by Attorney Thomas M. Shields.

These trials are to follow the morning session of court in which the grand jury is to be in attendance on the Stanley Smith Bogue murder case in Mystic.

Nolle For Dr. Casey

In the Tuesday afternoon session of court, State Attorney Arthur M. Brown moved a nolle in the case of Dr. William L. Casey of Norwich and Edward Joseph Frechette, against whom a manslaughter charge had been made because of the death of the latter's wife through an alleged illegal operation.

In recommending the nolle, State Attorney Brown said that the case had been very carefully investigated and there was a very grave doubt in his own mind whether Dr. Casey ever performed this operation. The state attorney said that he didn't want to be in the position of trying to convince the court beyond a reasonable doubt, when he had such a grave doubt in his own mind.

Judge Avery directed that the nolle be entered in both cases. Attorney Thomas M. Shields appeared for Dr. Casey.

Other cases in the afternoon were disposed of as follows:

George Francis of Groton, who is blind, pleaded not guilty and elected to be tried by jury on the charge of statutory rape, April 13, 1926, in Groton, upon Hilda G. Olsen alias Hilda Francis, aged 15. E. W. Perkins is his attorney and he is to be tried next Tuesday.

A nolle was entered in the case of Harry Gidley and Mary McGovern of Griswold, on an adultery charge. The case was continued from the previous session of court and the nolle was recommended by the state attorney.

In the case of Joseph Martin and John F. Ryan, accused of attempt to steal from the person as pickpockets in New London, Martin, who is out on bail, was not in court and his counsel was given a day to produce him or the bond will be called.

Thomas Rudd, Hughie Devlin and Tony Cristian, three New London young men, pleaded guilty to theft of $25 from the person of Charles R. LaFrance on Aug. 5, 1930. Rudd was given a jail sentence of six months and the other two were also given jail sentences of similar length, but suspended, and the two are in charge of the probation officer.

Sergt. Smith Case Goes Over

On recommendation of State Attorney Brown continuance to the next term of court was made in the case of Sergt. Nelson Smith of the New London police department, on a manslaughter charge of shooting and killing Gordon Simms, whom he was trying to arrest. The widow of Simms has brought a civil suit against Smith and the state attorney said he thought the criminal suit ought not to be taken up till the civil suit was out of the way.

Pajama Party Racket

James Wilson, colored, a hotel employe in Groton, pleaded guilty to simple assault and was fined $100 and costs. The charge against him on the docket was aggravated assault but State Attorney Brown explained that he had allowed this to be changed to simple assault. He said that Wilson had a good previous record but he attended a pajama party on the night of Aug. 26, 1930, in New London, where there was a bowl of punch and during the evening a general melee ensued in which Leon Coakley was cut in the arm, breast and shoulder. Coakley said Wilson did it but no witnesses had been found who saw any pocketknife or would admit seeing any cutting done.

The case of H. Wiener of Cambridge, Mass., accused of obtaining money by false pretenses from Carrie M. B. Dennison of Groton through sale of alleged worthless stock, was continued to the next term of court. The state attorney said he had a letter from a doctor which showed that Wiener was not able to be here and indeed might not be alive by the time the January term was reached. The amount involved is about $6,200.

September Session Opens

When the court session opened Tuesday morning with Judge C. L. Avery on the bench, prayer was offered by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth of New London. State Attorney Arthur M. Brown was in charge of the prosecution, Edwin A. Perkins, acting public defender, appeared for those of the accused who did not have counsel and Clerk John H. Walker read the charges when the accused were put to plea. There was a large attendance of spectators, many standing where they were allowed to in the aisles during the morning and afternoon.

Morning Session

In the morning session of court, disposition of cases was made as follows:

State Prison Sentence

Konrad Bensuk of Griswold, charged with arson in setting fire to the house of John Dziedzic, May 16, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to not less than one year nor more than two years in state prison. He was arrested by the Jewett City police.

Charles McLosky of Norwich charged with statutory burglary in breaking into the Norwich Inn, July 5, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to six months in jail. He was represented by Attorney V. P. A. Quinn of Norwich.

For Motor Vehicle Theft

Howard Robins of Stonington, charged with theft of a motor vehicle owned by Paul Rosen of Stonington, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to the state reformatory at Cheshire. He was arrested by State Troopers Arthur Whitmarsh and was represented in court by Public Defender Edmund W. Perkins of Norwich, who represented all other defendants who did not have attorneys.

Edward T. Burdick of North Stonington pleaded guilty to the charge of assault with intent to abuse a minor female and was given a suspended jail sentence of six months and placed on probation for one year.

Judgment was suspended in the case of Eva Clark Fuller of Waterford, charged with adultery.

John Terella of Colchester pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing an automobile and was given a suspended sentence of six months in jail and placed on probation for one year.

State Prison for Burglary

Charles Whalen of Salem pleaded guilty to three counts alleging burglary and statutory burglary and was sentenced to from one to two years in state prison on each count, the sentences to run concurrently. Whalen was arrested by State Trooper John Smith for robbing the house of Lebar and Henry Adams in Salem July 31, the home of Fred C. Rogers of Montville, and breaking into the house of Clarice Melvin of Preston Aug. 1.

Frank Andrews of Stonington pleaded guilty to a charge of statutory burglary and was sentenced to the state reformatory at Cheshire. He was arrested by State Trooper Eric Swanson for breaking and entering the boat Elizabeth Ann in the Stonington harbor.

MAKES COLLUSION CLAIM IN SUIT FOR COMMISSION

Claiming that he is entitled to a commission for a real estate deal and that collusion existed between the defendants to defraud him of his commission, John E. Curry of this city has brought suit for $500 damages against Francis D. Donohue, Michael Levin and Ralph DiVito of this city, according to papers served by Constable Meyer Blumenthal and returnable the first Tuesday of October before the court of common pleas.

From about Dec. 25, 1929, to Feb. 24, 1930, according to his claim, Curry rendered services to the defendant, Michael Levin, at his request, as broker in the sale for the defendant, Levin, of real estate in Norwich, 202-204 Franklin street, Norwich, to the amount of $10,000.

Levin, according to the complaint, promised to pay Curry the customary real estate commission of $300, but has not paid the same.

In February, 1930, the defendants, Francis D. Donohue, Michael Levin and Ralph DiVito, conspired and agreed together to cheat and defraud Curry of his commission, the papers allege. In pursuance of their agreement, Francis D. Donohue pretends to have personally purchased the real estate from Michael Levin and to have personally sold the same to Ralph DiVito, in which pretension the defendants, Levin and DiVito, support the said F. D. Donohue, the papers allege.

In fact and truth, Donohue did not purchase the real estate for himself, according to Curry's claim, but sold the same as broker for the defendant, Michael Levin, to Ralph DiVito, who was the true and bona fide purchaser of the real estate, all for the purpose of cheating and defrauding the plaintiff, Curry, of his commission, it is alleged.

BOY RIDING BICYCLE COLLIDES WITH POLE

While riding a bicycle on West Thames street, near Brown street, Tuesday afternoon about 4:30 o'clock, Gustave Berkman, 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. August Berkman of 58 Dunham street, lost control of the wheel which ran into a pole. He was knocked off the wheel and knocked out.

While visiting at the home of her son, Terrence Hogan, No. 8 Fountain street, Mrs. Anne Hogan, 72, of Waterbury, died suddenly Tuesday morning about 8:30 o'clock. TEAM NO. 2 WINS IN BUILDING LOAN CONTEST

At the regular monthly meeting of the board of management of the Norwich Building and Loan association held Tuesday evening in the chamber of commerce rooms, General Chairman Herman Steiner reported that in the contest in the sale of shares in the new series, Team No. 2, under Capt. J. F. Fleming, was the winner over Team No. 1, under Capt. Tongren, by the final score of 298 to 281 points.

Under the terms of the contest, the prize for the winning team will be a dinner to be furnished by the losers. On account of the recent accident which happened to Hermon J. Gibbs, who has been an active and helpful member of the board, the dinner has been postponed in the hope that when it is held Mr. Gibbs may have recovered from his injury and be able to attend.

At the meeting, notice was given that R. Holtby Myers, president of the United States Building and Loan league, will be present at a dinner given by the Bridgeport city league at the Remington Arms club there at 6:30 p. m. Friday, Sept. 26, to which members of the local association are invited.

SAILOR GOT AWAY BY HITCH-HIKING TO HARTFORD

Stephen Kubrosky, 20, the submarine base sailor, who accidentally shot and killed Miss Marie Rosabelle Woods, on Saturday, Sept. 6, at her home at 277 Laurel Hill avenue, while target shooting with a rifle, has been in Hartford, Boston and New York since the shooting. This is according to what he told Coroner E. G. McKay who saw the sailor Tuesday afternoon at the submarine base, where the man had given himself up in the morning after being missing ever since the shooting.

Kubrosky told the coroner that he was beside himself after the shooting and his only idea was to get away. When he fled from the Woods home, he got to Hartford by hitch-hiking and from there to Boston and then to New York. Most of the time he has been in New York, but he has not been to his home which is in Patterson, N. J.

The coroner understood that Kubrosky came back and gave himself up at the submarine base because he got that advice from one of his sailor friends whom he met in New York.

According to Kubrosky, he was not aiming at the Woods girl when the rifle was discharged, but was holding the gun across his arm when it accidentally went off.

The sailor gave himself up about 10 o'clock Tuesday morning. He was at once placed in the brig at the submarine base, as he was AWOL, having overstayed the 48 hour leave on which he had been out at the time of the shooting. When he has served whatever sentence the navy authorities impose upon him it is expected that he will be turned over to the Norwich authorities.

SHAMROCK V. CRIPPLED BY PARTING OF MAIN HALYARD FIVE MILES OUT ON COURSE

At the Time of the Mishap the Challenger Was Almost Bow to Bow With the Enterprise—The Lipton Boat Had Won the Starting Advantage From the Enterprise — Defender Continued Over the Course—The Fourth and Possibly Deciding Race Will Be Sailed Today.

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 17—(AP)—The crowning touch to the ill-fated challenge of Shamrock V., for the America's cup was applied today when her main halyard suddenly parted, the huge mainsail slowly collapsing, and the emerald-green sloop was abruptly eliminated from the third race, disabled just when she had bouyed the lingering hopes of her backers and given Eenterprise a real sail for the first time.

Out into a choppy sea, that sparkled in the sunlight, with a good 15-knot breeze, kicking up the white caps, Shamrock had sailed forth with desperate determination on every move and line. Grimly the challenger fought for and won the starting advantage from Harold S. Vanderbilt's slim white defender for the first time. Heeling over as her nose smashed into the waves and straining every sail into the wind Shamrock was making a gallant come-back and a courageous fight before yielding the advantage skillfully won at the outset.

They had covered approximately five miles on the 15-mile windward heat of today's 30-mile course and were racing bow to bow, no more than 150 yards between them, on the starboard tack, when overlookers suddenly had their gaze riveted to a fluttering movement of sail at the top of the 168-foot mast. Slowly at first, then with a billowing rush that must have been heart-breaking to those on board, the huge expanse of canvass came tumbling down to the deck and water's edge.

It was like the last curtain falling upon a stage scene poignant with dramatic tragedy. Shamrock was out of the running and the long quest of Sir Thomas Lipton was all but at an end for 1930, if not for all time.

All alone on the course, soon out of sight of her crestfallen rival and escorted by few boats outside of the big coast guard patrol, Enterprise completed the remaining 25 miles of the windward-leeward course to score her third consecutive victory, in hollow style.

All Enterprise now needs is one more triumph to clinch the series and keep the America's cup in the custody of the New York Yacht club for another indefinite span of time.

The fourth and possibly deciding race will be sailed tomorrow if the weather holds favorably, for Shamrock came in for repairs and it was announced she would be ready to go out again, without taking any extra time.

The damage to the halyard required only about two hours to repair, late today, after the challenger had been towed back to her anchorage in Brenton cove.

"It was tough luck," said Col. Duncan, Lipton's racing representative, "but we will be ready to sail again tomorrow."

Today's sail-over was the first since the opening race of the 1920 series, when the American defender, Resolute parted her throat halyard and gave Shamrock IV., an uncontested victory.

The accident to Shamrock V., added another chapter to the story of Lipton's yachting misfortunes in pursuit of the "old mug". The first of her line, Shamrock I, lost the second race of the series of 1899 with Columbia by having her top mast carried away in a stiff blow

In 1903, Shamrock III remained intact, but had the ill-luck to get off the course and failed to finish in losing the third and deciding race of the series against Resolute.

For the last of the Shamrocks, today's accident was the climax in her ill-starred venture. Twice she had been outmaneuvered and badly beaten on the start. Twice she had shifted her ballast, before and after the disastrous rout of the second race, in an effort to strike a winning turn.

When she went to the starting line, today, with the briskest breeze that has yet blown for the races, the challenger had behind her the memory of her disappointing exhibitions, the stories of dissension among the afterguard and even the talk of a switch in skippers.

Capt. Ernest (Ted) Heard, however, was again at the helm and Shamrock, out to redeem herself if any means could be found, was off at a brisk start on the dot of time, 10:40 a. m. (E. S. T.). She had skillfully placed herself in starting position so close to the line that Vanderbilt, coming down hard with Enterprise, was forced to veer off. Shamrock, in blocking her rival, got the weather berth for the first time and was several lengths in front as they went off on the starboard tack in a 15-knot breeze. She crossed the line nine seconds after the whistle and had about a 35-second jump on Enterprise.

This was exactly the sort of advantage Vanderbilt gained over Heard in two previous races and the turning of tables by the British sloop furnished an unexpected thrill as well as an immediate duel into the wind. Enterprise went on the port tack but Shamrock alertly followed suit, holding tightly to the advantage gained at the outset.

Soon, however, Enterprise began to shake herself loose and gain in spite of the handicap of being partially blanketed, there was plenty of breeze to go around. The defender footed so fast, spraying her way through choppy sea, that Shamrock decided to come about again, on the starboard tack, rather than wait for Enterprise to make the next move.

This looked like an error in judgment on the part of Shamrock, even though she was somewhat forced into making it, for it enabled Enterprise to gain the weather berth for the first time with a bit of fast work. It was at this juncture, 46 minutes after the start with little to choose between them, that Shamrock's mainsail came down, turning what looked like an exciting race into an empty triumph for Enterprise.

Perhaps the defender would have won the race anyway. She was considered the better boat in today's brand of weather, and Vanderbilt, who had done masterly work in offsetting his reversal at the start, seemed almost certain to take full command of the race with spinnakers set for the homeward run.

Enterprise, as a matter of fact, had perhaps an advantage of two minutes, so far as could be determined at the time of the disabling of Shamrock. At least this was the estimate of the challenger's designer, Charles E. Nicholson.

Some question arose as to whether Enterprise would accept the victory, the suggestion being made that Vanderbilt would consider requesting that it be sailed over. Precedent was against such a gesture, however, particularly as there was no reason for penalizing Enterprise because of the development of a mechanical defect in her rival. Any doubt as to whether the race was official, as a matter of fact, was eliminated when Enterprise finished her solo run.

Enterprise had whatever satisfaction was to be gained from turning in the fastest race of the three run off so far. Her time of 3 hours 54 minutes 45 seconds was six minutes faster than in the second race, over a 30-mile triangular course. She reached the outer mark at 12:54:15, taking 2 hours 14 minutes 15 seconds for the first 15 miles. She sailed the last half of the course in one hour, 40 minutes, 30 seconds, finishing at 2:34:45 p. m.

PROCEEDINGS AT MEETING OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS

GENEVA, Switzerland, Sept. 17.—(AP)—With the naming of Frank B. Kellogg, former United States secretary of state to the world court, temporary disposal of the Briand European federation plan and election of new members to the council, the League of Nations today concluded its spectacular phase and turned to concrete treatment of the international questions in its six standing committees.

Under the presidency of Nicholas Politis of Greece, the third committee which deals with the paramount problem of disarmament, began today discussion of a proposal for giving financial assistance to attacked or menaced countries only outlining the procedure for treating this project for discouraging war.

In the election of Mr. Kellogg today the assembly congratulated itself on gaining for the international tribunal this co-author of the Paris peace treaty and eminent advocate of world peace. The delegates expressed warmly the belief the former secretary of state is a worthy successor to John Bassett Moore and Charles Evans Hughes and formed, with these two distinguished jurist, a substantial American contribution to this institution which aims at juridical settlement of disputes between nations.

GERMAN PEOPLE LEAVE POLITICS TO POLITICIANS

BERLIN, Sept. 17.—(AP)—The rank and file of German citizens today turned their back upon the problem of what sort of government Germany shall have and left politics to the politicians.

Although "politics as usual" remained the slogan of reichstag leaders and aspirants for such role the excitement of Sunday's election entirely subsided among the people.

Meanwhile the press continued to discuss various possibilities, among these a suggestion that the fascist party of Adolf Hitler and the followers of the Hugenberg banner effect a merger thereby becoming the largest reichstag party

According to parliamentary tradition they then could claim a reichstag presidency and also urged President Hindenburg to entrust to them the task of forming a new government.

WILLIAMS ABANDONS OCEAN FLIGHT PROJECT

ROOSEVELT FIELD, N. Y., Sept 17.—(AP)—A threatened congestion of the trans-Atlantic airways which bade fair to rival that of the early post-Lindbergh era abated today when one ocean flight project was abandoned and the status of another was made doubtful.

Roger Williams, who has piloted one plane to Rome and another to Bermuda and back without stopping, and Ted Lundgren, Hollywood aviator, gave up the idea of flying eastward around the world and started, before noon, for Los Angeles.

Just before they set out, Williams announced that he had a cablegram from Charles A. Levine, owner of the plane Columbia, saying he had cancelled the projected flight of that plane from Newfoundland to London.

Captain Errol Boyd, who had gotten as far as Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, in the Columbia, on his way to Harbor Grace, N. F., to hop for London, doubted that Levine had taken any such step and said he intended to proceed to Harbor Grace as soon as weather permitted.

Several weeks have elapsed, however, since Boyd and Lieutenant Harry Connor planned to set out from Montreal for Harbor Grace and London, and adverse atmospheric conditions over the North Atlantic have not diminished in the meantime.

OVERTIME DEMANDS OF LONGSHOREMEN GRANTED

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—(AP)—Overtime demands of the International Longshoremen's union were met at the conference of Deepwater Steamship lines today and it is expected the existing agreement between the union and the ship operators will be renewed for another year. The settlement affects 40,000 workers between Portland, Me., and Norfolk, Va.

The union asked a change in the interpretation of the overtime clause. Heretofore, when longshoremen turned out at 7 a. m. to unload a ship, they were paid for four hours overtime whether they worked that long or not. If, however, they started work at 6 o'clock they were paid only the amount of overtime they actually worked.

They demanded the agreement be interpreted to give the 6 o'clock starters the same benefit as those starting at seven. The employers acceded to their request.

The wage scale is 85 cents an hour and $1.30 for overtime. Checkers, who also are union members, receive $6.50 per day and the same overtime scale as the longshoremen.

N. H. ROAD ORDERS TEN ENGINES COSTING $2,000,000

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 17.—(AP)—An order for the construction of ten electric passenger locomotives has been placed by the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company with the General Electric company. They will be built at Erie, Pa., and will be ready for delivery about June 1931.

The locomotives, which will cost nearly $2,000,000, will be heavier than any passenger electric engines in service at present on the New Haven road. They will weigh 200 tons each, 135 tons of which will be on the drivers, and are designed to haul a train of 15 86-ton Pullman cars at maximum speed. Each engine will be equipped with six twin motors with a total average horsepower of 3600.

The engines will be used in passenger service in and out of Grand Central terminal and for hauling heavy trains in and out of Pennsylvania station, via the Hell Gate bridge route.

Andreon is charged with having killed his wife with a shotgun as she stood working in the kitchen of their home.

Bay State Is To Have Wet And Dry Contest

G. O. P. Nominees For Senator and Governor Dry—Opponents Are Wet.

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—(AP)—Massachusetts voters were assured tonight of a clear cut wet and dry fight along party lines in the November general election.

Republican voters, as a result of yesterday's state primary, had before them a ticket headed by a dry, William M. Butler, former U. S. senator and former chairman of the republican national committee, as their candidate for U. S. senator, with a wet, Marcus A. Coolidge, of Fitchburg, manufacturer, and former mayor, as his opponent.

For governor, the republicans had another dry, the present governor, Frank G. Allen, as a candidate for re-election with a wet, Joseph B. Ely, of Westfield, lined up against him on the democratic side.

Former Senator Butler won the republican senatorial nomination by defeating Eben S. Draper, of Hopedale, wealthy manufacturer, who ran as a wet, and Andrew J. "Bossy" Gillis, the "bad boy" mayor of Newburyport.

The vote, as tabulated tonight for 1642 out of the 1649 precincts in the state gave: Butler, 161,870; Draper, 153,688; Gillis, 22,481.

Coolidge won the democratic nomination from a field of four opponents with a margin of nearly 27,000 votes over Joseph F. O'Connell, former member of congress. Thomas C. O'Brien, former district attorney of Suffolk county, ran third, more than 9,500 behind. Gorver Governor Eugene N. Foss and Peter J. Joyce were the other contenders. The vote from 1642 precincts was: Coolidge, 81,707; O'Connell, 54,799; O'Brien, 45,212; Foss, 12,841; Joyce, 6,190.

In the gubernatorial contests, Gov. Allen swamped his only opponent, former Mayor John D. Devir, of Malden, with a vote in 1,642 precincts of 305,076 to Devir's 24,916.

The democratic fight for governor enlivened during the closing days of the campaign by a bitter factional fight precipitated by the efforts of Mayor James M. Curley of Boston, to induce voters to support John F. Fitzgerald, former mayor of this city, for the nomination after Fitzgerald had withdrawn because of ill health, was closer but Ely had a safe margin of 32,580 votes with seven precincts missing. Fitzgerald's name, on the ballot despite his withdrawal, drew 84,622 votes compared to Ely's, 117,202 John J. Cummings, of Boston, the other contestant in the three-cornered contest, received 12,770 votes.

FENN WITHDRAWS FROM CONGRESSIONAL CONTEST

HARTFORD, Sept. 17.—(AP)—Congressman E. Hart Fenn, who has served in the national house of representatives since 1921, today announced that he has withdrawn from the congressional contest in the first district, paving the way for the nomination of Col. Clarence W. Seymour, of West Hartford

Fenn said his decision to withdraw was due largely to the advice of his physician, Dr. Sterling Ruffin, of Washington, D. C., who examined him Thursday at Washington.

Following the recent caucuses at which delegates to the congressional convention were named, Col. Seymour claimed an overwhelming majority of delegates pledged to him.

The retiring congressman, who was chairman of the census committee, became seriously ill in the capital last winter and was under Dr. Ruffin's care throughout the spring. He recovered sufficiently to continue his congressional duties until the adjournment of congress.

With him out of the race, the nomination of Col. Seymour is believed certain. Mayor George A. Quigley, of New Britain, for whom the New Britain and Burlington delegates were pledged, has withdrawn and released his delegates. He was prepared to enter the contest only as a "dark horse" in the event there was a deadlock between Fenn and Seymour.

POISONED PILLS MAY HAVE KILLED THREE CHILDREN

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 17.—(AP)—The possibility poisonous pills may have killed three children and critically stricken four others of the same family, was suggested to sheriff's deputies today by Mrs. Robert Lowe, the mother. She and her husband told of pills found and eaten by the children.

Questioning of the couple began after their three eldest children became ill early today.

Captain Walter Hunter said Mrs. Lowe related some of her children had brought home a bottle of pills. She said she assumed they were harmless pellets of a kind commonly kept in homes for children suffering indigestion.

Betty, 5; Virginia, 8, and John 18 months, died Sunday night after an illness of a few hours. Lois, 7, taken ill simultaneously, continues in a critical condition at the General hospital.

Robert, 14; Frances, 11, and Geneva, 9, were rushed to the hospital today when they were stricken with similar symptoms.

Physicians at first attributed the illness to food poisoning.

U. S. Recognizes New South Americ[illegible]ovts

WASHI[illegible], Sept. 17.—(AP)—The United State[illegible]oday extended simultaneous recognition to the provisional governments of Argentina, Bolivia and Peru, all three recently established by revolutions.

Secretary Stimson, in announcing that this speedy recognition was actuated largely by the "present economic situation," said the action represented no new policy. A study of Latin American relations disclosed, however, that not since 1822 has any such blanket recognition been accorded. At that time five Latin American governments were recognized by act of congress.

"I have deemed it wise to act promptly in this matter," Secretary Stimson said, "in order that in the present economic situation our delay may not embarrass the people of those three friendly countries in re-establishing their normal intercourse with the rest of the world."

Recognition of the new Argentine regime came just ten days after revolutionary forces under General Jose Francisco Uriburu deposed the government of Hipolito Irigoyen, which admittedly had lacked cordiality toward the United States. It was less than a month behind the successful coup of Colonel Sanchez Cerro in Peru who overthrew the regime of Augusto Leguia, and a little more than two months after the removal of former President Hernando Siles in Bolivia.

Despite the newness of all three governments, however, Secretary Stimson affirmed the confidence of United States officials in their stability.

"Each of the present governments," he said, "has also made it clear that it is the intention to fulfill its international obligations and to hold in due course elections to regularize its status."

The formal resumption of normal diplomatic relations with all three governments will not take place until tomorrow. Secretary Stimson said he had directed Ambassador Robert Woods Bliss in Buenos Aires and Ambassador Fred M. Dearing in Lima to notify formally the Argentine and Peruvian governments at that time. Simultaneously, Edward Feely, new American minister to Bolivia, has been directed to present his letters of credence and thereafter continue normal relations.

INCREASED TARIFF IN EFFECT IN CANADA

OTTAWA, Sept. 17.—(AP)—The increased tariff schedules which went into effect today as a measure to relieve unemployment were attacked in the house of commons by W. L. MacKenzie King, opposition leader, who introduced an amendment declaring they "will not end unemployment."

MacKenzie King charged Premier R. B. Bennett with having "railroaded through" the tariff changes. He criticized the government for having submitted its new schedules without including the existing rates for purposes of comparison.

"In the opinion of this house," MacKenzie King's amendment said, "the tremendous increases in taxation will not end unemployment, but will inevitably increase the cost of living, and will also increase the cost of production in the primary industries."

A bill to raise the penalties for dumping goods in Canada was passed in the house this afternoon.

Adjournment of parliament on Saturday is generally expected. The $20,000,000 unemployment relief bill has passed the house and it was believed the tariff bill would be enacted in a day or two.

STATEMENT IN DEFENSE OF MRS. M'CORMICK IS BARRED

Senate Committee Investigating Campaign Expenditures Again Denies Plea of Republican Nominee For the U. S. Senate—Mrs. McCormick Had Charged the Committee's Refusal to Hear Her Attorney Was a Deliberate Attempt to Suppress Facts.

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—(AP)—The senate committee investigating campaign expenditures today denied for the last time a plea of Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom of Illinois that he be allowed to present a statement in defense of Ruth Hanna McCormick, republican nominee for the United States senate.

With this gesture the committee calculated to purge the remaining hearings of everything pertaining to charges of espionage, wire tapping and desk rifling and to continue strictly along the lines of its main inquiry. This policy was declared yesterday, though the reason advanced then for not hearing Carlstrom was that Senator Robert F. Wagner of New York was not present.

"Having read your statement," said a letter to Carlstrom signed by three members of the committee, "and learning therefrom that the proof you offer concerns actions of persons having no connection whatsoever, now or any other time, with this committee, or any of its employes, the committee deemed it unnecessary and irrevalent to the work it is directed to perform.

"We are prompted to stress as another reason for denying your request the fact that the statement attributed to you by the press as to past activities by the committee is false and misleading."

The signers of the letter were Chairman Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota, Senator C. C. Dill of Washington and Senator Wagner. Senator Roscoe Patterson of Missouri did not sign. He also withheld comment on the action of the committee yesterday.

Carlstrom's statement, released to the press, had charged employes of the committee tapped wires and performed other acts of espionage upon Mrs. McCormick, whose expenditures in the April primary are under investigation. The statement offered to prove the charges and said further that a direct connection between Chairman Nye and the alleged acts of espionage was established when the committee subpoenaed detectives whose names had been furnished by a man pretending to betray his trust.

The names, Carlstrom charged, were purchased by a David Groh from Kenneth Wilson, an operative for the W. C. Dannenberg Detective agency which was employed by Mrs. McCormick to shadow Nye.

Yesterday Mrs. McCormick charged the committee's refusal to hear Carlstrom was a deliberate attempt to suppress facts.

The espionage matter was mentioned again today by Barney Thompson, editor of the Rockford (Ill.) Republic, owned by Mrs. McCormick, when he took the witness stand.

Nye, Dill and Wagner were on their feet at once to reaffirm their declaration that the committee had never engaged in or countenanced such practices.

"Senator Nye has built up in the public mind a deplorable idea of this committee's work," retorted Thompson.

Nye replied: "Knowing that the record of this committee's hearings in every state will be presented in a complete transcription to the United States senate, I have no fear it will not be found this committee has leaned over backwards to be honorable, fair and decent in all its dealings."

Thompson was on the stand to explain Mrs. McCormick's connection with the paper he edits. He denied she purchased the paper for political reasons and said she took it over out of friendship for him when a merger threatened the life of the publication.

He said Mrs. McCormick refused to permit the paper to aid her campaign.

Senator Nye read a statement of his position and the position of the committee.

"We have recognized the fact that serious tales have been told representing this committee as engaged in wire tapping and spying on any and everyone connected with this campaign," he said. "We have devoted ourselves, both as a committee and individually and personally, to determine directly whether any employe of this committee, a representative of it or a representative of its agents has engaged in any wire tapping or espionage.

"This committee has never countenanced any such practices in the past and it certainly will not in the future."

Senator Nye said that Dave Groh, who, it was testified at previous hearings, had shadowed various persons, was not employed by the committee. He said, "Not one penny at the disposal of this committee or any individual on it, has been paid Mr. Groh for any such purposes as have been attributed to him by the press or the agents of Mrs. McCormick."

Tomorrow witnesses from down state will be heard in connection with Ruth Hanna McCormick's campaign, and the committee expects to end its Chicago hearing in the afternoon.

Mrs. McCormick tonight issued a statement reiterating her charge that agents of the committee have tapped wires and adding that her only conclusion is that the chairman of the committee was "afraid to hear" witnesses she said were ready to prove the charge.

WORK ON $165,000,000 BOULDER DAM STARTED YESTERDAY

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Sept. 17.—(AP)—Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, secretary of the interior, today formally inaugurated work on the $165,000,000 Boulder dam, and announced the Colorado river project would be known as the Hoover dam in honor of the president.

Announcement of a name to be attached to the huge engineering feat was made by Secretary Wilbur after he drove a spike of Nevada silver into a railroad tie. The railroad will be used to haul material to the dam site.

"I have the honor," he said, "to name this dam after a great engineer, who really started this greatest project of all time—the Hoover dam."

The ringing blows resounded in the desolate desert seven miles from here as the cabinet member expertly pinned down a 90-pound rail upon the 22-mile branch of the Union Pacific line.

Officials from six Colorado river basin states — Nevada, California, Utah, New Mexico and Wyoming—attended the ceremony.

By her action, Mrs. Black, it was explained, claims her statutory right under the Maryland law to an absolute one-third of the entire estate before deduction of the special bequests.

N. Y. AQUARIUM SUPPLIED WITH FRESH SEA WATER

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—(AP)—The municipal fishes at the aquarium frolicked today in fresh sea water imported from Cape Cod.

The freighter Frieda came in with 125,000 gallons of choice Atlantic ocean brine, the aquarium's annual supply, and pumped it through two fire hoses into an underground reservoir.

Bringing sea water from Cape Cod to New York has nothing in common with carrying coal to Newcastle, for it has been fifty years since the waters around New York have been clean enough for the city's fish to swim in.

Once a year a vessel goes up the New England coast and takes on a cargo of salt water from off Cape Cod and brings it to the aquarium, where after a thorough aeration, it is dispensed from a big subterranean tank to the fish tanks as it is needed.

TAX COMMISSIONER CLAIMS DISCREPANCIES, TOWN REPORT

(Special to The Bulletin).

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 17.—Discrepancies of several hundred thousand dollars appear in the report of the town of Windham for the fiscal year of 1929, according to a letter received by town officials from the state tax commissioner today.

The letter, bearing this startling information, was received by First Selectman William A. Buck and copies of it were forwarded by the commissioner to Town Treasurer Frank P. Fenton and Dr. George E. Wilcox, president of the Windham Taxpayers' Protective association.

The letter, which advises that the current debt is some five or six hundred thousand dollars in lieu of $173,500 as reported for the fiscal year, caused a tremendous stir of interest throughout the town. It follows:

Sept. 16, 1930.

Wm. A. Buck, First Selectman,
Town of Windham,
Willimantic, Conn.

Dear Sir:

You are aware, I presume, that the statutes require town clerks and town treasurers to report annually to the tax commissioner upon blank forms, showing detail of financial information pertaining to the respective towns of the state. I have had occasion recently to examine the printed report forwarded to me in the forepart of November, 1929, by Mr. Fenton, treasurer of the town of Windham. The reason for the printing and distribution of this report was to give accurate information to the citizens of Windham with respect to the financial affairs of the town for the fiscal year then just about ended.

On Page 8 of the report I find that the budget provided for $25,000 to pay "interest on notes." On Page 37, under the heading "Liabilities," there appears "current debt, $173,500." This could not be construed otherwise than to mean outstanding notes for which $25,000 was provided for interest. If the debt of the town were $173,500, at the rate of 6 per cent, the interest thereon would amount to $10,380 instead of $25,000. Inquiry into this subject elicited information that the current debt, in fact, amounts to some five or six hundred thousand dollars in lieu of $173,500 as reported.

I desire, and in fact insist, that reports made to this department shall be correct. Errors in reports, inadvertently made, appear with more or less frequency in the printed reports of towns, but no such glaring discrepancies have appeared in any other reports which have come to my attention as appear in the report from Windham in the items to which reference has just been made.

Since studying this subject, I have been able to obtain information which confirms my suspicion that the current debt amounted to several hundred thousand dollars in excess of that reported. It appears, therefore, that it was known to the selectmen when the budget was made that the interest item of $25,000 shown in the report was vastly in excess of the amount needed for payment of interest on the current debt as shown on Page 37 of the printed report. It appears to me that there is an amount of current debt which exceeded the amount reported by the treasurer by several hundred thousand dollars, and that this was known to the board of selectmen when they made provision in the budget for payment of interest on such debt.

In connection with this subject, opportunity is taken to say to you that I have no interest in the affairs of the town of Windham other than that which comes to me officially. The citizens of Windham have a different interest. They have an interest in seeing to it that the accounts of the town are properly kept and that when reports are made and published that accurate information is furnished to them through the town officials whom they select to manage the affairs of the town. Figures furnished to the citizens of any community which are misleading and incorrect, whether made so purposely or through inadvertence, should be immediately corrected, if not by the treasurer then by others who are in the management of the town's affairs. Thus, I write to you as first selectman of the town and suggest the advantage of immediately furnishing information to the public of the discrepancy in the printed report last published by the town of Windham.

I am taking the liberty of sending a copy of this communication to Mr. Fenton, town treasurer, and to the president of the Taxpayers' Protective association for such use as either of them may see fit to make of it, and you are privileged to use this letter as you may choose. It is presumed that if you have not the detail of information bearing upon this subject that, at your request, the certified public accountants who are auditing the accounts of the town will be able upon short notice, or within a few days, to furnish accurate information to you or to the Taxpayers' Protective association, or, in fact, to any citizen who may interest himself in it. If I am incorrect in my assumption that the report of the town, to which reference is made above, shows a substantial discrepancy as pointed out, please advise me at your earliest convenience. On an examination of the figures in the report and of the items to which reference is made, you will observe that no one without having the books in hand can determine the exact amount of the discrepancy. However, it is clear, not only from the report to which reference is made, but from information otherwise obtained, that a discrepancy of a substantial sum does in fact exist. For my information, please furnish to me the exact amount of the discrepancy in the item referred to as being on Page 37 of the report under the heading "liabilities," and designated as "current debt, $173,500."

The crime had been perpetrated early Monday morning. Mrs. Hollingsworth saw the thief's car and secured the registration numbers. At 2:30 o'clock Monday morning she notified County Sheriff Fred O. Vinton of Eagleville who secured assistance from the Stafford Springs state police barracks. A check-up on the registration numbers led the police to the home of Frank Gagnon, 49, and his son, Aime Gagnon, 24. In the house Martin was found and also about 50 Rhode Island Reds, only a dozen of the chickens being still alive, the others having been made ready for market.

BARRETT RECEIVES BROKEN SHOULDER IN CRASH

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 17—It developed today that John Barrett, operator of the big truck that was wrecked just before midnight Monday night at the corner of Winter and North Main streets, was more seriously injured than he or anyone who saw him immediately after the accident realised.

Barrett has a fractured shoulder and is otherwise considerably bruised and shaken. He said after the accident in which he was hurled out of the cab to the sidewalk that his shoulder pained a bit. However, he was about and active and aswered all questions that State Officer Henry Mayo asked hi mas to how the affair came to happen. Yesterday the shoulder became so troublesome that Barrett consulted a physician in Waterbury, the examination revealing the fracture.

In view of the nature of Barrett's injury his appearance in the Killingly town court to answer to a charge of reckless driving that was scheduled for today was continued until Sept. 24, when it is expected that he will be able to appear.

PUTNAM

POMFRET MILLIONAIRE HAS CHARGES AGAINST HIM DROPPED

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 17—City water department officials reporting to the prosecuting attorney of the city court that no damage whatever had been caused to city property when Charles Van Brunt Cushman's luxurious sport touring car struck a hydrant on Providence street, Sunday evening, for which he was arrested, clearing the young Pomfret millionaire of any responsibility growing out of the accident, it was announced this morning following a consultation of police, the prosecuting attorney and counsel for Mr. Cushman, which was held at the police station a few minutes preceding the hour set for Mr. Cushman's appearance in city court.

Mr. Cushman, widely known in circles of the elite, when arrested late Sunday evening by local police, was booked on a charge of a nature decidedly different from the one which city officials investigated in search of evidence. Placing such a charge against Mr. Cushman was made inadventently through a misunderstanding, it was explained today by his counsel, Attorney Irving H. Miron.

The town school board in session at its monthly meeting Tuesday evening in the law offices of Torrey and Geissler, approved a motion made to the effect that an evening session of classes in all public schools be held on some night during American Education week which will be observed throughout the nation during the week of November 10th. At a later date when tentative plans for the local observances are drawn the date on which school bells will ring at night, will be announced by officials of the town education department. As only matters of routine business were transacted, the meeting came to an adjournment at an early hour.

Republicans of the 28th senatorial district will hold their convention in this city on Monday, Sept. 22, it was announced today by Leon T. Wilson, chairman of the senatorial district committee. Delegates to the convention will assemble at the Putnam Inn at 11 o'clock (standard time) and during the convention, will place in nomination a candidate for state senator from this district.

Although Walter C. Brown of Ashford, incumbent, is silent on the questions relative to his seeking re-nomination for election to the oifice, reports in this part of the district are to the effect that he will be without opposition when the convention is opened.

According to announcement made this morning by Principal H. H. Ellis of the state trade school, evening trades instruction at the school will begin this year on September 29, at 7:30 o'clock. It is planned to carry on instruction in machine shop practice, brick masonry, plastering, textile, cloth analysis, designing, loom fixing, carpentry, cabinet work steel square application, electricity, elementary and advanced; drafting, architectural and mechanical; shop mathematics, building estimating. Courses will also be offered in the domestic science cooking and sewing departments.

Rev. Harding Gaylord, pastor of the Westfield Congregational church in Danielson and a member of the Rotary club of that community, was the speaker at the weekly luncheon of the Putnam Rotary club held today at the Putnam Inn at noon. "A Day in School," was the unusual subject of an interesting after-luncheon talk given by the Danielson clergyman. During the course of his talk, Rev. M. Gaylord interrogated several members of the club on subject of nation wide interest, drawing from them many interesting and yet amusing replies.

During the executive session, President Alex Gilman introduced visiting Rotarians, Sabin S. Russell and Henry Dubuc, both members of the Danielson club, who accompanied Rev. Mr. Gaylord.

A crew of 10 cable splicers and assistants arrived in the city this afternoon and began work on the splicing of the recently installed subterranean 12000 telephone cable which runs to principal points in the business section. As soon as the experts complete work on this task, they will begin operations on the "cutting-in" of a new cable strung on poles along the highway from the Children's home in Sawyer district, to the center of Thompson Town. The Thompson cable, telephone officials said today, has been installed in order to meet the demand for increased phone facilities in that village.

Mrs. Elize Blanchette, a resident of this city for many years died yesterday at her home at 85 Smith street, after a long illness. Mrs. Blanchette was born in Canada in 1854, but had lived the greater part of her life in this country.

The fund for the nurse home of the Day Kimball hospital reached the $15,000 mark when a contribution to the amount of $500 was received from Mrs. A. A. Vonsiatek, general chairman of the fund. It was also learned today that an additional $500 had been raised during the past week from the proceeds of card parties, rummage sales, dramatic presentations and other benefits.

Hamilton Holt, president of Rollins College in Florida and a summer resident of Woodstock hill, in a speech delivered before teachers of Putnam public schools held at Putnam high school yesterday, advanced many new and revolutionary ideas which in his opinion should be adopted by American public school systems, for the benefit of the American student. "Football is the only thing well taught in America today", declared Dr. Holt during the course of his address, which was most interesting and proved to be favorably received by his audience of educators.

Copies of the recently published "General Statutes, Revision of 1930", have been received at the superior court office here. The new edition containing all laws to date, are bound in the familiar large size single volume and in convenient set of three volumes, which are expected to meet with much favor among members of the bar. The 1930 revision supplants the now obsolete set of general statutes published in 1918.

A meeting of the republican town committee was held Wednesday evening in the bar library of the superior court chambers. The gathering was informal and during the session, plans of the coming campaign were discussed and formed. Attorney Irving H. Miron is now chairman of the committee, having been elected to this office at the party town caucus held last week.

JEWETT CITY

THE STATE HAS MADE GOOD FOR PROPERTY CHANGES

The state of Connecticut has nearly completed the new cement sidewalks grade changes and curb resetting on all personal property, as made necessary by the new highway. In every case, within the borough limits, at a cost of $20,000, these alterations and replacements stand as actual improvement. In a considerable number of cases, like the lamp merchant in Arabian Nights, they gave a new walk for an old one with visible benefit to the owners. On North Main street in three cases, where the front yards were left too high, the land has been terraced and fine cement steps have been built. In one instance a man's store was chopped six feet to the new street level.

It is expected that today (Thursday) Slater avenue and the lower end of Main street will be temporarily open to traffic. Finally, at the point of intersection of the bridge approach and the Main street extension in front of the Polish corporation building, the grade is to be raised and laid in macadam. On account of the steep Railroad hill, many think that north bound traffic would do well to continue over the present detour. This may be advised by the state officials until the new bridge is opened.

Mrs. Sofie Kawelczyk and son, Stanley of Chicago, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Maciaj Miss, of Hill street.

E. Chenette, one of the local dealers is receiving ice in carload lots from New Hampshire, his big house on Brewater's cove having been emptied.

Important Town Meeting

Notices will be out soon for the meeting of the town held each year for the purpose of fixing the salaries of the selectmen, and arranging for the services of physicians and the Griswold nurse. The present board of town officials will hold their positions until the fall of 1931. All property owners are awaiting with interest the action of the board of town assessors. This year it is expected that, in compliance with the state law, the assessors will actually view the town's taxable property at which time some changes are due to be made in the list. Irving O. Burdick, veteran member of the board, does not anticipate anything drastic in the way of abstract increases, the property is to be looked over and, he says, probably some changes will be made, all within reason and justice, as at present some real estate is too high and some too low.

Arremony's new men's shop and remodelled women's apparel department will open this evening, 7:30 to 9, for public inspection. Free tickets to all visitors on a gift of $10 in gold. No sales during the opening. Special opening sale Friday and Saturday only, with 15 per cent reduction on all new fall merchandise.—adv.

ARREMONY AND SON INCREASE FLOOR SPACE GREATLY

The firm of Ferris Arremony and Son has taken over the entire street floor of the Maynard block. The new acquirement has doubled the firm's counter and display area with an added floor space equal to that of their original store in the same block. The filling of the new shelves and cases has been completed. The firm of Arremony and Son was established in the borough in 1919, since that time, from a small beginning the demands of increased patronage have made the present fine new store a business necessity.

Mrs. B. R. Gardner was one of the speakers Tuesday at the Ashford association held in Lebanon. The subject of her address had to do with missionary study and reading. Mrs. Gardner also told something of her visit to the Silver Bay, N. Y. convention, earlier in the summer.

Mrs. A. M. Brown, Mrs. E. E. Scates and Mrs. G. H. Prior attended the Woman's Missionary meeting of the Stonington Union association, held at Stonington Tuesday. Mrs. Prior was re-elected president.

Improvements At Theatre

At a cost of several hundred dollars, Manager John F. Barnett of the Finn theatre, is completing a number of improvements in the auditorium. An elaborate system of green finished, fireproof sound panels has been installed. Not only have the acoustic properties been made perfect by this addition, but their pleasing color and design appear as an added attraction to the interior decorations. New window shades are to be provided as well as a full drapery effect on the balcony rail. With the fall season approaching Mr. Barnett has closed bookings for a long list of the finest pictures of recent release.

Popular piano selections were played by Misses Zeeger, Tomlinson and Webster, the words being sung by the club. Refreshments were served by Miss Tomlinson and Miss Shorey. Games were a feature of the evening's program.

LET THIS DOUBLE-MILEAGE OIL END YOUR CRANKCASE WORRIES . . . .

While your car is rolling at a mile-a-minute pace, when piston speeds are as high as forty feet a second, do you worry about wear on the cylinder walls of your motor? Under those conditions it is not enough to have your crankcase merely full of oil. It must be full of the kind of oil that will retain its body and oiliness at the scorching cylinder wall temperatures, oil that will not break down under the side-thrust impact of the pistons.

Oil made from Pennsylvania Crude will do this job best. Pennsylvania oils have heat resisting advantages not to be found in oils made from other grades of petroleum. But even Pennsylvania oils vary in quality. To be sure of getting all the life, all the lubricating value of Pennsylvania Crude, buy your oil where you see the Penn-Drake trade-mark, the sign of the first oil well. Penn-Drake oil is made by an exclusive process that gives you extra mileage, extra protection for your motor. It safely ends your crankcase worries.

DRIVING WITHOUT LICENSES

If it were known how many persons drive automobiles every day without the necessary license, or without having their registration or driver's license with them, it would doubtless be a surprising revelation.

In such a number there could be listed those who do it inadvertently through the changing of a suit or the failure to pick up the billfold or pocketbook in which such papers are kept. They have complied with the law, are entitled to drive, but have unintentionally started away without the necessary papers to prove it.

On the other hand, there are those who think it is not necessary to take out a driver's license. Such a number is small, but there is a larger number who simply make no effort to comply with the requirement that the registration must be in the car and the driver must have his license with him. They nonchalantly declare that they never carry their license, and in so doing rate themselves as not among the law-abiding citizens. They pay no attention to the fact that someone is being arrested and fined almost every day for failure to present the license when asked, and rely on the fact that they are invariably safe drivers to escape detection.

There may be grounds for leniency for those who unintentionally leave their license in the coat which has just been left at home, but there is no excuse for those who never carry their license and boast of it, and certainly there can be no expectation of avoiding penalization by those who make no effort to take out a license.

Expecting to avoid a request by authorities to see the license because of careful driving may be the excuse of those failing to pay any attention to such a detail, but the safe drivers find themselves involved in accidents through no fault of their own or are pushed into mixups which make the little slip of paper quite important.

Much annoyance, much time of the courts, much in fines and ill temper might be prevented by putting a higher rating on the importance of carrying the license at all times against the presence of the ubiquitous cop who catches the negligent drivers off guard.

THE ILLINOIS SITUATION

Not until November will Illinois have its referendum concerning the prohibition amendment, but the state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league already concedes that the wets will win. He naively declares that they will win by hook or crook because they have control of the election machinery, but it would seem that the machinery about which he has such an opinion is being given all possible assistance by the league itself when it urges its members to disregard the referendum. If the advice of the league is followed there will be no ground for criticizing the result. The referendum is for the purpose of finding out how the people of Illinois feel in regard to this question, and the only way in which to find that out is for a full expression by the voters. It will not help the dry situation to claim that the drys did not vote, neither will it justify the cry of a crooked contest just because the refusal of the drys to vote makes it all the more one-sided.

Another policy which the league is following in Illinois seems destined to create an undesired situation. The league has given its endorsement to the candidacy of Lottie O'Neill, an independent and a pronounced dry. In the primary it backed Ruth H. McCormick, but it withdrew support when she declared she would abide by the outcome of the referendum.

If the superintendent of the league is correct, Mrs. McCormick is due to be wet when it comes to voting in congress, provided she is elected. There has never been any doubt about the fact that J. Hamilton Lewis, democrat, is sopping wet. That being so, it is perfectly evident that every vote that is withheld from Mrs. McCormick by the league members is going to work to the advantage of Mr. Lewis. That might not seem so bad for the wets, but when the drys contemplate the fact that the democratic candidate is already advising voters to pay no attention to a complicated referendum but to elect him to the senate and leave prohibition to him, they seem to be in a position of tumbling over themselves to see that he gets there. Rushing an independent candidate into a contest, especially when there is no chance, invariably results in cutting off the nose to save the face.

CITIZENSHIP FRAUDS

Those who come to this country, to remain, do so with the purpose of taking advantage of its institutions and privileges and bettering their condition.

Those who become citizens after reaching these shores, do so with the expectation of being loyal to it.

There are always opportunities for those who are disposed to take advantage of the immigration and naturalization laws, but when it is disclosed that there are such then is the time to reveal their activities and to take steps to remove them.

Such action appears to be underway in the federal district court at Boston, where not only have indictments been brought against about 30 aliens, but charges of violating the naturalization laws have been made against others with the intention of having them deported.

In certain of these instances it would appear that citizenship had been obtained in an illegal manner through conspiracy and false testimony, but attention has been directed to them because of the attitude which those who have gotten such papers have since been displaying toward this government. Having abused the laws of the country in order to get greater privileges and through those privileges make anarchistic attacks upon the country, it is quite evident that they are not what they claimed to be, that they are not worthy of citizenship, and that the quicker the country can be rid of such persons the better.

It is evident that there is an opportunity in such instances, the charges being proved, of course, to set others right in what they should expect from citizenship. If they get the notion that frauds can be perpetrated at will, it will easily mean the admission of a lot of undesirables and create a class of citizens who will have no regard for law or any other regulations.

The toleration of those who have shown themselves unfit to be citizens cannot be expected. If they get into the country through false claims they can expect deportation and there is no reason to suppose that other aliens who have used false testimony to become United States citizens should fare any better.

FAIR BUT UNSATISFACTORY

For Enterprise to win the third race through a fluke will bring no satisfaction. It has been awarded the race in accordance with the rules of such contests and, inasmuch as it was used against the American yacht during the previous contest, it is impossible to regard it as narrow or unfair.

Nevertheless, it would have been preferable to have had a real test under Wednesday's sailing conditions. It was the first day that Shamrock V had gotten away to a good start, one that was in its favor, and faced as good a chance as it could have sought for demonstrating what it could do under the conditions of course and wind. For it to break a halyard, which made it impossible for it to continue except under an impossible handicap, was grossly unfortunate. It is like the race horse that experiences vital damage to part of the racing gear through no other's fault.

If we recall correctly, Sir Thomas Lipton did not accept cheerfully the victory over the Resolute with his Shamrock IV because of the accident to the former. It was, however, part of the fortunes of yaht racing, an advantage neither sought nor desired, but, being in the rules, it applies to whichever is so unlucky as to invoke it.

To win a race in that manner does not add to the interest in this contest or to yacht racing in general. It demonstrates nothing in regard to the relative merits of the respective yachts or the skill of their skippers, and it is all the more regretted because of the thus far disappointing showing which the Lipton challenger has made. If the fourth race proves to be as easy for Enterprise as the others have been it may mean no real deprivation of a chance for Shamrock V.

The fluke, nevertheless, serves to emphasize the desire to see what would happen with the skippers and crews changing yachts.

BUTLER'S VICTORY

The primary in Massachusetts has resulted in the nomination of former Senator Butler as the republican candidate to succeed Senator Gillett. It was a close contest as such contests go, with Mr. Butler winning for a second time against the candidacy of Eben S. Draper. Because Mr. Butler had been defeated following the previous nomination and because of the opposite stands of the candidates on the dry question, more than the usual efforts have been put forth in the campaign and interest in the outcome has extended far beyond the borders of that state.

From the expression of the voters, both men have a right to claim a substantial backing among the republicans of the state. Mr. Butler wins by a margin that leaves no doubt. He appeals to a somewhat larger number of republicans and, therefore, becomes the candidate of the party. If it was upon the dry question that the outcome is judged it means that Massachusetts republicans showed a dry majority. If it is because of experience in the office for which he is nominated, it shows that more are favorable to the former senator. There is not, however, anything to the discredit of either to be found in the size of the vote rolled up.

Having nominated Mr. Butler, it remains to be seen what the effect is going to be upon the wets within the party. Under such circumstances, it is expected that the majority decision will command party support. It will have to if Massachusetts is to retain any republican representation in the senate and it would have been the expectation had Mr. Draper won.

AN AERIAL ST. VALENTINE

Young Mrs. Turnly set the dinner table with a grim look in her eyes—eyes that usually danced with mirth. There were some things that she simply had to say to that husband of hers. Disagreeable things, but she was going to say them nevertheless.

Bang went a knife upon the floor.

"That had better not be company," she muttered, flinging the knife upon the table. "The very idea."

Indeed, one of her chief grievances was this hospitable habit of Robert's. He was likely to bring in any of his business friends without a minute's notice. Like the night before last, when she had contrived a tasty meal from Sunday's leftovers—a dinner just adequate for two. Robert had cheerfully ushered in two out-of-town clients, big-hearted men with enormous appetites.

Mrs. Turnly flung the napkins down viciously. That wasn't the extent of Robert's misdoings, either. Of course, he was a prince in many ways, a devoted husband. Always dependable in the big things that count—well, the little things count, too. Except in a terrible crisis, the little things count the most, in fact—such as reading the paper at the breakfast table every morning since their honeymoon, and sometimes at the dinner table, too.

"I know I shouldn't, honey, but there's an article I started on the way home tonight. Very interesting. I just want to finish it. Won't be more'n a minute, dear."

And then she had to wait in silence while he finished the very important article, and maybe started another one, without realizing what he was doing. No doubt it was a habit acquired from his bachelor days, when he ate alone at some restaurant night after night.

Then last night had crowned it all. True, Robert had had a hard day at the office, and he had not wanted to go to the opera. But the Merriweathers had invited them, and they went. Horrible remembrance! Robert had fallen soundly asleep during one of the most agonizing farewell scenes of the doomed hero. And he had awakened fifteen minutes later to ask in a loud whisper. "What? Didn't they kill that bird yet?"

Goodness, how that wind was howling outside! It was cold, too, and dreadfully slippery. A thin coating of ice covered the streets and more than one car had skidded at the crossing

"And I begged him not to take the car today! Seven o'clock! What on earth is keeping him so late? He's always in at 6.30."

Seven-thirty. Still no Robert. She called his office frantically. Of course, nobody would be there!

"Yes?" came a man's voice over the phone. "Mrs. Turnly? Why, no. Bob's gone home. Left some time ago. He's been gone all of two hours. Hard driving tonight. Don't worry."

Don't worry! Mrs. Turnly sat down in despair. All right to say she must not worry. But what had happened to him? There! That car was stopping—no, it went right on. He's be driving alone, too. Oh, if he'd only bring some man with him, to keep him company. Maybe to take the wheel. Robert wasn't such an expert driver, and the streets were slippery.

Seven forty-five. The clock struck ominously. If anything happened to Robert—no, no! She mustn't think such thoughts. She must control herself. But if—

Robert's car at last! She flew to the door. "Oh, Bob—" her arms around him, wet overcoat and all.

"Hello, honey. Gee, it's fierce out. Got stalled." Then, whispering, "Had to bring Old Man Clay along. I'm sorry."

"Why, why, that's fine!" Mrs. Turnly drew a great sigh of relief and beamed upon their finicky old guest. "Come right in. I'm so glad Robert brought you home to dinner."—Exchange.

A Washington Bystander
Associated Press Staff Writer
By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17 — One thing on which democratic political soothsayers in Washington count in shouting loud claims that, come November they are going to inherit the senate seat so long held by the veteran, Warren of Wyoming, is that the day of "hyphenated" Wyoming politics ended with Warren's death.

For the first time in its relatively brief history as a state, Wyoming is going to see a full force democratic effort to give John Kendrick, its sitting senator by election, a democratic colleague.

Energy

Having met Harry Schwartz of Casper, democratic nominee, the Bystander is satisfied that at least there is going to be a terrific lot of energy put into his campaign.

He looks and acts like a hustler.

He's a new type in Wyoming politics, a lawyer with long federal land office experiance to back his subsequent law practice having much to do with the oil business in Wyoming.

And he told the Bystander he was going to put in 60 days campaigning, traveling upward of 15,000 miles back and forth over the state.

Schwartz' opponent is Robert Carey, former governor and son of the late Senator Carey of Wyoming, long the congressional delegate of Wyoming territory. He, the father, got licked for return to the senate by Warren in the old days.

And almost at once he was nominated by the state democrats for governor although he was a republican. He was elected, too, still maintaining he was a republican. Later he was a leader in the Wyoming Bull Moose organization so the father's party record has some irregular spots in it.

New Field

What seems interesting to the Bystander, however, is that in Schwartz the Wyoming oil drillers and the like have a man to vote for in preference to another of the cattle baron class of Carey, Warren and even Kendrick, who usually have had the call on Wyoming's political preferences.

By way of illustration as to how that works out, Schwartz has long sat on an educational board in his own community and expected reelection as a matter of course. He even went off about his personal business at election time, but in his absence and because of his senatorial aspirations, his republican townsmen organized a counter attack.

When election came, out of a total of 1,000 votes cast in town, Schwartz got about 600 and his republican opponent 400. But the oil community, some 200 votes strong, which is included in the educational district involved, was still to hear from. And when the oil folks voted, Schwartz got all but two of those they cast. That little preliminary skirmish gave him a lot of confidence in looking toward the November senatorial results.

Prohibition seems only to have been an issue in the republican primaries in Wyoming. Both Carey and Schwartz are referendumists Schwartz the more urgently so.

YOUR HEALTH
Heart And Kidney Diseases And Their Causes
By Orville Harry Brown, M. D., Phoenix, Arizona.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

The diseases of middle-age, such as those of the heart and kidneys, are receiving more and more attention, and fortunately because of the widespread practice of the annual health examination, the death rate as a result of these diseases is diminishing.

What are the causes of diseases of the heart and kidneys? Almost any sort of poisoning and stress to which the body is subject may result in these diseases. Infections rank among the first on the list. Sometimes these infections start as colds. After the bacteria get into the body, they may locate in various parts and keep up a constant poisoning process. Favorite locations for these infections are the tonsils, adenoids, nose, nasal sinuses, appendix, gall bladder, and intestines.

The poisons, whether from bacterial origin or from chemicals, may affect the kidneys and produce Bright's disease, and they may also affect the heart directly. Bacteria may grow upon the heart valves. Overwork may seriously affect the heart, particularly if there is a diseased condition to begin with.

The various types of heart disease need not be discussed here. The symptoms, however, need to be known, and the most common and most important are shortness of breath, and sometimes pain about the organ with swelling of the feet and hands.

The first symptoms of kidney trouble, however, are unfortunately often disregarded. Slight swelling of the feet, of face, frequent headaches, and failing vision should lead to the examination of a specimen of urine and the discovery of kidney disease before it is beyond help. Sometimes in kidney disease there is pain in the back—under the ribs—but usually pain in this region does not indicate kidney trouble.

If diseases of the heart, kidney and blood vessels are discovered before they reach the advanced stages, much can be done. How can these diseases be discovered? By regular, periodic health examinations by a competent physician. This examination, if it is general and thorough, should include a going over of the entire body and should include examination of the urine and blood. It is important to know that everyone of us is subject to these diseases, and we owe it to ourselves, our families and our communities to recognize the causes and do what we can to forestall the onslaught of these much heard of but ever dangerous diseases of the heart and kidneys.

LITTLE TALKS ON THRIFT
S. W. Straus Long Recognized As America's Most Militant Thrift Advocate

The death of S. W. Straus removed from the field of activity the most militant advocate of thrift in American life. It is doubtful, in fact, if any other individual has ever worked as constantly and aggressively over a long period of years in the interest of popular thrift education.

To him, widespread adherance to thrift practices meant the solution of many of our deepest economic and sociological problems. His interpretation of the meaning of thrift brought about an entirely new and popular point of vie won the subject. Before S. W. Straus took up the cudgels for thrift that word to the vast majority of persons meant merely saving money. It had nothing to do with one's general progress and success in life.

But S. W. Straus strove to teach throughout his life, particularly during the last twenty years, that thrift of health and thrift of time were just as important as thrift of money.

It was his belief, so strongly called his creed, that any individual who practiced intelligent thrift was not only improving his own financial status but was developing a strong moral fibre and rounding out a fine and noble character. To be thrifty, therefore, meant to avoid all practices and habits that were really harmful to the individual or were in any way inclined to stay his success.

It would not be possible to place any estimate on the value of the work accomplished by S. W. Straus during his lifetime in striving to encourage practices of thrift by the masses of the people in this country.

His weekly articles were read by millions and the steady stream of letters he received continually from persons who had been encouraged through these articles to adopt habits of thrift attested to the fact that his thrift teachings had a very vital hold on the American public.—By H. R. Daniel. Secretary American Society For Thrift.

Stories That Recall Others
Sweet Stones

Peggy's father had been out of town and when he returned he brought her some "rock" candy. The following week he was again obliged to leave the city and just before he left Peggy kissed him and said:

"Be sure and bring me some more of those sweet stones, daddy!"

Musical Longing

The older members of the household were generously helping themselves to ice cubes for their tea one warm evening. Edith, a small guest in the family, said:

"Aunt Lou, why don't you put an ice rock in my milk so I can stir a tune?"

A tortoise found in his garden by H. U. McCurdy of Hutchinson, Kas., returned four times after being carried several miles away.

The Ideal of a Craftsman

In every age men have striven with untiring patience for the achievement of an ideal. The name "STRADIVARIUS", on a violin immortalizes a master craftsman who lived true to his ideals.

Making a cigar of the finest quality was the ideal upon which in 1874, at Manchester, N. H., Roger G. Sullivan—starting with one cigar maker—founded 7-20-4. Today because of its ideal quality, 7-20-4 has grown to the largest hand-made cigar industry in the World.

Quality workmanship and the finest tobaccos are traditional with 7-20-4. The unswerving tenet of its founder—to keep faith with the public—has remained unchanged for over half a century. It is this firm principle which today refuses to alter that method of manufacture which has made 7-20-4 Cigar—FAMOUS FOR ITS CHOICE QUALITY.

TIME SPENT NOW PRESERVING FRUIT WILL BRING REWARD

Not Likely That Pure Cane Sugar Will Be So Cheap Again

In view of the fact that pure cane sugar is now at the lowest price it has been in a generation, and since fruit is abundant, the economy of putting up preserves of all kinds is readily apparent. And if the prices of canned goods are increased next winter, as is likely, your savings will be just that much greater.

Pickles and relishes made of cucumbers, tomatoes, cabbage or melon rind are also inexpensive to preserve and of great help in menu planning. Their spicy tart-sweet goodness is a pleasant accompaniment with meat, fish and vegetables.

The practice of stewing fresh fruit for immediate use should not be overlooked. When peaches, pears and apples are cooked and sweetened to taste, there is less danger of digestive disorders. Consider this in relation to children's meals. Most foods are more delicious with pure cane sugar. The Sugar Institute.

EARLY STOCKADES

About the year 1787 when westward expansion started, great bodies of hardy people called "backwoodsmen" were pushing through the far backwoods. Stockades were built around the settlements they founded so that ample protection might be had from Indians. Above is a picture of one of the typical forts set up by these pioneers.

Huntington, was a graduate of Cornell and a construction engineer who had achieved great success in his brief career.

HAMBURG, Sept. 17—Nearly 3,000 persons attended the 24th annual fair of the Lyme Grange Fair association held at the local fairgrounds today. Perfect weather, attractive exhibits, ox pulling contests, athletic events and a lively midway made this year's fair about the most successful ever held by the association. People flocked to the grounds from miles around, many attending from Middletown, New London, Norwich and nearby towns, and remaining throughout the day.

The fruit and vegetable exhibits were excellent, considering the rather poor crops this season and the cattle and horse shows were among the best seen on the local grounds in a number of years. It was arranged attractively on the second floor of the grange hall building.

The ground floor was devoted to vegetables, fruits, cakes, pies, jellies and preserves, etc. The flower show featuring fall flowers and rare and valued specimens had a tent of its own near the grange building.

State Health Display

In another tent nearby was a Connecticut state health department exhibit. Children were weighed and measured, information on health distributed and instructive motion pictures shown. Miss Elizabeth C. Nickerson was in charge of the exhibit.

The American Legion Auxiliary of the fifth district had a stand in the midway where fancy articles and candy were sold for the benefit of the scholarship fund. In charge were Mrs. Charles Peck and Mrs. Gladys Peck of Lyme; Miss Isabelle Davidson of New London; Mrs. Grace McNally of Groton; Mrs. John B. Oat, Mrs. Henry Leopold and Mrs. W. F. Bogue of Norwich.

The Connecticut Light and Power Co. had a tent along the midway where they gave electric cooking demonstrations. Electric stoves, washing machines and refrigerators were on display.

AUTO ACCIDENT INJURIES FATAL TO JOHN J. MURPHY

Shortly after midnight Wednesday the death of John J. Murphy of 148 McKinley avenue occurred at the Backus hospital as a result of injuries he received about 1 o'clock last Sunday morning in an automobile accident on the Military highway.

He was the son of the late Michael C. and Harriet G. Murphy and was born in Philadelphia, May 14, 1905. When the boy was three years old his father died and at that time he went to live with his aunt, Mrs. Katherine C. Mayo, at that time in Toronto, Canada, and his home had been with her ever since, coming to this city when she moved here 12 years ago.

He is survived by his brother, Frank M. Murphy, who is a reporter on the Philadelphia Record, his aunt, and his cousin, Miss Celina Mayo. He was a young man of fine character, was a member of St. Patrick's church and had been employed in the city gas and electrical department.

Mr. Murphy's condition had been critical since the accident, when an automobile he was driving near Breakwater on the Military highway, left the road, struck a fence post at a culvert and was badly wrecked. Young Murphy was the most seriously injured of the three occupants of the car. He was taken to the Submarine base hospital, suffering from a ruptured bladder and other intestinal injuries, but on Monday he was brought to the Backus hospital in this city, where a delicate operation was performed by Dr. J. J. Donohue and Dr. John W. Callahan. Later peritonitis developed with fatal results.

Daniel Diffley, of Kinney avenue, owner of the coupe which Mr. Murphy was driving, and James D. La Rochelle, of the U. S. marines, both of whom were in the car, suffered only minor injuries.

The accused were brought into the superior court on a bench warrant, having been bound over to the court by the Ledyard justice court Tuesday night. They were caught stealing the potatoes from Massey's farm by State Trooper Arthur Whitmarsh, who had been investigating complaints from farmers in the Ledyard section that the potatoes were being stolen.

Other cases disposed of by the court today were as follows:

PAWTUCKET ROTARIAN IS SPEAKER TO LOCAL CLUB

"The Seriousness of Rotary" was the topic of a very inspiring address by Elmer Hubbard of Pawtucket, R. I., a past governor of the 21st Rotary district, at the noonday luncheon of the Norwich Rotary club on Wednesday. Mr. Hubbard, who has been a Rotarian for nearly 20 years has spent much of his time in the study of the basic principles of the Rotary movement. He was introduced by Ellis H. Thayer, chairman of the program committee for September. Mr. Hubbard said in part:

The more I learn of Rotary and the more I meet Rotarians from all parts of the world, the more I am impressed with the seriousness of this something we call Rotary. And that is well, for no movement ever long endured unless it was founded on some great and right principle.

While I would in no way belittle the tremendous value of social gatherings and the fun and nonsense that goes with them, yet this institution of ours, like all other great movements, if it is to endure, as I believe it is to endure, must adhere to the great ideals upon which it has been built, and which are set forth in the "Six Objects of Rotary."

It is to the brief consideration of these that I invite your attention.

They are:

First: "The ideal of service as the basis of all worthy enterprise."

This is simply a short and concise statement of the Golden Rule, yet it embodies all the fundamentals and activities of Rotary. There is nothing new about it. It was promulgated by the greatest of all teachers two thousand years ago, when He said: "All things whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so unto them." Yet, I like to think that somehow, in some way, Rotary has in these days found a better, practical interpretation and application than has ever before been done. How plain it all is; simply the using of the other fellow as we would have the other fellow use us. A simple, practical ideal, capable of being carried, by all of us, into the rush of every-day life.

Second: "High ethical standards in business and profession."

Let us not lose sight of the fact that Rotary is an organization of business and professional men. It is therefore through business that Rotary must function. This means a constant emphasizing and development of the vocational service programs of Rotary International, and brings us naturally to the third object which is closely akin to the second and is:

Third: "The application of the ideal of service by every Rotarian to his personal business and community life."

Let us keep in mind that a Rotarian represents Rotary to his business or profession, and not his business to Rotary. Such being the case, the question naturally arises, how shall we learn to properly represent Rotary to our craft? I contend that the best way of all is by absorbing the Rotary principles, which can only be done through attendance at club meetings. I defy any man to attend 52 Rotary meetings a year and sit "cheek by jowl" with his fellow members without becoming thoroughly imbued with the Rotary spirit. And while I would not urge attendance as an end, yet it is undoubtedly the greatest means to an end at our command.

Fourth: "The development of acquaintance as an opportunity for service."

And we have reached what, to me, is the greatest thing in Rotary, and I like to call it "Friendliness," the making and the keeping of a friend, and when I say "a friend," I do not mean the kind of a friend who, when the sun is shining and all is going well, bids you a "good morning" and passes on his way, but I mean the kind of a friend, who when ways are dark and clouds are lowered, comes and puts his arm about your shoulder and says the word that helps. Yes, I mean more than that. I mean the kind of a friend that, when perchance we have strayed from the path, comes and offers the word of admonition, which wins us back to duty and to love.

And we come to the fifth object: "The recognition of the worthiness of all useful occupations and the dignifying by each Rotarian of his occupation as an opportunity to serve society."

As has been said: "Here is a common ground for all men for service. By it all religious, social, racial and political snobbery is abolished. All men are placed on the same level."

In this way we get the true value and advantage of "a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull all together," by which mountains are removed.

And we have reached the sixth and last object: "The advancement of understanding, good-will and international peace through a world fellowship of business and professional men united in the ideal of service."

This means Rotary International.

At the business session, Dr. R. R. Agnew presided and A. G. Lillibridge and E. W. Jewett were the song leaders. It was voted to take the members of the Rotary Junior league team to Boston on Friday to the Chicago Cubs-Boston Braves game.

About 15 members of the club will go to New London on Thursday afternoon for a golf match with the New London club to be held at Shenecossett course.

The meeting closed with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner.

CARDS TAKE NATIONAL LEAGUE LEAD AS HIGH DRIVES IN RUN TO BEAT ROBINS

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Sept. 17—(AP) A small band of former Missourians left Ebbets field late this afternoon singing a hastily improvised song, "Little Andy High" to the tune of "Little Liza Jane." They were celebrating the second straight victory of the St. Louis Cardinals over the Brooklyn Robins, today's triumph being registered by a score of 5 to 3.

It placed the Cardinals a full game ahead of the Robins and may prove to be the victory needed to send the Cardinals into the world series for the third time in five years. The expatriated Missourians are trying to root the Cards home. Their work for two days has been good.

High today duplicated his performance of yesterday, doubling as a pinch hitter. Today his hit came in the ninth inning and drove home two runs while yesterday he doubled in the tenth and sent one run home. One would have been enough today.

Adolfo Luque, veteran Cuban pitcher, worked well on the mound for the losers but tired in the closing innings. He laid the foundation for his defeat by issuing two passes, one in the eighth and one in the ninth. The first resulted in the tying run and the second was the winning counter.

Going into the second game of the series in a virtual tie, although a point kept them in second place, the Robins attacked Sylvester Johnson for a run in the first inning and another in the second. The Cards tied it in the fourth when Hafey hit a home run with a mate on base but big Ike Boone in the same inning regained the lead for the home club with a hard smash for the circuit.

There the situation rested until Manager Gabby Street called the reserves into action in the eighth and ninth innings. Pinch hitters and pinch runners were thrown into the game with abandon and all delivered. One pinch batsman walked and the other hit. Both pinch runners scored.

Moore, who moved from the Robins' center field to second base for today's game, opened the game with a single and Gilbert's sacrifice, moved him to second. Wright's double scored the first run of the game.

Hendrick started the second with a single and Boone walked. Lopez struck out trying to bunt and Luque popped out but Moore sent Hendrick in with his second hit of the game.

In the Robins' half of the fourth, Boone's homer sent Brooklyn into the lead, 3 to 2.

In the eighth Fisher batted for Johnson and walked. Blades ran for Fisher. Douthit filed to Hendrick but Adams sent Blades to third with a smash at Gilbert which went for two bases. Frisch's sacrifice fly to Boone scored Blades with the tying run.

Al Grabowski left handed his way through the eighth without Brooklyn bats damaging him. The first two Cardinals were retired without incident in the ninth and then Luque issued his second fatal pass. Gus Mancuso, the catcher, walked. Gelbert singled to shortstop, Wright making a sensational one-hand stop, but without a chance to make a play. Orsatti went to second to run for Mancuso and High, former Brooklyn third baseman took Grabowski's place at bat. High doubled against the right field fence scoring Orsatti and Gelbert and the game was over, although Jim Lindsey came in to pitch and went through the formality of retiring three Robins in the ninth.

High's emergency hitting has been one of the features of the Cardinal's drive pennantward. His was the hit that decided a 20-inning victory over the Cubs at Chicago. He was released by Brooklyn in 1925 and five years later has come back to annoy the fans.

Today's game, while less exciting than the thrilling 1 to 0 battle opening the series, was far from dull. Wright and Gelbert, the opposing shortstops, contributed brilliant fielding plays.

Tomorrow will bring the Robins their last chance at the Red Birds. If they can capture the final game of the series they will draw to within a point of the Cardinals. On the other hand a victory for St. Louis will send them to Philadelphia for five games with the Phillies leading by two games and only nine to play.

The pitching responsibilities in the closing vital game probably will be entrusted to Babe Phelps, a big youngster pitching his first year, for Brooklyn and Burleigh Grimes, former Brooklyn star, for the visitors.

WILSON HITS TWO HOMERS TO KEEP CUBS IN RACE

NEW YORK, Sept. 17—(AP)—Led by Hack Wilson's two tremendous clouts which brought his season's home run total up to 52, and by Pat Malone's fine pitching, the Chicago Cubs evened their series with the Giants today by winning the second game, 5 to 2. The defeat put the Giants almost hopelessly out of the pennant race, leaving them 5 1-2 games behind the league leading Cards with only nine to play, while the Cubs are only a half game behind the second place Brooklyn Robins.

Wilson made his two homers off Tiny Jim Chaplin in the first and third innings and gave the Cubs a safe lead. Cliff Heathcote also hit a homer in the third to complete the Cub scoring. Malone granted the Giants only five hits and was in trouble only in two innings, the first, when he escaped, and the sixth when the Giants scored both their runs.

Bill Morrell, recently of Shreveport, made his Giant debut in the fourth inning and staged a real battle with Malone for the last six frames. He gave the Cubs only two hits and not a run.

The start of the Chicago scoring came in the first inning when Blair was hit by a pitched ball, English forced him at second and Cuyler fanned. Then Wilson sent the ball into the upper tier of the right field stand for his first homer. English walked in the third and again was on base when Wilson clouted another homer into the right field stand. Heathcote followed by sending another drive in the same place to finish the job. By batting in four runs, Wilson set a new major league record, beating by one the mark made by Lou Gehrig of the Yankees in 1925.

Two singles and a walked filled the bases for the Giants in the sixth and Mel Ott crashed out a three base hit to bring Leach and Lindstrom home and save the Giants from a shutout.

BERGER STARS AS BRAVES AND REDS SHARE HONORS

BOSTON, Sept 17—(AP)—Walter Berger, Braves' slugging outfielder, got three home runs here today in a double header which the Braves and Cincinnati Reds divided. Boston won the first, 6 to 3, and the Reds the nightcap, 6 to 4. The blows brought his total of homers for the season to 37.

Berger got his first homer with one on in the third inning of the first game and his two blows in the second game gave the Braves their four runs. He got one with none on in the sixth and another with two on in the eighth. In addition to this work he drove in two more runs in the first game.

GALLANT FOX ROMPS HOME A WINNER IN 2-MILE CLASSIC

BELMONT PARK RACE TRACK, N. Y., Sept. 17—(AP)—In one of the easiest triumphs of his long and brilliant campaign, William Woodward's Gallant Fox, three year old title holder and all-time money winning champion sent his total earnings soaring to $328,165 today with a galloping victory in the Jockey Gold cup—run over two miles as the closing feature of the Belmont Park meeting.

Only three thoroughbreds paraded to the post for the twelfth running of the gruelling classic and one of the trio was Frisus, an added starter, coupled with the Fox as the Woodward entry. The third starter was A. C. Bostwick's three year old Yarn, a speedy maiden but badly outclassed in today's jaunt over the brown oval.

Gallant Fox and Frisus went to the post at the prohibitive odds of one to 30—the shortest quotations held against the Fox since he started his parade through the three year old and handicap fields last April in the Wood Memorial at Jamaica. The Gold Cup triumph ran the Woodward star's string of ten victories in eleven starts.

It was also Gallant Fox's first race on a New York track as he will be retired to stud after fulfilling his engagement in the Latonia championship down in Kentucky.

Riding as per instructions, Jockey Slim Abel sent Frisus to the front at the rise of the barrier and for a mile and one half of the journey kept him there with Earl Sande holding the Fox back in second place. A half mile from home Sande made his move and in a few quick strides the big red horse from the Woodward barn was out in front. At the same time Johnny Maiden shook up Yarn and the Bostwick colt went into second place as Frisus appeared to go lame.

Rounding the stretch turn Yarn challenged but a length from the flying hoofs of Gallant Fox was the closest he could get. Gallant Fox galloped under the wire in 2:04 3-5, nearly three seconds slower than the track record, but there was no need for hurry as Yarn was three lengths back. Frisus finished far back, pulling up lame.

We've watched Lefty come up from grammar school days when he played with the Sacred Heart team in Taftville. We saw him develop into a good pitcher with the sandlot teams about the city.

Starting as a pitcher, Lefty met with success but it was his hitting rather than his pitching that attracted attention. When he wasn't on the mound he was playing in the outfield.

And he rapidly rounded into a real smart outer defense man. His strong pitching arm stood him in good stead in the outfield. His hitting attracted the attention of a Blackstone Valley league team and he was given a chance.

From the start he made good. His hitting continued and began to attract attention. Finally, a scout for the Pittsburgh Pirates saw him and then it was just a matter of signing on the dotted line.

Reporting to Wichita early in the spring Lefty immediately started to burn up the league. His hitting impressed the Western league the same as it had done in the east.

For weeks on weeks he led the entire Western league only to be beaten out in the last week by four points. However, his work impressed the Pittsburgh management and he was recalled and yesterday he played his first game.

Lefty loves baseball and his heart and soul are in the game. He may not stay up in major league baseball this time, for he's with a club that has the strongest outfield in the majors. But it's a sure bet he'll make the grade before he hangs up the spiked shoes.

Lefty should go far in baseball. We certainly hope so.

TIGERS BEAT RED SOX IN COMEDY GAME

DETROIT, Sept. 17—(AP)—The Red Sox and Tigers put on a slap-stick comedy today, each team collecting 16 hits as Detroit won by 9 to 7. Earl Whitehill started for the Tigers and was credited with his 16th victory although he allowed 13 hits in six and one-third innings. George Uhle relieved him and held Boston to two hits for the rest of the game. Durham, Smith and Kline pitched for the Sox. Five doubles and a homer by Bill Akers were the only extra base hits.

Tom Hughes, rookie outfielder from Des Moines, continued his hitting streak, getting three singles and a walk in four times at the plate. Hughes has collected 16 safe hits in 29 times at the bat in the eight games he has played for Detroit.

FABER LETS ATHLETICS DOWN WITH SIX HITS

CHICAGO, Sept. 17—(AP)—Urban Faber let the Athletics down with just six hits this afternoon, and despite four errors by his mates, the Hose won the third game of the series by the score of 4 to 2. Ed Rommell was nicked for 12 blows, four of them being clustered in the fourth frame to give the Sox a victory. Hits by Reynolds, Jolley, Cissell and Kamm figured in the scoring, along with an error by Mickey Cochrane that allowed a run to score. Cissell made a great running catch of a pop fly in the eighth to save Faber a lot of trouble.

YANKS' LATE RALLY FALLS SHORT BY ONE RUN

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 17.—(AP)—Despite a seven run rally by the Yankees in the eighth inning, the Browns evened the series with New York today, winning 9 to 8.

Five pitchers, most of them wild, toiled for the two teams and each set yielded nine hits. Collins was credited with the victory although Blaeholder finished the game for the Browns. Henry Johnson was charged with the defeat. Holloway and McEvoy also pitched for New York. The quintet gave out 17 bases on balls, Collins allowing seven. The score:

Greenville is S. A. Champion

LEFTY DUGAS GETS THREE HITS IN FIRST GAME AS A MAJOR LEAGUER

Another product of the Norwich sandlots battered down the barriers of major league baseball down in Philadelphia yesterday and today looks like one of the most promising outfielders of the crop that came up from the minor leagues this season. He is Lefty Dugas, of Taftville, the little village that has taken baseball as the ace of sports for the past 50 years.

Lefty Dugas most convincingly showed the baseball world yesterday that he is up in the big time to stay. Playing with the Pittsburgh Pirates against Philadelphia, a team that has caused plenty of trouble for the first division teams this year, Dugas went to bat five times and poled out three hits, all of them singles. From his records he showed that big league pitching held no terrors for him and that no matter who tossed the ball he was there to hit and did. Lefty also crossed the plate twice during the two-inning scoring orgy of the Pirates. Dugas was sent into right field in place of Comrosky, the youthful sensation who blazed a name for himself this season, and played as well as the regular occupant of this berth. Lefty had but one chance in the defensive play of the Pirates and he executed this with all the steadiness of the seasoned leaguer.

For nearly two weeks Lefty has been warming a bench in a Pirate uniform, getting acclimated to the game as the major leaguers play it and to the big crowds that follow the big league teams. He has been waiting for the opportunity to knock and when the knock came he was ready. Those who saw Dugas practicing with the Pittsburgh team at Boston last week say that he looks just as well as either of the Waner boys or Comorosky. He is fast in the outfield and at bat he hits just as hard if not harder than the other outfielders.

LEFTY DUGAS

Lefty is strictly a Taftville boy and his thoughts are with the homefolk always. When playing with Wichita in the Western league, Dugas wrote that he, while playing good ball and enjoying the season, was homesick at times. And the Taftville people think just as much of Lefty. This is evidenced by the fact that plans are under way to give Dugas a grand welcome home in the nature of a Dugas Day.

The major league season closes on Sunday, Sept. 28, with Pittsburgh playing at St. Louis. As soon as the season is over Dugas will start for his home in Taftville and the home coming celebration is scheduled for Saturday, October 4th. Tentative plans include a ball game in the afternoon followed by a reception and banquet in the evening which in turn will be followed by a dance. City and town officials will be invited to the banquet along with the baseball friends of Lefty.

For the baseball game, which the Shyma club, sponsors of the Dugas day festivities, is arranging the Shymas will play Jim Troland's All Stars. Plans now being considered include the inviting of a number of big league players who will be in the east to play on one or the other of the teams.

PIRATES HAVE TWO BIG INNINGS TO BEAT PHILS

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 17.—(AP)—Two big innings, the seventh and eighth, in which they scored all their runs, featured the Pittsburgh Pirates 12 to 5 victory over the Phils today.

Four Phillies hurlers were routed by the Pirates, while Erwin Brame limited the Phils to 12 scattered hits.

Besides beating the Quakers with his arm, Brame played an important part in the victory with his bat by collecting four hits. Al Phillips, Roy Hansen, Pat Collard and Rae Benge hurled for the losers. This quartet was assaulted for 16 hits.

BARBUTI TO PLAY PRO FOOTBALL THIS YEAR

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—(AP)—Ray Barbuti, Olympic 400-meter running champion and America's only winner of a flat race in the 1928 games at Amsterdam, signed today to play professional football with the Long Island Bulldogs.

Having turned professional, Barbuti will not be able to defend his title in the 1932 games at Los Angeles.

The former Syracuse university track and football captain hung up his running shoes several months ago but has been practicing diligently for a professional football debut in his old position at fullback.

AVERILL HITS THREE HOMERS IN A ROW, THEN A FOURTH

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 17—(AP)—Earl Averill, young Indian centerfielder, stole the show by hitting three home runs in consecutive trips to the plate and a total of four round trippers for the day, as Cleveland and Washington split a double header here today. Cleveland won the first, 13 to 7, and Washington copped the nightcap, 6 to 4.

Averill tied the modern major league record for consecutive homers with three in the first game. He drove in eight runs, enough to win the game. He missed a fourth straight homer on his last trip to the plate when a long fly was foul by a few feet and then grounded out. On his first time up in the second game, he hit another homer, scoring two runners ahead of him. Next time up Averill hit a double, then he was hit by a pitched ball, flied out and walked in other appearances.

CARNERA KAYOES GROSS FOR HIS 23RD VICTIM

CHICAGO STADIUM, Chicago, Sept. 17.—(AP)—Primo Carnera, the mighty muscleman from Italy, registered his twenty-third knockout since invading America, by pounding Jack Gross, a Philadelphia southpaw, into a pitiful state of helplessness in the fourth round of what was to have been a ten-round fight tonight.

The fight ended amid a chorus of boos and jeers with Gross groggy, bleeding and on the floor. Gross was twice felled with heavy right hand blows to the head. He was counted out the last time he hit the floor.

The bout was announced as Carnera's last American engagement before he sails for home October 11.

Gross, outweighed 67 pounds, was no match for the Italian. All he possessed was a stout heart and courage to walk into Carnera's devastating blasts to the head and body. Gross scaled 200 pounds and Carnera 267.

Carnera punished his foe unmercifully in the first three rounds, clipping him with hard right uppercuts whenever Gross came in close, but apparently was in no hurry to finish him. A few seconds after the fourth round opened, Carnera bounced a terrific right off Gross' chin, flooring him for a count of nine. Gross suddenly leaped to his feet and rushed at Carnera, throwing a left hook to the body. The punch rolled off Carnera like a pea hitting an elephant's back. Carnera stepped back and then let fly with another crushing right.

Gross hit the floor and was trying to get up from a kneeling position when Referee Eddie Purdy tolled off the fatal ten. Gross protested that he could continue and made a half-hearted attempt to throw another punch at Carnera while Purdy was directing him to his corner.

In the ten-round semi windup, Dick Daniels, a Minneapolis light heavyweight, outscrambled Al Fay, of Pittsburgh, heavyweight protege of Jack Kearns. Daniels outboxed Fay all the way and at the finish had the Pittsburgher badly marked up. Fay weighed 197 and Daniels 185 pounds.

FRIEDMAN TO HELP YALE DEVELOP PASSING GAME

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 17.—(AP)—Bennie Friedman, former All-American Michigan quarterback and forward passing adept, tomorrow will join Mal Stevens' coaching staff as guest coach to aid in developing the Blue attack in the overhead game. Coach Stevens said Friedman would drill the squad in passing Thursday, Friday and Saturday and would return from time to time during the season.

A "pink tea" scrimmage was held today with the play stopping as soon as the ball carrier was touched by an opponent. Albie Booth, the Blue backfield ace of last year, carried the ball four times out of five.

BIG GALLERY FOLLOWS JONES ON HIS PRACTICE ROUND

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 17.—(AP)—Followed by a large gallery, Bobby Jones today took his first practice trip around the Merion Cricket club's east course, where next week he will compete with more than 150 other stars of national and international repute for the American amateur golf championship.

Jones' playing was somewhat relaxed, as contrasted to the concentrating which characterizes his shots in competition, but he covered the 18 holes in 73, only three strokes above par. He was one over par, 38 going out and two over par, 34 recovering, due chiefly to lapses in putting.

Accompanying Jones was T. A. Bourn, of St. Andrews, one of the British entries in the tournament. They were followed by more than 1,000 fans.

Upon arriving here from Washington, where he had visited President Hoover, Jones visited a physician to get a crink in his shoulder "ironed out." The doctor's treatment gave relief and his swing in the workout was as smooth and his drive had the same distance as in the past.

Scores of others on the course today ran higher than yesterday's, the best reported being a 38-37—75 by Francis Brown, flying Hawaiian, who is amateur champion of California.

Otto Hackmeyer, Lowell, Mass., was among those who spent an hour or more on the practice tee today.

WESTERLY

MAKES PUBLIC TWO UNANSWERED LETTERS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Sept. 17—Chairman Harry R. Milner of the municipal improvement committee of the Westerly chamber of commerce, released today for publication two unanswered letters to Rhode Island authorities concerning the condition of the Pawcatuck river bridge, one from the commerce chamber by its president, Dr. John Champlin, Sr., to the Rhode Island state board of public roads and the second by himself to Governor Norman S. Case of Rhode Island. The letters follow:

Westerly, R. I.,
August 28, 1930.

State Board of Public Roads,
State House,
Providence, Rhode Island.
Gentlemen:

The Westerly chamber of commerce respectfully calls your attention to traffic conditions in Westerly and the condition of the Pawcatuck river bridge connecting Connecticut with Rhode Island on U. S. Route 1.

We understand that the Westerly highway commission on August 20th met with your board and offered the state board the streets in Westerly leading from state roads to the Pawcatuck river bridge, which, we understood was the reason the state had not taken up this bridge matter before. We trust now that this matter is straightened out and that the state board in behalf of public safety and convenience will take and direct what preliminary steps are necessary in order to have a new bridge erected over the Pawcatuck river at this point.

The present condition of the existing Pawcatuck river bridge has been caused by the tremendous traffic passing over it the last few years (this bridge was built 45 years ago), this traffic having been originated by the construction of splendid roads in the states of Rhode Island and Connecticut, these roads terminating a short distance from the bridge on each side of the Pawcatuck river.

The bridge question at Westerly is not a local matter. It is larger. It is state, New England and national. The present bridge is used by citizens from almost every state in the Union and carries a large volume of foreign traffic.

The Westerly chamber of commerce feels that action should be taken regarding the construction of a new bridge on the site of the present bridge to relieve traffic conditions in Westerly and to solve a matter of serious importance.

We, therefore, respectfully request you to let us know what plan your department is making to take care of this project.

Thanking you for your interest in this matter and assuring you of our co-operation, we remain,

Respectfully yours,
(Signed JOHN CHAMPLIN, Pres.
Westerly Chamber of Commerce.

The other un-answered letter reads:

Westerly, R. I.
Sept. 9. 1930.

Honorable Norman S. Case,
Governor of Rhode Island,
State House,
Providence, R. I.
Your Excellency:

The Westerly chamber of commerce respectfully calls your attention to traffic conditions in Westerly and the questionable condition of the Pawcatuck river bridge connecting Connecticut with Rhode Island on United States Route 1.

The present weakened condition of the existing Pawcatuck river bridge has been caused by the tremendous interstate traffic passing over it the last four years (this bridge was built forty-five years ago), this traffic having been developed by the construction of excellent roads in the states of Rhode Island and Connecticut, these roads terminating a short distance from the bridge on each side of the Pawcatuck river.

The bridge question at Westerly is not a local matter. It is larger. It is state, New England and national. The present bridge is used by citizens from almost every state in the Union, also by guests from Canada and the Provinces, and passes an unusually large volume of traffic daily.

The Westerly chamber of commerce, therefore, respectfully requests you, in the interest of public safety, convenience, commerce, Rhode Island and New England, that you use your influence wherever necessary to initiate steps to improve the present weakened bridge and unsatisfactory interstate conditions of traffic in Westerly.

Respectfully yours,
(signed) HARRY R. MILNER,
Chairman Municipal Improvement Committee,
Westerly Chamber of Commerce.

STOCK PRICES WORKED UPWARD IN AN EXTREMELY QUIET SESSION OF MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 17—(AP)—The financial market made laborious improvement today. Stock prices averaged less than a point higher in the second smallest turnover of the year, 1,188,580 shares. Grain again rose, but the advances were small. High grade bonds, especially railroad obligations, showed moderate strength.

Shares worked upward in extremely quiet trading until the late dealings when some profit taking cut into the advances of a point or more in the market leaders. Utilities received the bulk of what buying activity there was and the day's best gains developed in that group. Railroad and motion picture shares were heavy. Industrials listlessly followed the upward trend, although U. S. Steel yielded all but an eighth of its extreme gain of more than a point.

One of the most encouraging developments was the appearance of evidence that prices for two of the basic commodities, steel and copper, had reached such low levels that important consumers were changing, or were about to change, their hand to mouth buying policies. Western Electric, American Telephone's manufacturing subsidiary, announced it had been buying copper for six weeks and had accumulated enough to carry the Bell system through the remainder of the year. The company, which is also an important customer of the silk, lead and rubber markets, is understood to have saved about 15 per cent as a result of the weakness of commodities this year.

The Iron and Steel reviews, although putting operations about on a parity with recent ratios, reported that large users of steel apparently believed prices had reached bottom and, in the words of "Iron Age," were now willing to "contract ahead." This publication said several consumers had covered their requirements for the balance of 1930 and that a few had purchased for the first half of 1931. In this connection "Steel" stated: "Many discern in the price situation, which is spotty and somewhat contradictory, a slow accretion of strength."

Routine business indices disclosed a reduction of 127,887 cars in freight loadings for the week ended September 6 over the preceding week, a decrease that was somewhat more than seasonal even in view of the fact that the period covered by the report included Labor day. The petroleum industry, on the other hand, continued to report progress, showing drops in both reserve stocks of gasoline and crude oil production. General Motors' August deliveries to consumers, was about 6,000 units larger than the July total, but sharply below those for the same month a year ago.

Money was in abundant supply and the call rate renewed at 2 per cent for the first time in a fortnight. The treasury's large overdraft at the federal reserve banks was understood to have been virtually liquidated.

Neither of the professional factions in the stock market appeared to be much interested in the movement of prices. There were reports that the shorts, who did little or no covering, were awaiting the reaction to third quarter earnings statements before testing quotations further, while the bull crowd seemed satisfied with the general firmness and tried only half heartedly to attract a following. The move in the utilities brought net gains of about a point to American Telephone, Electric Power and Light, Public Service of New Jersey, American Power and Light and North American. Stone and Webster rose 3. Consolidated Gas closed unchanged.

Paramount carried most of a 2 point loss through to the finish, while Warner Brothers Pictures yielded a point and Radio-Keith-Orpheum, half. There were small net declines in General Electric, Radio, Vanadium, Johns Manville, Anaconda, American Tobacco "B", DuPont and Case. Gillette and Autostrop were heavy, yielding a couple of points. National Biscuit, whose directors authorized an extra dividend of 50 cents, closed 3-4 higher. In the rail group, Louisville and Nashville, Northern Pacific, Southern Railway and Atchison, sold off around a point, although scattering recoveries were made from the lows. Baltimore and Ohio firmed on the declaration of the regular dividend. Atlantic Coast Line, off 2 points, sold at the lowest price since 1924.

Wheat closed unchanged to 7-8 of a cent higher in response to larger exports and eastern buying. Corn rallied 5-8 to 1 5-8, reflecting a firm cash market. Cotton finished one point lower to 5 higher.

Foreign exchanges were firm. Far Eastern rates improved with a rise in the price of silver.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 17—(AP)—On a comparatively small volume of business, curb stocks, were firm today, and in a few instances, notable improvement was registered to erase former losses. Sales were under recent sessions, approximating 304,100 shares.

After watching stocks skid for two sessions, buyers took charge at the outset and while they maintained a very cautious attitude which gave the market a stagnant appearance at times, they quickly halted impotent efforts to start a new reaction.

A feature was the prominence of some issues which have been more or less dormant recently, Insull Utility investment, Eastern States Power B, Southwest Gas Utilities, being among the buying favorites, to rally 1 to 3 points. Shorts were principally responsible for the 4 point rise of Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line and the 1 1-4 gain of Technicolor, both stocks being sharply depressed on the reaction which was halted late yesterday.

The utility group was firm, prices holding above the previous close most of the session. Trading was narrow and turnover of the leaders was reduced. Electric Bond and Share was well supported and advanced 1 point. Duke, American and Foreign Power, United Gas new, United Light and Power A, American Traction and Light, American Cities Gas and Electric, Brazilian Traction registered fractional gains. Public Utility Holding warrants and American Commonwealth A, finished 3-8 lower.

Some of the oils again ignored the main trend. Gulf dropped 1 point, and Vacuum and Standard of Kentucky, worked 1-4 lower. Imperial Oil of Canada was unusually active and good buying carried it nearly a point higher, Cities Service was dull and firm.

In the industrial division, Deere's 5 point advance and the backsliding of American Hard Rubber, 10 points to its low of the year were features. Most of the active issues showed small changes if any. Natural gas stocks were firm. Goldman Sachs trading encountered selling and was fractionally lower at the close.

Approximately 17,000 tourists arrive in Chicago every summer day, according to an estimate made by traffic managers of various transportation lines.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Sept. 17—(AP)—Fresh upturns in wheat values today went hand in hand with further sharp curtailment of the harvest movement both in Canada and the United States. Canadian country marketings for 24 hours amounted to but 2,147,000 bushels against 3,834,000 bushels a year ago, with Minneapolis and Duluth receiving only 560 cars against 934 cars at this time last year. Meanwhile, domestic milling centers reported new flour business averaging up to capacity or better, and flour buyers less fortified than usual at this time in regard to purchasing.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled at the same as yesterday's finish to 1c higher. Corn closed 1-2a1 3-4c up, oats 1-4a7-8c advanced, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 12c.

Povisions advanced on account of scattered buying of lard and despite downturns in the value of hogs.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 17—(AP)—With a large volume of funds seeking employment demand for railroad bond issues broadened today and carried many to the best prices of the year. Buying was brisk in the final hours, and the volume of business for the session approximated $8,939,000.

Some of the utilities, particularly communications, felt the impetus of the vigorous buying and the U. S. governments made some headway on a large turnover. Changes in the foreign list were mixed. Argentine issues rallied more than a point each on announcement that the provisional government had been recognized by the United States. German issues with the exception of the Dawes 7s lost ground, reflecting uncertainty over the outcome of the recent election.

Both the highest grade railroad obligations and those that rank slightly below the legal class participated in the advance, as buyers were encouraged by the reduction of the call money renewal rate to 2 per cent. Missouri Pacific 5s F 77 a legal issues and the 5s H, reached new highs for the year, and the General A's duplicated its peak price. Pennsylvania debenture 4s climbed to the year's best price and Union Pacific first 4s gained 5-8 and Boston and Maine 5s of 1955, 3-4 to reach new highs. Less active issues to reach new high ground included Ann Arbor 4s, Atlanta, Knoxville and Cincinnati 4s, Erie general liens 4s, Grand Trunk of Canada 7s, Great Northern 4 1-2s E, Illinois Central extension 3 1-2s, Lehigh Valley of New York 4 1-2s, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington 4s, and Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago and St. Louis 4 1-2s.

Central Pacific first 4s, Illinois Central 6 1-2s and Mobile and Ohio 4 1-2s, were sharply depressed.

A broad demand developed for American and Foreign Power 5s and American Telephone 5s of 1965, the latter climbing to 107 1-2, a new 1930 high price. New Orleans Public Service 5s A and B, New England Telephone and Telegraph 5s, Northern Ohio Traction and Light 6s, and Utility Power and Light 5 1-2s were other strong utility issues to register new highs. Federal Light and Traction debentures 6s slumped more than 2 points.

In the industrial section oil issues were well bought. Texas corporation 5s were very active. Shell Union Pipe Line 5s reached a new high. Lackawanna Steel 5s made a new peak. Cespedes Sugar 7 1-2s dropped 10 points, and with Container corporation 5s, were among the industrials at new lows.

Stock privilege issues were firm, and Philadelphia Coal and Iron 6s and Warner Brothers 6s, made good gains.

RADIO COOK STOVE USES INVISIBLE HEAT

SCHENECTADY (AP)—The day when the housewife can tune in her radio cookstove to bake the next meal is foreshadowed by a little glass dish in the General Electric laboratories here.

This dish hangs at the end of a wire. Believe it or not, without flame or means of heat of any visible sort in the same room, this dish his cooked the following:

One sausage. One fried egg. One baked apple. A batch of cookies. And water was boiled in the dish.

It was all done with the new, short wave vacuum tube, which sends out a radio wave about 20 feet long and having a frequency of 50 million cycles a second. The dish is suspended so that its contents pick up this intense radiation.

Many a man has a good memory for faces and a poor memory for debts.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE AWAKES

The Manger's Gift

There was a Star in the Christmas sky—
A great white Star—and a wind went by.

Midnight past. That hour of morn
When Mary's Son—the Christ—was born.

In a far-off land, in a far-off year,
Another child stood still with fear.

For the trees were goblin-black and high
And the great Star burned the eastern sky.
A dry twig snapped! She jumped and fled,
Like a startled hare, for the big barn shed
Within was the warmth which always lends
Itself to one in the home of friends.

She heard the dogs, in the darkness, shake
Their ears and yawn themselves awake.

She heard the horses munching hay—
The sorrel colt, the blacks, and the gray.

She heard a voice in the donkey's stall
Say: "It's the child. She loves us all."

She loved them all. In her heart she knew
That the tale of the Manger's Gift was true—

That, because of the Crib where He was born,
The dumb beasts spoke on Christmas morn.

So they told her all. (For they knew 'twould seem To her next day but a lovely dream!)

They told her every joy and pain
They had tried to tell before, in vain.

When the hour was spent they said good-by
The Star was low in the Christmas sky.

She walked the path to the house ahead—

Unbroke by whinny, or crow, or bark.

—Kadra Maysi, Summerville, S. C.

Mockingbird at Night

Once I wakened in the night
When everything was strange and still;
The moon was splashing silver light
Across my window-sill.

I put my hand out for a hand
To comfort me; no warm clasp came.—
The moonlight on the mirror-stand
Was like a silver flame.

I thought, "I wish the night would go."
I thought, "I wish that God were near . . ."
Then, from the linden tree below
Came music, sweet and clear.

It sprang up more than fountain-bright,
In notes familiar day had heard,
And all the terrors of the night
Were banished by a small gray bird.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES

The mole is one of the farmer's numerous friends. In loose soil, near the surface, the mole travels very much like a swimmer, throwing the soil to one side with powerful strokes and lifting it in little ridges with his body. But, when he works deep down in compact soil, he cannot cast this aside so easily but must push it along his tunnel to the surface, where it is thrown up in a large mole-hill.

The mole is a friend to the farmer and the gardener because it destroys harmful insects, and its fur is of fine quality. Millions of moleskins are imported from Europe every year; and our Oregon mole, with its purplish-black coat, is becoming more and more a favorite with the dealers.

One of the most interesting of our species is the star-nosed mole, which is not often seen but may be known at a glance by the numerous short feelers which form a fringe around the end of its nose. In grassy swamps it makes runways like the meadow mouse and spends much of its time above ground. It is active throughout the entire year, following earthworms, grubs, wire-worms and other insects to lower levels as winter approaches.

All of our moles do far more good than harm, the chief counts against them being the ridges they make while hunting for insects and the tunnels they provide for mice about the bases of fruit trees. Instead of killing the moles in a lawn, it is better, and often easier, to flatten their ridges with a roller.

The ridges raised by the mole are his hunting paths, which range widely just below the sod or soil crust; his real, living quarters being lower down, but connected with the shallow runways by passages slanting upward.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDEAWAKES

A Picnic

Dear Uncle Jed: It has been a long time since I have written to you. I am going to tell you about our picnic at Mason's Island. Mason's island is a little ways from Mystic. We went through Mystic when we went to Mason's island. My father took us over there in his big green truck.

I had a good time watching the cars go by. When we got to Mason's island I tried to put some old shoes on that I had brought along to go in the water with, but I couldn't get them on so we had to rip them open. After we got in the water, my brother was playing with some boards for boats. After a while he jumped out of the water just as quick as he could. I asked what the matter was. He said that a crab tried to bite his toe.

After a while we saw a lot of crabs. We didn't have any crab net so the folks tried to make one. My aunt took a piece of pork that was tied to a string and let it sink in the water, where the crab was and the crab would try to eat it, then she would pull it over the edge of the net and my mother pulled up the net and caught him. They had lots of fun trying to get crabs.

We saw something coming after my brother. My aunt told him to get out of the way. We thought it was a snapping turtle.

She pulled it out of the water with a hoe and we found out that it wasn't a turtle at all.

My cousin said it was a horse shoe crab. His tail was so sharp I didn't dare to touch it because I was afraid it would sting me.

A Pleasant Surprise

Dear Uncle Jed: I didn't join a playground this year and so was rather disappointed when all my friends went to the beach with the playgrounds. But of course I couldn't go with them as I didn't belong.

The morning dragged by. But a pleasant surprise awaited me. About noon a friend of mine came in for a visit. When he learned I wasn't to the beach he offered to take me. About two o'clock we started off to the beach. We arrived at the beach about 2:45 a. m. I had on my bathing suit under my dress so I purchased a bathhouse and was soon in the water with my friends. We had a lovely time splashing about. When the playgrounds left I went out to the large raft. Later I went and got dressed and then walked along the board walk. When I went back to the automobile it was time to go home. I was tired and well satisfied for I had as nice a time as I would have had if I went with the playground.

The Telegram

Dear Uncle Jed: I am writing a story hoping you and the Wideawake Circle will enjoy it. One morning as I was dressing, my mother called me. I went downstairs to see what she wanted. She gave me a telegram, I read it and it said:

Dear Lillian: I wish you would come and spend two weeks with me in New York.

I asked mother and she said "yes". So next night I left on a train for New York. I had a great time, but best of all was my ride on the subway. It was at the busiest hour, also. When I came home I told all my friends about it.

LILLIAN JODOIN, age 12.
Plainfield.

Only My Dream

Dear Uncle Jed: I am writing a story hoping you and the Wideawakes will enjoy reading it. The name of it is "Only My Dream." As I was walking through the woods one day I saw some Indians. The Indians painted their faces all different colors. When I saw the Indians I began to run. The Indians shouted, "Stop or we shoot!" I stopped and waited. The Indians came closer and closer. At last they reached me. They took me by the hand and we walked along.

A while later we arrived at the Indians' wigwams. I sat there worrying how I would get home.

Soon they gave me some food to eat. I ate it and later they sent me to bed.

The next morning my father came to the wigwam and called, "Tessie!" With a start I awoke and found myself on the floor beside my bed.

TESSIE CHMIEL, age 12.
Colchester.

In New York

Dear Uncle Jed: I am writing to tell the Wide-Awakes about my first visit to New York.

We left at 7.30 a. m. on Sunday morning and passed through several nice places. We arrived at the Grand Central station at 12.30 and went to a restaurant and ate and then got the boat to Staten Island. On the way over we saw the Statue of Liberty and several big boats going to Europe. Then the boat stopped at the pier and we waited a few minutes for my cousin to come in the car for us. Then we went to her house and stayed a few hours and went home.

This is my first letter to the Wide Awakes and I hope you will enjoy it.

RUSSELL V. BOYNTON, age 10.
Norwich.

The Autumn

Dear Uncle Jed: Now that the cool brisk autumn days are here again, I am writing to the Wide Awakes to see how you all passed through the long hot summer.

The fall is here again and it makes us feel more cheerful and more like going back to school again. The birds are preparing for their long flight to the south. The fields are not full of flowers as in the early summer, only the yellow golden rod is blowing in the gentle breeze. The trees have a beauty all their own with their bright colored leaves, it seems they are nodding and trying to smile in spite of the coming winter.

GRACE SNYDER,
R. D. 1, Willimantic.

At the Beach

Dear Uncle Jed: One day this summer my little boy friend invited me to go to Weekapaug with him, his mother and grandmother. We left here soon after dinner in their car with his mother driving. After a long lovely ride we arrived at the beach. My friends have a locker there so we hurried into our bathing suits and ran out into the water. We met some children from Hartford who are staying at the beach and we all had a wonderful time together. Late in the afternoon we got ready to go home. On our way back we stopped and had ice cream. We reached home quite late and very tired, but happy.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

A Dreadful Sight

Who loveth most the most doth fear
When danger threatens those most dear.

—Old Mother Nature.

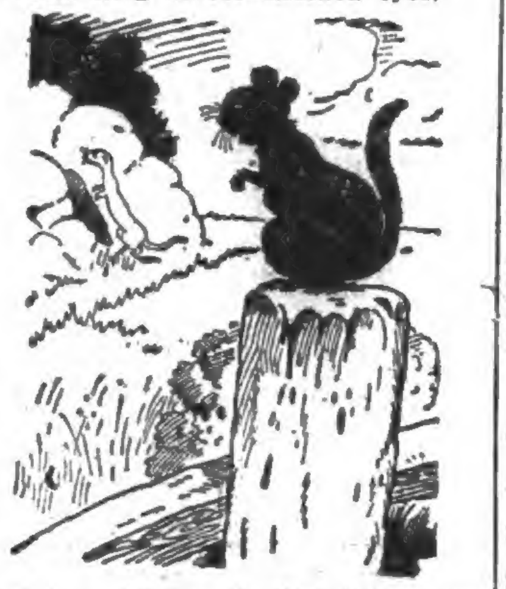
Impy the black Chipmunk had been away from home longer than usual. Not since there had been a little Mrs. Impy had he been away as long. He had been exploring; he had been looking the ground over for the winter's supply of nuts and seeds. He had discovered a beechnut tree and there were going to be very many beechnuts. Now Impy was hurrying home with the good news. From a fence-post he looked over to where the entrance to his home was hidden. He thought he might see little Mrs. Impy somewhere about. Almost at once he saw something moving. He got only a glimpse of a small person and he thought, of course, that it was little Mrs. Impy.

"I'll let her know I'm here," thought Impy, and opened his mouth to bark a greeting. But he didn't bark a greeting. Instead, he closed his mouth without uttering a sound. He began to shiver and he began to shake. That small person was not Mrs. Impy at all. It was a stranger whom he had never seen before. However, he needed no introduction; he knew who it was without being told. There could be no one else so slim, so quick-moving. It was Shadow the Weasel.

Now, in himself Shadow is not a dreadful sight. He is rather pretty. He moves with exceeding grace. So, as I have said, in himself he is not a dreadful sight. However, he was a dreadful sight to Impy, for he was right by Impy's home entrance. Yes, sir, he was right beside the little doorway that led down into Impy's home; and there was nothing that Impy could think of that could have been a more dreadful sight.

"He's found our home," thought Impy. "He's found our home and he's caught Frisky. I know it. I just know it! Oh dear! Oh dear! I don't care if he catches me now. Oh dear! Oh dear!"

Meanwhile, Impy did the very wisest thing that a Chipmunk could do. He sat perfectly still. He didn't move so much as one little whisker. He just sat there shivering and shaking inside and staring down at Shadow the Weasel with horror-stricken eyes.



It was a stranger he had never seen before

Shadow the Weasel was licking his lips. Yes, sir, he was licking his lips. He had just come out of Impy's home, just as Impy had thought. Impy was sure that Shadow had killed little Mrs. Impy. She had probably been at work down there in the home and Shadow had surprised her there and caught her. It was too dreadful to think of. Impy had to think of it.

Presently Shadow sat up on his haunches, as he sometimes does; and with those black beady eyes of his he looked this way and he looked that way and he looked the otherway. He looked straight at Impy, but he didn't see him, for Impy didn't move. Then Shadow yawned. He yawned twice. After which he bounded away in the direction of the old stone wall on the edge of the Old Orchard, where Impy was born and where his father, Striped Chipmunk, still lived.

For a long time after Shadow had gone Impy sat there on that fence-post. He was no longer afraid for himself, but, oh, how he did dread going into that home! You see, he was so sure of what he would find there and it was too dreadful to think of.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

It is doubtful whether there will be a talking picture this season or for any seasons that will equal the drama of "Scarlet Pages," a First National and Vitaphone production in which Elsie Ferguson, Marian Nixon and Grant Withers portray the starring roles.

Elsie Ferguson, who makes her talking picture debut in "Scarlet Pages," portrays the role of the mother and brilliant criminal lawyer. Marian Nixon is seen as the cynical suspicious girl who is on trial for murder, while Grant Withers plays the part of her sweetheart.

Palace Theatre

The Dough Boys, featuring Buster Keaton and Cliff Edwards, one of the funniest bits of screen entertainment of the year, opens at the Palace Theatre today on the great double feature bill, which also includes the greatest of all underworld dramas, Czar of Broadway.

Buster Keaton, the man who never smiles but who makes millions laugh, is at his best in this satire of the war from which all unpleasant scenes have been removed. This is a story of a millionaire, who unexpectedly finds himself on the firing lines. Keaton runs the gamut of a long series of side-splitting situations in which he ends up as the hero of the regiment without knowing what it's all about. This is a story of the World war from a decidedly humorous viewpoint.

On the same bill, The Czar of Broadway, in which the clever maneuvers of the underworld characters in their attempts to run the governments of our cities, is a revelation which will cause many of us to gasp. The thrilling situations which confront a young newspaper man who attempts to get the "low down" on the underworld add greatly to the entertainment. A cast of great favorites makes this one of the outstanding features of the seasons. Among those who appear are John Wray, Betty Compson, Claud Allister and Edmund Breese.

This great double bill will be shown at the Palace through Saturday and is without doubt one of the finest double bills yet offered in this city. Each of the features are playing in all other cities as single features.

Coming to the Palace Sunday for four days the greatest of all dramas, All Quiet on the Western Front, the book that has been read by millions has at last been brought to the screen, a picture that will live in your minds for a long time.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

American Chain Company, Bridgeport.

In 1902 a company was organized to manufacture Weed tire chains, then a necessity for automobiles, as they are today. A part of the tire chains were manufactured in the chain department of the Oneida Community, Ltd., Oneida, N. Y. Control of the type of chain required in the tire chains was secured by purchasing this chain department and transferring it to Bridgeport. With the particular chain wanted, there was also secured a considerable amount of business and equipment for other types of weldless chains.

At that time it was still necessary to purchase one other important part of these tire chains—cross chains—from the Standard Chain company, Pittsburgh, then the largest manufacturers of chains in the world. This company held certain patent rights by which they controlled a process for the electric welding of chain.

The automotive industry and Weed tire chains developed side by side—one assisting the other—and both increasingly by leaps and bounds. In 1916 the Weed Chain Tire Grip company purchased the business and factories of the Standard Chain company, and the name of the combination was changed to the American Chain company, Inc.

Purchase of this company provided complete facilities for the entire manufacture of the Weed tire chains. It also brought with it a large and profitable business in welded steel and iron chain, which is carried on by a separate division of the company.

It is interesting to note that the Standard Chain company was also a combination of chain companies in 1900. The combination included the John C. Schmidt Chain company, Ness Chain company, Barker Chain and Wagon company, the P. Hayden Saddlery company (founded in 1825 and the originators of high grade iron chain in America) and others.

When it was no longer necessary to look to outside sources for chain from which to assemble the tire chains, other companies were added to the American Chain combination to provide a source for the raw materials used in the chain manufacture and to increase the line of automotive accessories.

For instance, the Page Steel and Wire company, one of the associate companies, provides rods and wire for the chain department, and in turn the chain department provides chain for all of the other associate companies. In addition, the Page company manufactures an extensive line of fencing, highway guard and general wire products, and, as these were acquired by the purchase of that company, they continue along as separate divisions.

The Highland Iron and Steel company was acquired to provide a source of supply of high grade chain iron, etc. With this company came extensive business in bar iron of various grades.

Automobile bumpers were added to the accessory line, and this required other raw materials not then made by the company. To fill this need, a large malleable plant was erected and the Reading Steel Casting company was purchased. The latter furnish steel and bronze castings.

The Reading line includes the well-known Pratt & Cady line of iron and bronze valves and Reading steel valves and fittings which are now sold under separate divisions.

The parent company had need for a large amount of wire cable in various sizes and to fill this need, the American Cable company, Newark, was added to the list of associated companies. It was this company that furnished the cables for the Philadelphia-Camden bridge, the Detroit-Windsor international bridge and the Mt. Hope, R. I. bridge. All of the wire for the cables in these bridges was supplied by the Page Steel and Wire company. A considerable amount of cable production is absorbed in the manufacture of automobile brake cables.

Canadian trade is supplied with many of the products of the associated companies through the Dominion Chain Company, Ltd., Niagara Falls, Ont., one of the American Chain group.

All of the associated companies require special machinery and these are made at the factory of the associate company known as Andrew C. Campbell, Inc., Waterbury.

The addition of Wright Manufacturing company, Rawlings Window Lift division, Rubber Shock Insulator corporation, Manley Manufacturing company and the Ford Chain Block company, rounds out a list of products which is unique in the business world—an endless chain—each link depending on the other. The entire group forms the American Chain company and associate companies.

The present officers are: W. B. Lashar, president; W. T. Morris, vice president and general manager; W. F. Wheeler, treasurer; W. M. Wheeler, secretary.

POETRY

Autumn Orchard

Honor to the man, and fame,
Who this apple gave its name—
Richer in the word it bears
Than the gems a princess wears.

Poets are we all who can
But pronounce the Astrachan,
Or on "Russet" pause a while,
Utter, roundly, "Nonpareil."

His an ear for gracious sound
Who these flavored titles found;
Mothers covet such as these
For the girl babes on their knees.

Tell me when October blusters
Of the Greenings hung in clusters
Or, to make me more beholden
Speak of Spies or Grimes Golden.

Carve his deed on college wall
Who has charmed the ears of all,
Better naming fruit by far
Than any savant named a star.

Tender, tempting, is the flush
In the name of Maidenblush;
Choicer words I do not know
Than Wealthy, Winesap, Baldwin, Snow.

Wealth of autumn have we here,
Scent and flavor, richness, cheer;
Wine and spices much abound
In the kingly apple's sound.

Well it is that man should eat
Food with names, like juices, sweet.
These are names most good for man:
Wealthy, Winesap, Astrachan.

—Walt, in Detroit News.

Recompense

All day I cannot find you anywhere,
All through the house and even in the nook
Where there are things that tell me of the fair,
Sweet soul of you. All in and out I look,
Far in the garden where gladioli,
Your favorite flowers, are; and in the wood
Where your eyed thrush so plaintively pipes high
As if for you in sylvan solitude.

I cannot find you, dear, but when my sight
Is weary all with search, and feet are still
At last in the cool quiet of the night;
And my hands scare unloosed from prayer; at will
You come to me in dreams, my life to bless,
Bearing your heart's true offering — happiness.
—Grace Wight Buckle, in Boston Transcript

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"How come you're working today? Don't you know what the Fourth of July is?"

"No, I'm not good at fractions."—The Hot Slug.

"And wot was you thinkin' of doing wiv your boy, Mrs. Smith?"

"Well, 'e's that fond of animals 'is father was thinkin' of making a butcher of 'im."—Tatler.

"I was sorry to hear of the death of your wife. She was a good woman."

"She was that, all right. She always hit me with the soft end of the broom."—Pathfinder.

The farmer was angry. "What're ye comin' home with your milk pail empty fer? Didn't the old cow give anything?"

"Surely you're not the big boy who lived next door to me when I was a little girl?"

"No; I'm the little boy who lived next door to you when you were a big girl.—Optimist.

"Hand over your money, or I'll blow your brains out," was the demand.

"Blow away," was the calm reply. "You can live in London without brains, but you must have money."—Tit-Bits.

In a kindergarten class, flags were shown, and in answer to a question a little girl gave the response that was expected of her: "This is the flag of my country."

"And what is the name of your country?" was the next question.

"'Tis of thee," was the prompt reply.—Pullman News.

George Jr. returned from school disgruntled. "Dad," he complained, "I got in trouble at school today an' it was all your fault."

"How's that?" inquired his father.

"'Member I asked you last night how much a million dollars was?"

"Yes, I remember," replied George Sr.

NORWICH DRIVER REPORTS GRAZE RATHER THAN DISOBEY THE LAW

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 17—Desmond Murphy, R. F. D., No. 1, Norwich, informed the New London police tonight that he may have been the cause of damage to an automobile on Main street here and as he did not want to be considered as evading responsibility, he made known that fact at police headquarters. Murphy said that while driving on the congested street a truck crowded him and he believed his automobile might not only have grazed the heavier vehicle, but that a private car might have been slightly hit because of Murphy attempting to avoid a collision with the truck. When Murphy passed through Main street he was en route from Norwich to Ocean Beach.

The Providence police today requested the New London police to be on the lookout for an automobile carrying New York registration, 8M-5963. The auto is transporting occupants who were implicated in a hold-up.

WILFRED COUTURE'S CAR TURNS UP IN SOMERVILLE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 17.— Wilfred Couture, 127 Norwood avenue, has recovered the automobile owned by him and which was stolen in New London Sept. 7. Couture parked his auto on Huntington street, but when he returned about an hour later it had been stolen. No trace of the auto was obtained until yesterday when Couture received a letter from Dominick Miradi, Somerville, Mass., requesting information as to whether Aubrey MacFarlane had been authorized to sell the auto. When the message was received by Couture he went to police headquarters. The police of Somerville were communicated with. It then developed that MacFarlane had sold the auto to Miradi, who had made a down payment of $20 and had agreed to make additional monthly payments until the purchase price had been liquidated. Couture went to Somerville and recovered the auto. MacFarlane is a solider at Fort Wright, Fisher's Island. He was in Portland the week of Sept. 7th and being without funds to pay his transportation back to the island fort, he obtained his carfare at the barracks in Portland. Arriving in New London, MacFarlane did not continue to the fort, but went to Huntington street where he selected the auto from among several parked there and drove away in it.

Easy to look at

THERE'S a harmony between the natural loveliness of this modern age and the natural, mild goodness of Camels. And if you find them keeping company, don't be surprised.

Camel has given the world the luxury of a naturally mild cigarette—a cigarette that preserves all the refreshing fragrance of the choice, mild tobaccos from which it is made—a cigarette that is delightfully smooth, but never flat, never parched, never tasteless.

Modern smokers are awake to the fact that mere flatness doesn't mean mildness. That's one reason there's such a swing to Camels. Watch it right in your own crowd. Join them in Camels—a smoke that's enjoyable all the way—all the time.

Raymond LaFountaine, of Hartford, as deacon, Rev. Arthur Sullivan as sub-deacon, Rev. Joseph Griffen, of Hartford, as master of ceremonies and Rev. George Donahue was seated in the sanctuary.

The altar was beautifully decorated with asters, ferns and palms. Mrs. Farrell, organist of the church, had charge of the music.

The bride was charming in white satin, wore a veil of duchess lace, caught with orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. Her bridesmaid was most attractively gowned in yellow silk net over silk crepe. She wore a powder blue chiffon hat and carried a bouquet of tea roses.

After the wedding ceremony there was a breakfast and reception at the home of the bride. Later, Mr. and Mrs. Higgins left for New York city to sail on the Old Dominion for a wedding trip to Norfolk and Virginia Beach, Va.

LIFE PRISON SENTENCE FOR BOGUE ON SECOND DEGREE MURDER PLEA

Wearing a suit of khaki overalls, Stanley S. Bogue, 34, of Old Mystic, stood before Judge Christopher L. Avery in the superior court at New London Wednesday afternoon and pleaded guilty to murder in the second degree.

Judge Avery promptly pronounced the statutory sentence of imprisonment for life in the state prison at Wethersfield and Bogue went back into the pen in the court room, whence he was shortly taken by deputy sheriffs and will remain in the jail at New London until he is taken to Wethersfield.

Wednesday morning the grand jury had returned a true bill of first degree murder against Bogue for killing Mrs. Eva J. Roberts, 52, wife of Medrick Roberts of Mystic, and Ole Ostberg, 65, a lodger of the Roberts house, both of whom he attacked with an axe and crushed their skulls on the night of Aug. 9 at the Roberts home.

In moving to have Bogue put to plea in court, State Attorney Arthur M. Brown addressed Judge Avery and stated that he felt the grand jury could not do otherwise than it had done in view of the evidence presented before it in the Bogue case, but he felt that there was considerable question as to the degree of premeditation on the part of Bogue. Mr. Brown went on to say that he felt the ends of justice would be met if Bogue should plead guilty to second degree murder, which he understood the man was now ready to do. Bogue would then go to state's prison for life and there would be little probability that he would ever secure his release.

Bogue was then called from the pen, the information was read to him by County Clerk John H. Walker and the accused man made his plea of guilty to second degree murder, after a whispered word from Public Defender E. W. Perkins, who has been his counsel in the case and who stood near him as the charge was read.

Bogue is the self-confessed murderer of Ostberg and the Roberts woman, jealousy being the motive, as Ostberg had supplanted Bogue in the affections of the woman.

The grand jury took but a short time Wednesday morning to reach its decision. Civil Engineer George E. Pitcher of this city was the first witness before it, presenting a plan of the Roberts house and eight or nine photographs. One of these showed the kitchen with the table and chairs where the three people were sitting before Bogue made his murderous attack on the other two. There was also a view of the cellar, showing the heaped up dirt which Bogue had dug out when he made an unsuccessful attempt to bury the bodies in the cellar.

Others to testify before the grand jury were Coroner Edward G. McKay of this city, State Policeman Arthur Whitmarsh and Sergeant George Webber, Medrick Roberts, husband of the dead woman, Dr. E. L. Douglas, medical examiner for the town of Groton, James Collins and Bogue himself.

The eighteen men constituting the grand jury returned their finding shortly before the noon recess. Attorney Thomas E. Troland of New London was foreman.

According to evidence in the hands of the authorities, Bogue left the Roberts house after he had failed to bury the bodies and went to a field some distance away where he tried to commit suicide by slashing both his wrists with a safety razor. Failing in this, he then walked eight miles to the Crandall farm, where he told his story and his arrest by the state police followed. One of the pictures made by Mr. Pitcher showed the place where the razor was found in the field.

NORWICH CHAPTER SENDS MEMBERS TO MOOSEHAVEN

Twelve years ago, Mrs. Ida Eccleston became a member of Norwich chapter, No. 124, Women of Mooseheart Legion. At that time, both Mr and Mrs. Eccleston were in good health and their prospects looked very bright, as they were endowed with a goodly share of worldly goods. As time passed on, Mr. Eccleston lost health and consequently his position. Sickness ate up the nest egg they had saved for their old age. Recently Norwich chapter was notified of their condition. It was then that Norwich chapter demonstrated just what the defending circle means to a member of this organization. The Legionaires provided food and clothing for Mrs. Eccleston and her husband and started plans to send them to the Haven for aged members. Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. Eccleston left Willimantic for their home at Moosehaven, which is situated on the banks of the St. John's river, amid beautiful foliage, flowers and tropical fruits. Here the world-problem of old age dependency has been solved. In a pretty three-room bungalow with a small garden, Mr. and Mrs. Eccleston will spend their remaining years in peace, happiness and contentment.

WITHDRAWAL IN SUIT TO RECOVER AUCTION PAYMENT

Withdrawal without costs from the docket of the superior court has been filed with Clerk John H. Walker in the suit of George H. and Francis Gilman, both of this city, against Gilbert S. Raymond, receiver of the New London County Agricultural society.

This was a suit brought for $2,500 paid by the Gilmans as a deposit on their bid at auction for the fairgrounds at East Great Plain. The suit was never tried, but other actions involving the sale of the fairgrounds to the Gilmans went to the supreme court of errors, resulting in the Gilmans being forced to buy the fairgrounds.

Lewis A. Mell of Baltic is a freshman at Rutgers college this fall. There are 350 in the class, which is the smallest entering class in the past six years, due to increased rigidity of entrance requirements.

The recent completion of three new dormitories, William Hopkins Leupp hall, Mary Bogert Pell hall and Wessells Memorial hall, provides campus residence with the most modern facilities for the entire group.

Her friends are many, and they learn with interest of her choice to enter the religious life.

MARGARET FULLER'S BOOK WINS EMPHATIC PRAISE

Concerning the latest book by Margaret Fuller, of Norwich, the eminent critic and scholar, Dr. James Hosmer Penniman, of Philadelphia, writes:

In The Golden Roof, Margaret Fuller completes her inspired and inspiring trilogy, the two previous volumes being Alma and Her Son.

According to Worcester, a trilogy is a series of three compositions, each complete, yet with a mutual relation. Though the characters and scenes of the books are different, the underlying motive of all is mother love, so that they form a charming trilogy on this enduring theme. Alma, although she has no child, is a mother pure and simple in the fullest sense of the words pure and simple. Laura in Her Son is a mother of character and decision who impresses her will upon her son, and he has inherited traits that are hers. How often in fiction children have no physical or mental resemblance to their parents!

And now to complete the trilogy of motherhood comes Nikole, deliciously euphonious name of tinkling sound. In The Golden Roof, Nikole, is a young girl on an island in Denmark and her chief desire is to have a little boy. She exemplifies the beauty of a life devoted to service, first to her grandmother and to an old princess whom she nurses, then to her young and gifted husband whom she supports by massaging millionairesses during his long years of the study of medicine in Paris and Vienna. He goes to Rome as an expert specialist and dies there at the time that the long desired little boy is born to them in Paris.

But the story does not end here. It moves steadily to an inevitable and joyous close.

Those who know Paris as well as those who do not know Paris cannot but take pleasure in the charming pictures of Paris, and of the Latin Quarter and its friendships.

Miss Fuller's style is exquisitely simple and direct. Accurate observation is wedded to felicity of expression. She is particularly fortunate in her use of color words.

CARPENTER BRINGS SUIT FOR INJURIES IN CRASH

James B. Johnstone of this city is the plaintiff in a superior court suit brought for $15,000 damages against Charles E. Lamb of this city, doing business as H. F. & A. J. Dawley Co., and returnable in October.

Johnstone, who was a passenger on a truck belonging to Patrick F. Sweeney, when it was in collision with a Dawley company truck, alleges that he had his right leg broken, was in the hospital for a long time, lost eight weeks wages as a carpenter and will suffer for a long time yet from his injuries.

The Dawley truck was driven at the time of the collision by Frederick D. Vergason, Jr., and the collision happened Sept. 12, 1929, at Barrell curve in the town of Sprague, on the road between Occum and Baltic.

Ellis Ruley, another employe of Sweeney, who was also injured, has previously brought a damage suit for $25,000 against the Dawley company.

CORONER MAKES FINDING THAT EXONERATES COUTURE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 17.—Coroner Arthur G. Bill this afternoon gave out his finding in the sudden death of Donald Smith, Hartford young man, who was struck by a Thames River line truck Sept. 8, and died within a few hours of his injuries at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam. Coroner Bill finds that the accident and death was not caused by the criminal act, carelessness or negligence of Leo J. Couture, Norwich, driver of the Thames line truck that struck Smith.

The accident happened on the new concrete road at Wauregan, just north of the Milk Bar, as Smith stepped away from the side of a truck that was about to tow away a big cement mixer that was loaded on a trailer. Smith apparently did not hear the approaching truck, because the motor of the other truck was running. He was employed as a timekeeper by the Gammino Construction Co., and was but 20 years of age.

There were 81 telephones installed and 75 removed, compared with 77 installed and 83 removed in August a year ago. Post office receipts for the month amounted to $8,197, a decrease of 10 per cent from the total of $9,168 in the same month a year ago.

UNITED WORKERS FACE BIG UNEMPLOYMENT PROBLEM

Because of the response of the public to its letter of appeal, the United Workers of Norwich were able last year to successfully continue its community service.

Wisely and effectively have all its departments functioned; caring for the aged and very young in comfortable homes, giving help to those in need and corrective treatment to the mentally or physically ill.

The problem of the unemployed is one of the most important and perplexing, with which the relief department has to contend, states one of its officers. Always serious, this problem is now more so than ever, owing to the business depression during the past year. Another item of relief work is the fresh air branch which provides outings for individuals and sometimes for whole families who otherwise would never be able to find relief from the stifling summer heat.

These are but two of many worthy objects which make demands for which the income from the friends already given to the United Workers is not sufficient. So the public is asked as fellow workers to respond to the appeal that is being made.

Public aid is desired in furthering the best interest of the town by helping to support the agency which carries the responsibility of so large a proportion of the relief work of the town of Norwich.

Plans were discussed for the annual meeting to be held in October. It was reported at the meeting that about 250 delegates attended the triennial congress held in Plymouth the first week in September.

FORMER GROTON TAX COLLECTOR GIVEN YEAR'S SUSPENDED SENTENCE

Henry Marquardt, former tax collector of the borough of Groton for many years, pleaded guilty in the superior court at New London Wednesday afternoon to the charge of embezzlement while he was in office of tax collector. Through his counsel, Attorney Morris Lubchansky, Mr. Marquardt waived the reading of the complaint, which put the amount of embezzlement at $10,000.

State Attorney Arthur M. Brown moved for sentence, stating to the court, in which Judge C. L. Avery was presiding that this was one of those cases which were appearing more frequently than they ought to in Connecticut municipalities. The accused, he said, was a man of fine family connections, but had been found short in his accounts as tax collector. Possibly this had been due somewhat to carelessness or laxness, but full restitution had been made so that the borough would not suffer any loss,' but the amount of the embezzlement had been considerable.

The state attorney recommended that probation might be given in this case and Judge Avery passed the sentence of a year in jail, execution of the sentence to be suspended and the accused to be in the care of Probation Officer Mansfield, with the costs of probation to be paid by Marquardt.

The bond of $3,000 was called in the case of Joseph Martin, one of two alleged pickpockets who had tried to ply their trade in New London, on Aug. 16, 1930. The bond was given by the National Surety company of New York.

John F. Ryan, a man with several aliases, accused with Martin, pleaded not guilty and elected to be tried by jury. His trial was set down for next Tuesday, when he will be defended by Attorney J. J. Floyd.

State Attorney Brown moved for a nolle and this was entered in the case of Theodore Schultz of this city. The state attorney said he had found it would be impossible to obtain the necessary evidence to obtain a conviction.

Schultz was charged with illegal transportation of liquor, having been arrested on May 23 on Talman street in this city when two gallons of alcohol were found in the machine he was driving. Otto Rosine was arrested with him, but his case was disposed of in the lower court.

The Schultz case concluded the business of the criminal session for this week and adjournment was taken to next Tuesday morning.

"I was troubled with pimples for more than three years. They were red and hard and disfigured my face. The pimples itched and burned causing me to scratch, and when I did they festered.

"I used different remedies but they did not help me in the least. I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. ENTERPRISE SMASHES ALL AMERICA'S CUP RECORDS IN FOURTH DECISIVE VICTORY

Defeated Shamrock V by Margin of 5 m., 13 s.—Covered 30 Mile Course in 3h., 10 m., 13s., Bettering by 3m., 5s. the Record Made by Columbia in 1901—In the Four Days of Racing Shamrock Was in Front Only Twice—Out of 38 Races That Have Been Sailed British Challengers Have Been Victorious Only Three Times—On Two of These Occasions, in 1871 and 1920, American Defenders Were Disabled—Lipton Says "I Willna Challenge Again".

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 18—(AP)—In a race that smashed all records for America's cup competition, Enterprise today completed the route of the last of Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrocks on the high seas and the classic emblem of world yatching supremacy remains safely in the custody of Uncle Sam for the 80th year since it was captured in British waters.

The slim, white and bronze bodied cup defender, beautifully sailed again by her millionaire skipper, Harold Sterling Vanderbilt, ran away from Shamrock V., in the first 10 miles of the 30 mile triangular course, thus settling matters before the contest was a third over. The American sloop had little trouble holding enough margin to capture the fourth and deciding race of the series, concluded in choppy seas and a breeze that blew up to 18 knots, tilting the racers at a rakish angle.

Enterprise was the victor by exactly five minutes and seventeen seconds, covering the course in the record time of three hours, 10 minutes, 13 seconds.

This was not only by far the fastest race of the 1930 series, but was the fastest 30 miles ever sailed in the 60 years since British first challenged for the cup in American waters in 1870.

Enterprise's elapsed time surpassed by three minutes, five seconds the former cup record of 3:13:18, set over a triangular course by the American sloop, Columbia, in winning the second race of the 1901 series from Shamrock II off Sandy Hook. It was short however, of the world's records for racing under similar conditions set by the Erstwhile cup candidate Yankee at 2 hours, 48 minutes, 35 seconds, in a 15 knot breeze during the trials this August off Newport. On that same day, Enterprise did better than three hours for the 30 miles course.

The winner's margin today of nine minutes on the first leg, beat to windward, in which she left Shamrock a mile and a half astern, clinched the race and was more than sufficient to offset the substantial gains of the challenger in the two subsequent legs.

The big green sloop, finishing with her best exhibition, closed more than a half mile of the gap in the breach to the 20 mile marker. She footed along beautifully and continued to gain on the run home but she did not have a chance to overhaul her distant rival. Shamrock's elapsed time was 3:15:30.

Enterprise swept majestically across the finishing mark, her sails full-bellied and her crew alertly at their posts, in a characteristic display of efficiency, regardless of the siren blasts of victorious acclamation in their ears and the knowledge that the cup was clinched.

Shamrock, trailing by nearly a full mile, plunged gamely toward the finish. She had put on a fine comeback, after a disastrous getaway, but it amounted to nothing more than a gallant gesture.

As a matter of fact, Shamrock V never had much chance from start to finish of one of the most one-sided and unexciting yachting contests ever waged with the historic "old mug" at stake.

The 31-year quest of the gallant old Irish baronet, Sir Thomas Lipton, ended where it began—with American seamanship and boat-designing skill superior in every vital particular.

Not only was the sweeping triumph of Enterprise a final blow to the hopes of Lipton and a keen disappointment to the thousands who had for sentiment's sake hoped he would at last come through to win, but it was a climax to the smashing series of setbacks administered to British challengers by American yachtsmen.

It used to be that "Britannia ruled the waves," but since 1871, fourteen successive challenges by Scotch, Canadian, English and Irish sailormen have been turned back with little or no glory to the losers, all seeking the queer-looking, vase-like silver mug that the schooner America brought back to the United States in 1851.

Out of 38 races that have been sailed,

JOCELYN LEE FILES CROSS COMPLAINT FOR DIVORCE

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Jocelyn Lee, screen actress, today filed an answer and cross complaint for divorce, denying charges of her husband, Luther A. Reed, film director, that she had created scenes in the hotel at Agua Caliente, Mexico, and hurled dishes and glasses at him when she was in a fit of rage.

She asked custody of their two minor children, also sought by Reed. They married in Agua Caliente last June 15.

In answering the original suit filed a week ago by her husband, Miss Lee said the director frequently had subjected her to beatings with his fist. She also said he was addicted to intoxicating liquors.

Denying responsibility for the Agua Caliente episode where Reed declared they were ordered by police to leave the hotel bungalow, Miss Lee said the outbreak followed Reed's attempt to take money from her.

She asked all community property, estimated at $100,000, be awarded to her, in addition to $750 for court costs and $5,000 for attorney's fees.

Reed formerly was married to Naomi Childers, early screen star.

$20,000,000 UNEMPLOYMENT RELIEF FUND IN CANADA

OTTAWA, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Without a division, the senate tonight ratified the government bill to establish a fund of $20,000,000 for unemployment relief.

Senator James Murdock, former minister of labor for Canada, introduced an amendment calling for fair wages and an eight-hour day on all construction programs initiated under the scheme, but he later withdrew it. In its effect, the amendment was similar to one proposed in the commons by J. S. Woodworth (Lab. Winnipeg North-Centre). This was defeated.

MIDDLETOWN MAN INDICTED FOR FIRST DEGREE MURDER

MIDDLETOWN, Sept. 18.—(AP)—A first degree murder indictment today was returned against John Zlatohlavek, 66, by a grand jury here, after three hours' deliberation in connection with the fatal shooting of his wife, Anna, on Sept. 8. COSTE AND BELLONTE ARRIVE IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Sept. 18.— (AP)—Captain Dieudonne Coste and Lieutenant Maurice Bellonte of France, Paris-to-New York fliers, flew into Chicago from Detroit today and heard another noisy welcome, but missed part of the intended festivities by late arrival.

They were due at 3 o'clock and were to have been driven through the loop along the route followed a few weeks ago by Admiral Richard E. Byrd. Their ship did not come down until almost 4:30, however, and they were taken directly to their hotel for a banquet attended by army, navy and civilian notables.

$50,000 BREACH OF PROMISE SUIT BY DARIEN WOMAN

BRIDGEPORT, Sept. 18.— (AP) — Claiming that Eugene M. Tolles, 74-year-old Norwalk widower, purchased her a $1,000 diamond engagement ring and then postponed the wedding date three times until June 12, 1929, when he refused to marry her, Miss Susan Elmira McGuinness, 35, blonde Darien dressmaker, opened a $50,000 breach of promise suit before a jury and Judge Alfred C. Baldwin in the superior court today.

In the answer to the complaint, read to the jury by Leo Davis, attorney for the defense, Mr. Tolles claimed that the marriage agreement had been made under the conditions that Miss McGuinness was to have exhibited no loss of temper and was to have conducted herself in a "reasonable manner" both of which conditions he claims were violated.

TRAGIC DEATH OF AVIATRIX RUTH ALEXANDER REVEALED SHE WAS THREE-MONTH BRIDE

SAN DIEGO, Calif., Sept. 18.—(AP)—The airplane crash that cost the life of Ruth Alexander, noted aviatrix, resulted in discovery late today that the 24-year-old flier was the three-month bride of Robert A. Elliott, reserve navy air pilot.

Miss Alexander was killed this morning a few minutes after she took off from San Diego on a contemplated transcontinental flight to New York. Taking off in heavy fog she ploughed into a hill four miles from the airport.

Discovery of the young woman's marriage, June 21, was made by officers who searched her hotel room here after her death.

Papers in the room included a marriage certificate, an endearing letter to her young husband, another to her mother, and instructions, in case of her death, for a simple funeral.

The marriage certificate showed the couple was wed in Yuma, Ariz. In applying for the license the aviatrix gave her name as Ruth L. Blaney, her maiden name. She had been divorced from her first husband, Mack Alexander.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY WERE AT THE LOWEST EBB IN JULY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Inactive business conditions were described today by the federal reserve board as "more pronounced in July, the latest month for which comprehensive data are available."

The regular monthly bulletin issued by the board today estimated that the number of workers employed in factories and mines and on the railroads decreased by 1,500,000 during the year ending July 30 or by about 14 per cent.

As for August, the reserve board reported an increase in the volume of reserve bank credit and a growth in the demand for currency amounting to $52,000,000. Despite the increase in circulation of money last month it was stated there was $300,000,000 less money in circulation than the August average of the preceding seven years.

The "inactive condition of business" in July was said to have been "true of production and factories and mines and in agriculture; of employment; of the construction industry; and of both domestic and foreign trade." The course of commodity prices, both wholesale and retail, continued downward also in July.

PROPOSAL OF SOLUTION OF UNEMPLOYMENT PROBLEM

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 18.—(AP) — William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, suggested as a solution of the unemployment problem the establishment of reserve funds for labor similar to those maintained for dividends in an address today before the Newark Kiwanis club.

Such a system, he said, would mean choosing an orderly and stabilized industrial program, instead of a "paternalistic form of government." He advocated accurate surveys of markets on the part of industry to make possible the balancing of production, in conjunction with unemployment funds jointly created through mutual interest.

The economic tide will turn, he predicted, when masses of people begin to buy. Although wage reductions and unemployment "have severely decreased" the buying power of workers, he said, wage standards have been maintained.

Satterfield. He was bailed for $15,000 for his appearance October 4.

Maryland Democrats Renominate Ritchie

Anti-Prohibition Plank in Platform Hits at Federal Centralization—Firm for State Rights

BALTIMORE, Sept. 18.—(AP)—The Maryland democratic convention today formally renominated Governor Albert C. Ritchie, unopposed for a fourth term, and adopted a platform containing an anti-prohibition plank.

A move to have the convention endorse Ritchie for the democratic nomination for president in 1932 was forestalled by the governor himself, who made public a letter on the eve of the convention:

. . . That the proceedings "should not be diverted from the issues of the present campaign in this state"

Senator Millard E. Tydings, the convention chairman, referred to Governor Ritchie as "the best governor in the United States and one of the three or four foremost democrats in the nation."

The prohibition plank hit at federal centralization, and stated that "we believe that the necessary steps should be taken to turn the whole subject (of prohibition) back to the states, so that each state may have the opportunity of settling it in accordance with the wishes of its own people."

"In the meantime," said the platform, "we believe that the Volstead act should be amended so as to permit the manufacture and sale of beer and light wines where permitted by local law."

HOOVER GREETS DELEGATES TO CONGRESS OF THE FIDAC

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.— (AP) — Representatives of 8,000,000 former brothers-in-arms now pledged to ideals of international peace were greeted officially today by President and Mrs. Hoover.

They were the delegates to the eleventh annual congress of the Fidac, an inter-allied federation of World war veterans.

Standing with the president on the spacious south lawn of the mansion, Mrs. Hoover welcomed the guests to a reception and lawn party. Among them were many uniforms of high American military officials, as well as members of the cabinet and other government dignitaries.

The reception followed the first plenary session of the congress, where, as throughout the day, tokens of war memories were plentiful. Many of the delegates bore marks of their service, wounds or decorations.

In memorial Continental hall — where some of the Washington arms conference meetings were held— the congress was opened by Fred W. Abbot, president of the Fidac, who stressed the aim of the organization "to demand and insist" that the peace obtained by the sacrifices of the last soldiers be maintained "at any price and by any and all honorable means."

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 18.—(AP)—A hunt by boat and airplane was launched today for Mrs. Abby Stewart Cooley, of Waterbury, Conn., when relatives learned the 72-year-old grandmother had dropped her knitting and gone out for a solo swim off Prospect beach.

Just about as hope was being abandoned, an airplane pilot spotted her about three miles out in the sound. He notified the woman's son-in-law, Grove W. Palen, who set out in a motorboat and overtook her in the final half mile of her swim from the beach to Sperry light, a distance roughly of four miles. After demurring at first, Mrs. Cooley accepted the invitation to ride back.

MITCHEL FIELD, N. Y., Sept. 18—(AP)—Three long-term prisoners escaped from the army prison here today after overpowering a guard and knocking unconscious another prisoner who attempted to assist him.

Military authorities gave their names as George F. Polito, 19, William E. Townsend, 23, and Charels E. Brue, 28, all of whom had been transferred from Fort Jay on Governor's Island to lay out a polo field.

Several hours later, two men in civilian clothes pointed a sawed-off shot gun at Frank Smith, of East Hempstead, N. Y., and forced him to drive them from Garden City to New York. At the same time, two companions drove away in another car. The men got out of the car on the east side of New York and Smith reported the incident to police headquarters. The gun which they left in Smith's car was identified as belonging to the prison.

EXPLICIT STATEMENT BY REP. NOMINEE ROGERS OF HIS STAND ON DRY PROBLEM

HARTFORD, Sept. 18—(AP)—Lieut. Gov. Ernest E. Rogers, today answered the question as to whether he is wet or a dry with a "statements of facts." Personally a total abstainer, he has never, he says, questioned the right of other individuals "to exercise a like right of 'self determination' by making use of liquors in a proper manner."

Regarding the 18th amendment, Lieut. Gov. Rogers points out that as a member of the house of representatives when the ratification of the amendment came before the general assembly in 1921, he voted against ratification.

"I have very frequently been asked whether I am a 'wet' or a 'dry'. I believe the question can best be answered by a statement of facts.

"I believe that the use of intoxicating liquor is a matter which should be one of 'self determination' of the individual. Personally, I have been and am a total abstainer and from that angle might be considered a 'dry'. On the other hand, I have never in my own mind or otherwise questioned the rights of any other individual to exercise a like right of 'self determination' by making use of liquors in a proper manner.

"So far as my attitude toward the much discussed 18th amendment is concerned, while a member of the house of representatives in 1921, I voted against its ratification, when it came before the general assembly of that year. I was not a member of the assembly when the question of ratification was voted upon. My reasons for voting against ratification in 1921 are very definitely expressed in the platform adopted at the state convention on last Tuesday which has my whole hearted endorsement.

"I can add no more with reference to my designation."

SEN. BROOKHART'S PLAN TO PERPETUATE PROHIBITION

Advocates a Coalition of the West and South to Uphold the Cause of Prohibition—Brookhart Was One of the Coalition of Western Republicans and Southern Democrats Which Dominated the Last Senate—He is the First to Come Forward With the Proposition to Continue That Political Alliance in a National Way

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18—(AP)—A political coalition of the west and south to uphold the cause of prohibition and to fight "Wall street" was advocated today by Senator Brookhart, republican, Iowa, in reply to the declaration of the democratic Governor Roosevelt of New York for repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

Brookhart was one of the coalition of western republicans and southern democrats which controlled the senate during the last session in the disputes over the tariff and farm relief. He is the first to come forward with the proposition to continue that political alliance in a national way.

The southern states are noted for their political dryness and Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the democratic leader of the coalition, who has been advanced as a presidential candidate, is an advocate of national prohibition. Senator Borah, republican independent, of Idaho, another leader of the coalition, is reported about to take the stump.

Brookhart is one of the first of the national prohibition leaders to reply to the recent outpourings of repeal declarations coming from both republican and democratic leaders in the east.

"The west and south," asserted the Iowan, "are united in opposition to the issue raised by Governor Roosevelt for the repeal of the eighteenth amendment. Since this issue is being put forward by the scions of Wall street, it furnishes an additional and powerful reason for cooperative action between the west and the south.

"Governor Roosevelt comes into the prohibition fight with unclean hands. As governor of New York he took an oath to support the constitution of the United States, including the eighteenth amendment. What has he done to make that oath effective? Nothing. In these circumstances no fair-minded person can say prohibition has been a failure even in New York."

Referring to the coalition of democrats and western republican independents in the senate last session, Brookhart said the defeat of Senator Ransdell, democrat, Louisiana, would help to continue this alliance. Ransdell did not joint the coalition.

"The way is therefore now open," he declared, "for the west and south to unite against the centralized power of Wall street, which has destroyed the prosperity of agriculture, of the independent merchants, of the independent manufacturers, of the independent bankers and of every other legitimate independent business."

COL DONOVAN FOR REPEAL OF THE 18TH AMENDMENT

NEW YORK, Sept. 18—(AP)—Col. William J. Donovan, former assistant United States Attorney General, today came out for repeal of the eighteenth amendment and he urged the republican party in New York state to adopt that platform.

If the party does not accept the issue, he told the Young Men's Republican club today, it must accept the consequences. The disintegration of the whig party in the slavery controversy, on which it did not meet the "logic of events," was illustrative, he declared.

New generations have come to maturity in the ten years since the eighteenth amendment was enacted, he pointed out, and "these younger voters have definite views. They will not support a party which fails to take a well-defined, honest and self-respecting stand. x x x The day has come for the party in this state to take a position that has the dignity, integrity and appeal of an honest conviction. We can respect such a stand even if we cannot agree with it. x x x I am for repeal because I am for law enforcement."

WOMAN ENTERS MISSING MAGISTRATE MYSTERY

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Disclosures seeming to cast new light on the private life of Supreme Court Justice Joseph Force Crater were eagerly probed today by searchers for the jurist, who has been missing since Aug. 6.

A story of a tall blonde woman who sought to file a $100,000 breach of promise suit against Justice Crater the day before he vanished was told to a grand jury investigating the disappearance by a lawyer who said he had been asked to take the case.

Meanwhile an unnamed woman friend, in an interview published by the Evening World, described Justice Crater as a writer of weird detective mystery stories who frequented night clubs and theatres for "local color." The woman, described by the newspaper as connected with the public school system, expressed the belief the judge might have been compelled to disappear "under great urging or force."

FRANCE AND ITALY FAIL OF ACCORD ON NAVAL TRETY

GENEVA, Sept. 18— (AP) —French and Italian negotiators despaired of reaching an accord on their naval parity difference today and concentrated upon securing an agreement on actual ship construction between 1930 and 1936.

They decided that if such an agreement could be reached, based on the minimum actual requirements of each nation, the question of broad principle involved in parity—which prevented these nations from participating in the three-power London pact—could well simmer in its own juice until a new conference is called under the London treaties in 1936.

The negotiators are said to feel that by that time the situation might even solve itself.

CUBA WINS POINT IN L. OF N. COMMITTEE

GENEVA, Sept. 18—(AP)—The little republic of Cuba today blocked a move in a league of nations assembly committee to put into effect the protocol for revision of the world court statute, an action that caused anxiety among many members of the league.

Informed persons felt that the failure of this project might embarrass the United States administration in its efforts to obtain senate ratification of that other and more famous protocol, which provides for American entry to the world court.

CHICAGO HOODLUMS SHY DURING THE ROUND-UP

CHICAGO, Sept. 18— (AP) —The huntsmen pounded through the Chicago's neither world today in search of "public enemies" and found their birds had flown.

Only one was flushed, Matthew Capone, youngest brother of the best known quartet of Chicago gangland, who has no criminal record.

A police squad watching the Capone home for a chance to pick up "Scarface Al" or Ralph, whose names adorn the list of 26 wanted on vagrancy warrants in the latest drive to expel hoodlums from Chicago, gathered in the youngest brother as he stepped from his automobile.

Over the pleas of Mrs. Theresa Capone that Matthew was a "good boy and hasn't done anyone any harm," they took him to the lockup, examined his automobile and decided if nothing else could be found against the 21 year old he would be charged with driving without a city vehicle tag.

Matthew's only offenses have been such charges as speeding, including an arrest in Philadelphia while attending Villanova college during the prison term of his brother Alphonse for carrying a revolver.

Danny Stanton, Capone follower and the only one of the 26 wanted hoodlums now in custody, asked jury trials today on the assortment of charges lodged against him. The slamming of a court room door was enough to flatten him on the floor instinctively, but assurances of his attorney restored his composure and he busied himself with fending off photographers while the attorney obtained continuances of the gun toting, disorderly, vagrancy and pandering charges.

SUSPEND PROBE OF MRS. M'CORMICK'S EXPENDITURES

CHICAGO, Sept. 18—(AP)—With its investigation of Ruth Hanna McCormick's campaign expenditures suspended until after the general election, the senate committee on campaign funds adjourned today.

Examination of six witnesses, four of whom were county campaign managers for Mrs. McCormick, ended the four day session in Chicago, attended by Senators Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota, chairman; Robert F. Wagner of New York, Roscoe Patterson of Missouri and Clarence C. Dill of Washington.

Monday, Senators Nye and Porter H. Dale, of Vermont, who was absent during the present session, will open an investigation into that part of the primary campaign of Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, dealing with the candidacy of the second George W. Norris, the grocery man from Broken Bow, whose petition was thrown out by the Nebraska supreme court.

Heretofore, the groceryman has not been available for a hearing, but Senator Nye said he had talked over the telephone with the Broken Bow man today and that he was ready to appear.

Nye said he was anxious to learn the reasons of the groceryman's filing for the senatorial post.

STATE DEPT. TO RESUME NEGOTIATIONS WITH CHINA

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18—(AP)—The state department announced today conversations would be resumed with China looking toward a gradual relinquishment of the extraterritorial jurisdiction, which allows United States citizens in China exemption from trial in local courts.

A set of proposals to serve as a basis for discussion already have been drafted.

The new conversations will be initiated in October between the state department officials and Dr. C. C. Wu, Chinese minister in Washington, following the latter's return from Geneva.

A set of proposals dealing with methods for the gradual withdrawal of extraterritoriality was submitted to the Chinese government by Great Britain on September 11. The American proposals were described as similar to but not identical with the British draft.

Caught Mammoth Eel

Several of the local baseball players are temporarily out of work, so some of them do the next best thing, which is to go a-fishing. One of them, with more luck than the rest, pulled in an eel Thursday afternoon, while fishing off the wall below the old Lisbon bridge. Evidently a survivor of the one-time famous Quinebaug eel family, the sort that used to be captured in the old Indian weirs, this specimen was as big around as a stove pipe, and there was green moss on its slippery back. John said that when he cooked him, he had to slice him up like a swordfish.

MAIN STREET OPENING HELD UP FOR 24 HOURS

The opening of main street, south of Post Office square, and of the west end of Slater avenue, has been held up for 24 hours, and the street will probably be opened today (Friday). The state engineers explain that the opening of new cement highways to traffic depends upon the breaking tests, which are given to the sample pillars, taken from each new section at the time of building. Some grades of the finest cement, harden more slowly than other grades, hence, that new work may not become a liability to traffic, the required time must be allowed. The engineers on this big local job have proved that they are anxious to favor and cooperate with the public and places of business that abut the highway contract wherever possible. Detours are but temporary and must be endured.

DANIELSON

MUCH SPECULATION AS TO OUTCOME OF ELECTION

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 18.—What's going on under cover? What's going to happen at the polls on election day in Killingly. These queries were becoming much more frequent today. There appears to be a lull before the storm. Seeping in from here and there come reports of quiet, but intensive, activity of party workers. This has largely to do with boosting, or knocking, as you will, candidates for places on the board of selectmen. Some one of the four candidates for the three places on that board must lose. Which one? That's the question that has everyone guessing.

Publication in this column this morning of a list of 179 persons, men and women, who have applications on file to be made voters was followed during the day by a study of the personnel therein enumerated.

Admittedly, among politically-minded persons, there may be enough strength among the new voters to turn the tide of the election. Many factors enter into the possibility for an upset in this year's town election in Killingly. Frankly, some of these reasons cannot be published without doing more damage than good to the town as a whole. The effect of them likely will be felt by both republicans and democrats when voting day comes on the first Monday in October.

Both parties likely will be helped in some ways and injured in others, as to chances of electing their ticket, because of the particular set-up that happens to be present these late September days. Both parties have at least temporary dissenters within their ranks. That's what makes the outcome of the election so uncertain. And that also accounts for the canvass that goes on day by day in the interest of one candidate for selectman or another, quietly, but persistently. Old-time observers of things political in this town are of a mind that it behooves those interested in any particular candidate to get busy in his interest, and not to take too much for granted.

Clifford H. Starkweather, as an official of the Danielson Building and Loan association, said this morning that the organiation has just closed a very successful six months' period. A record number of shares of the last series issued were subscribed for by buyers. The earnings of the association have been good during the past half year, and the usual dividend has been declared to shareholders, at the rate of 5 per cent per annum. All available funds of the association have been loaned, under the customary arrangements made with persons desiring to build homes or improve property they already possess.

For the current school year pupils are to be transported to the Brooklyn Center school from the Stone House district by Alex Levola, at $2.25 per day; from the Stetson district by John Stalzer, at $2.50 per day; from the Bush Hill district by Frank Harrington, at $2.75 per day; from the Gilbert district by Thomas Gorman, at $3 per day; from the Hyde district by Alfred Messier, at $1.75 per day; from the South district by James Fish, at $1.75 per day. From the Allen Hill and Church street district transportation to the East Brooklyn school is to be provided by Charles Weldon, for $4 per day. From Brooklyn Center to Killingly high school transportation will be provided by Frank Spaulding, at $4 per day.

Nothing had developed up to late this afternoon to indicate what has become of Thomas Mulligan and Charles Flynn, alias Charles Bachman, Jr., who set out from here Monday night with Charles Reel. Mulligan and Bachman later held up a lunch cart in Woonsocket, and also stole Reel's car, Reel being entirely innocent of knowledge of what the two criminals intended to do in the Rhode Island city.

Various annual town reports covering the 12 months' period ending July 31 last are now ready for the printer and will be ready for distribution in the usual form at the annual town meeting to be held on the first Monday in October. As has been previously stated, the town was very carefully administered during the past fiscal year, and the forthcoming reports will show a substantial decrease in the town's indebtedness.

A change in seating arrangements, by grades, has been put into effect in the East Brooklyn school. For several years past pupils in grades 7 and 8 have been seated on the first floor of the building, while the smaller pupils of the third and fourth grades have been seated upstairs. During the past summer a new hardwood floor was laid in the north room of the second story. With this improvement completed, arrangements were completed to seat the upper grade pupils on that floor and have the smaller children, grades 1 to 4, on the lower floor.

While many property owners already have given attention to the matter, many others have as yet failed to have chimneys of buildings cleaned this season. If one would not violate a provision of the borough charter, such chimneys must be cleaned at least once a year. Chief A. P. Woodward of the fire department has advocated periodic cleaning of chimneys for several years. He has been well supported in this by a large number of property owners, and as a result the number of chimney fires occurring each year has been greatly reduced.

The borough's sidewalk construction program is now being forwarded in Cottage street. A new walk is being built along the northerly side of this street from the high school property eastward toward Furnace and Water streets. The workers are now engaged on that section of the street between School and Furnace streets.

PUTNAM

AVIATION COURSE MAY BE ADDED TO TRADE SCHOOL

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 1—There exists at the present time a possibility whereby a school for air-minded boys of eastern Connecticut may be established in the not distant future. This was learned today and the first inkling that such a proposition is receiving the serious consideration of officials of the state department of education came to light in a communication received from Principal H. H. Ellis of the State Trade school.

According to Mr. Ellis, the management of the trade school here is interested in the extent to which an aircraft training school would be of benefit, as the school has had quite a number of young men make inquiry in reference to the training of this character. A more definite preliminary examination of the demand seems desirable and the school would like to hear from persons interested to enroll for training of this kind.

The passing of the textile department makes desirable the establishing of another course to take its place. The rapid development of the aircraft industry to meet the demands of commercial and private air transportation rather indicates that this type of training would have a growing value both as an educational opportunity to young men as well as being the type of training that is indispensable to the future of the industry. The vacant textile department provides approximately 3,000 feet of floor space which would be ample for such a course.

Mr. Ellis explained that if such a course were organized it would be planned to meet the requirements of the federal regulations for aviation training programmes and to limit enrollment to those over 16 years of age and preferably having two years of high school although the most important factor in the selection of students for such a training programme would be that of character qualifications, for in no industry does safety and satisfactory performance depend so much upon the reliability of the mechanic as in the aviation industry.

In concluding the interview, Mr. Ellis stated the school will appreciate an expression of opinion from all those who are interested in such a training program, particularly those who would want to enroll if the courses were established in the near future.

The prospect, judging from the widespread interest being manifest by boys of high school age in the development of aviation, is that the early establishment of such training facilities would result in capacity enrollment, as there are many trails to be blazed in the field of aviation, of which the American youth is fully aware. Then with this granted, only one thing remains for boys who would be pioneers in the Putnam Trade school's proposed department of air craft and that is, writing Principal Ellis at the State Trade school, Putnam, stating their reasons for desiring the establishment of such a course and what, in their opinion, would be its success and benefits if it were established.

RACETTE NOT CONVICTED OF TAXI SERVICE VIOLATION

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 18—For the second time within a year the state motor vehicle department and the public utilities commission failed to secure a conviction against Peter Racette, Bridge street automobile livery proprietor, whom they allege is illegally performing taxi work. In the city court this afternoon after the state agents had submitted for consideration of the court every angle of the law, Judge M. H. Geissler decided that Racette was not guilty of the misdemeanor as charged by the representatives of the state department governing automotive transportation.

Racette was arrested a week ago. This afternoon at a special session of court, he was arraigned on two separate charges of having performed taxi work without possessing a certificate of the public utilities department licensing him to do so.

In presenting the case the state alleged that on September 9, Racette answered a call for a car sent to his livery stand by an agent of the public utilities commission, who directed the liveryman to call for him at the Putnam Inn. Arriving at the hotel the agent accosting Racette asked, "Pete's Taxi?", to which the driver replied, "yes." Racette was then instructed to drive the passenger to the Day Kimball hospital and after depositing him there was paid the sum of twenty cents in lieu of his service.

On another evening shortly after he answered a call and was directed to take the agent to Miller's filling station on Woodstock avenue. A few days later a warrant for the liveryman's arrest was issued and served upon him.

In court today Racette was defended by Attorney Irving H. Miron. In arguing for the innocence of his client, Attorney Miron admitted the allegations of the state department agents and demanded that they should show conclusive proof whereby Racette had violated the laws governing taxi work in either instance as was charged.

Prosecuting Attorney Eric H. Johnson handled the case against Racette. Attorney Miron contended that Racette in every way acted within his rights granted him by the motor vehicle department, through which institution he secured registration "0" markers to perform livery service. In responding to the calls he acted within his rights the attorney argued and in charging a fee of 20 cents he committed no violation of law, since he is entitled to fix his own rate. In both cases in which Racette is alleged to have committed flagrant infractions of the code of taxi laws set up by the utilities commission, Mr. Miron argued there was no violation, since both were specific trips made to points specified by the department agents. In further argument the defense attorney pointed out that the attorney general of the state, in a decision handed down on this conflicting matter, outlined the "0" registered cars as those engaged in a business identical with the old livery stables of by-gone days.

"People" said Mr. Miron, "do not know the difference between a taxi cab and a livery cab, but that's no fault of ours." At this point Attorney Johnson put in, "That if the case is such then, Racette in answering his telephone, when asked, 'is this Pete's taxi?', should answer, 'no, this is Pete's livery'."

To this Attorney Miron, taking his pocket edition of motor vehicle laws and turning to a certain page arose and said, "No, Brother Johnson, this is what he should say: 'No this is not Pete's taxi, but is a motor vehicle licensed for livery service and hired for a special trip or trips and shall be subject to the person hiring the same.."

In deciding the case Judge Geissler stated that inasmuch as it was extremely difficult for one to differentiate, under Section 3855 of the general statutes, between a taxi cab and a livery cab that he could not render a verdict of guilty.

A few months ago, Racette was arrested by state police on a similar charge and was presented in city court with the result that a decision identical with the one returned by Judge Geissler today was made.

That Racette has carried passengers on short trips in car carrying "0" markers is conceded, his attorney said after court, but in every case the calls were either received at his private stand, which is off the public highway or by telephone, and in each instance the delivery points were specified by the patrons of the service, which according to law is perfectly legitimate.

Several local people were in Boston yesterday attending the elaborate exercises and parade staged in commemoration of the city's 300th birthday. Putnam was officially represented by Mayor Charles A. Richard, who attended the celebration as the guest of Mayor James M. Curley of Boston.

Only one more Thursday half holiday remains on the programme for the clerks in Putnam stores. This afternoon stores were closed and employes made their usual early afternoon getaway from the city under bright sunny skies, which incidentally have prevailed on the occasion of every holiday this summer.

The republican town committee held its first meeting under its new leader, Attorney Irving H. Miron, in the superior court chambers last evening. Only plans for the present campaign were discussed.

MAY USE CAMERA TO GET TEMPERATURE HIGH IN AIR

WASHINGTON (AP)—Possibility of reading temperatures 30 miles aloft with the aid of a camera is forecast in a report to the National Academy of Sciences by Oliver R. Wulf of the Smithsonian Institution.

Thirty miles is the average height of the ozone layer, a blanket of oxygen of three atoms instead of the usual two-atom kind of oxygen.

Mr. Wulf finds that when light entering the earth's atmosphere from outside is photographed through a spectroscope, the ozone layer probably absorbs some of the rays. This absorption shows as dark lines on the photographic plate.

The amount of absorption, he finds, is affected by temperature. Hence he thinks proper interpretation of the ozone lines on the spectrum may give the temperature.

Daughter of Mrs. F. Butcher, R. No. 2, Gridley, Kansas

"My thirteen year old daughter Maxine was troubled with backache and pain when she came into womanhood. I knew Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would help her because I used to take it myself at her age. Now she does not have to stay home from school, and her color is good, she eats well and does not complain of being tired." —Mrs. Floyd Butcher.

Daughter of Mrs. J. Bartholdi, Thompson's Addition, The Dalles, Oregon

"My daughter Magdalen did not seem to develop as she should. At times she had no pep at all and couldn't get her school work very easily. For four years we doctored her, off and on. Then a friend told us about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I got a bottle for Magdalen. Her nerves are quieting, her general health is better and she is now as normal as other girls. I really think the Compound helped her more than all the other medicine I gave her." —Mrs. J. Bartholdi.

Daughter of Mrs. M. Milano, 1408 Park Ave., New York, New York

"My seventeen year old daughter Fannie was rundown, weak and nervous. Since taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound she has gained in weight and strength. She eats and sleeps well. She is a packer and she is able to go to work every day. We recommend the medicine to other mothers and daughters." —Mrs. M. Milano.

REMOVING JUNKYARDS

Once again Connecticut has set an example which apparently makes a favorable impression outside the state. At least the latest issue of the New England council's News Letter takes cognizance of the results obtained during the past year in the elimination of auto graveyards. This "successfully demonstrated" improvement has been accomplished under the law enacted by the 1929 legislature by which auto junk yards are licensed and shows that more than 2,000 dumps of abandoned cars have been removed and only about 110 yards have actually been licensed.

This means a big contribution—to the work of clearing up places which were long an eyesore. It has been the means of getting rid of conditions which had long marred the landscape of this state and stands in the way of the landscape being dotted with such unpleasant sights in the future. It means that some disposition must be made of the old cars instead of simply driving them into a lot off a main highway and letting them remain there to rust to pieces and fall apart.

If this improvement can be accomplished in Connecticut by such a simple process, it is possible for other states to do likewise for a relief of similar conditions. It is evidently put forth by the New England council for such influence as it may have and such encouragement as it may offer to those bothered with a like problem.

But if it is possible to eliminate the auto junk yards which are considered such a mar on the landscape, such a detriment to adjoining property and such a disgrace to community pride, why isn't it also possible for similar legislation to accomplish the same results concerning those other junk yards which spring up in the center of cities and are every bit as disgraceful in appearance and detrimental to property values?

There is need for this relief. Conditions of this kind have prevailed too long and, inasmuch as the state has set a fine example, it is time that the cities got busy and accomplished as praiseworthy results.

THE TARIFF COMMISSION

If anyone thinks that the duties of the members of the tariff commission are going to be a snap, the president would probably like to learn his name. He might be tempted to give him a job thereon in order to give him something to do or to convince him to the contrary, for it is no secret that the president has encountered plenty of difficulty in getting the men he wants to serve on that important commission.

Five appointments have been made and a sixth was delayed because of an 11th hour declination. New members thus far named are Henry P. Fletcher and John Lee Coulter. Reappointments include Thomas Walker Page, E. D. Brossard and A. P. Dennis, and the sixth as yet unannounced appointment will conclude the make-up of the non-partisan commission.

The new commission will work under different conditions than the previous one. Speedier action is expected from it now that it has been changed from a fact-finding body to a part of the government which has the power to recommend tariff changes. The commission faces plenty of work. It has been deluged with petitions for changes and it is assured of plenty of testimony from those who consider they have a grievance.

Just as soon as the commission is completed and gets down to business it will lose no time in making clear that it is not engaged in making a revision of the tariff schedules. Its purpose is to deal with those cases where it can be shown that an injustice has been done and where it can be pointed out that changed conditions have produced a situation which calls for such tariff change as the commission can recommend. It is a commission that is going to insist upon the production of proof and when facts are presented which bear out the claims the commission will be expected to do the rest. Then upon the presentation of any recommendations it rests with the president to ratify or disapprove them, quite the same as he would a bill which has been acted upon in congress.

There are those who have always maintained that such a commission would not get anywhere. The former commission didn't meet expectations in all respects. None is more confident that the new commission will give a better account of itself than President Hoover.

RECOGNIZING NEW GOVERNMENTS

That the United States should extend recognition to the existing governments in Argentina, Peru and Bolivia is no cause for surprise. It is what has been considered probable in view of developments in those countries.

If it seems that a different policy is being followed in regard to the South American republics than has been done with Central American countries where revolutions have occurred, it will be noted that Secretary Stimson takes care to show the reason for this. There are treaty conditions with which this country is in sympathy which furnish the basis for the attitude toward revolutions in Central America while the regular policy, where no treaties exist, and international law govern with the others. It is the latter course that is being followed in establishing diplomatic relations with the provisional governments in Argentina, Bolivia and Peru, and that is the course which has actuated other countries. With these South American republics there exists no treaty by which they agree not to recognize a government which comes into power by coup d'etat or revolution. Hence this government has no other course than to govern itself by the conditions which prevail and the practice that has been followed.

When the secretary of state establishes that the "provisional governments are de facto in control of their respective countries and that there is no active resistance to their rule," and when it is learned that the intention of each is "to fulfill its international obligations and to hold in due course elections to regularize its status," the extension of recognition is to be expected. The department of state has taken care to chart its course in the regular channel. It believes that the existing governments are seriously undertaking their responsibilities and it considers it unwise to refrain from action which might easily embarrass the people of friendly countries and especially so under existing economic conditions. Inasmuch as it was bound to be done, it is well that recognition should be granted now.

MAKE YOUR APPLICATION

There are fixed times for the making of voters. Those qualified will have an opportunity to obtain the franchise next month, provided they comply with the necessary requirements. These are not burdensome, but they are important. It isn't possible, for instance to be made a voter if there is negligence in filing the application.

While the making of voters will not take place until October, it is not too soon to give serious consideration to the preliminary detail of getting your application to be made into the hands of the registrars, the selectmen or the town clerk. It is simply a matter of detail but one would be in just as helpless a situation through forgetting to get his application in as he would be in neglecting to appear before the board which makes voters.

Certain steps are necessary in becoming a voter. One has to be of age, to have lived in the state and the town the proper length of time, to be able to read and write, all of which will be ascertained by the board in making voters at the proper time, but before that takes place the person wishing to become a voter must signify that desire through a written application.

The time for making such application is now. Delays are dangerous. It is easy for such a thing to slip the mind during a press of other and, perhaps temporarily, more important considerations. The fact that the time limit for getting such applications in is October 7 doesn't justify waiting until that day. Do it now and avoid all possibility of forgetting it. And don't think you ought to wait for someone to suggest it. If you can qualify you should become a voter.

Get your application in, be made a voter when the time comes, and then make full and proper use of such franchise.

THE CUP FEMAINS

The latest challenger for the America's cup has had its test and Shamrock V has been beaten. The cup remains in this country and, as it can now be seen, there has been no possibility for its removal across the water by the latest Shamrock.

The Enterprise has made a wonderful showing. It has justified the choice that was made by the committee when it was picked to defend the cup. It has been handled in a masterful manner and has gloriously upheld in every way the country's expectations. It has given a demonstration that must be especially gratifying to its designers and the performance under all conditions must be highly pleasing to the syndicate which produced it. The race has shown the American-built yacht and the American seamanship to be of a superior character. The test has been decisive although everyone would have been better pleased with a closer contest.

Recognition is given to this by Sir Thomas Lipton himself. Even as a loser he recognizes the better yacht and if he appears a bit discouraged as the result of his many efforts it is only natural. Never will there be a better display of sportsmanship than he has shown during the whole series of contests in which he has failed to accomplish what he so much desired. He has had his fun and he has gotten much publicity but he has become convinced that it is futile to try further. There is regret that he feels it necessary to turn the task over to someone else. Somehow it will not seem the same sort of a contest if a Lipton yacht is not concerned therein.

THE SILVERED BOTTLE

At 2 in the morning good Cousin Bess awakened uneasily and drowsily mediated why and why not she ought to be smelling coffee at that hour. She consulted her watch again, and with a sigh of disbelief turned over on her other side and returned to sleep. Most certainly no one would be preparing coffee at that hour in a perfectly respectable house.

By nature Aunt Amelia was neither nervous nor imaginative. Dr. Binder called her a fairly good invalid, even if she had her little perculiarities, like keeping a coffee percolator in the room and cooking her own drinks.

"In my day I brewed a mighty fine mess of coffee. And being tied to the bed isn't going to get me out of practice." Certainly Aunt Amelia could not blame it on either coffee or nerves or imagination. But at 2 in the morning one does not have visitors who lurk bashfully behind cretonne curtains and neglect to announce themselves.

Therefore, with the clear brain of the person just on the brink of either comedy or catastrophe Amelia reached for a weapon—the absurd silver bottle, which Dr. Binder had mirthfully filled with his last noxious prescription.

"Well," she uttered in tones suitably modulated for the occasion. "Better come out, my neck's stiff."

"Well—I never—sir, there aren't many folks say 'no' to Amelia's 'yes.' I'm giving you the benefit of three counts, and then you get a nice little warm bullet that'll make your skirts rustle." Aunt Amelia chewed on her new vocabulary as on rich walnut meats. She flourished the menacing 'revolver,' and the brave silver bottle played a commendable role. It gleamed at just the right antarctic temperature, coldly blue. "One—two—there, that's better. Sit down, my good man, sit down. Now throw your little gun over here on the bed, and if you don't mind, switch on the far lamp. Wait, before you sit down, kindly give these pillows a bit of a shake behind my back. No, not that way! Shake them, man, shake them. There, that's fine."

"I do declare, you're not half as bloodthirsty looking as I thought you'd be. How'd you like me to tell your life story for you? I like to talk and I'm quite a shrewd old body, as you'll see. You're a man out of work. You fell in with cheap boarding houses or none at all, bad food, evil companions, and I'm here to tell you, the combination will set any man to trying out the fair moonlight path to people's windows. But the road soon turned out to be far bumpier than it looked. Now, my good man, reach me that pad of paper on the desk, and don't be upsetting the ink—that wood stains fearfully. And the fountain pen. Here, I'll write you a little note that will solve your problems for you for many a day. You get free board and lodging and you won't have any kick to make with either.

"What's that? The penitentiary? What would I be doing sending you to the penitentiary—my first and only burglar, the only man who dared to say 'no' to Amelia's 'yes' as far as the count of two." A definite scratch, scratch and Amelia passed over a large, firmly directed note.

"See Dr. Binder in the afternoon. He needs a man to look after the furnace at the hospital. I've ordered him to hire you, and Dr. Binder never refuses Amelia.

"Say," an eager thought entered her head, "say, if you really want to do something for a silly old woman—something big—take two tablespoonfuls of this cursed tonic, one for yesterday and one for today." She produced the silver bottle. "Heavens, I wish you could drop around every night and take it—and it won't do you any harm, for it's never done me any good.

"Which reminds me, if you've been out all night, you're hungry, and I've a mind for a cup of coffee myself. So just slide the percolator over here. Careful with the top. You'll find biscuits and cake in the drawer. I'll make you the finest cup of coffee you ever tasted."

While the next day Dr. Binder found his patient so exultant and pink-cheeked that he congratulated himself profoundly. "All because of a simple little device like a silvered bottle in an interesting design. Think of it, dear Amelia—a little silver bottle did it."—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18— When Senator Fess took over republican national committee affairs, one of the first things he did was get on the air and tell the political world what the coming congressional campaign is going to be all about.

He said a lot about tariff and farm relief and world peace. But summing it all up you could not avoid the impression that the campaign was to be waged according to the Fess notion of things, about just one real issue; and that issue was Hoover.

He also is one of the extraordinarily large lot of democrats lame-ducked out of public life in one or another of the republican landslides from 1920 on who are trying to make 1930 a come-back year politically. For Bulkley did two rounds in the house not so long ago.

Hoover Penny

For his attempted political resurrection, the Ohioan has provided himself with an unusual pocket charm. It is a copper penny piece gotten out by Hoover enthusiasts back during the 1928 campaign. On one side is Mr. Hoover's name in big letters; on the other this phrase:

'Good for 4 years of prosperity."

"And I am trying to find out where this can be redeemed," Bulkley said, grinning, when the Bystander asked him what the national issues involved in his campaign for the senate would be.

Still another important political figure who would seem to be in agreement with Messrs. Fess and Bulkley about the real issue to be voted on in November is Herbert Clark Hoover himself. At least that is the only explanation easily seen as to his reason for a six-day-six-speech trip to be staged early in October.

Speculation

Just what Mr. Hoover is going to talk about was not stated in the white house notice to the press. But if the speeches do not prove to be a summing up of the problems the Hoover administration has faced, of the methods of solution it evolved and the reasons for adoption of those methods, together with what can be said as to tangible results, political Washington is going to be overcome with surprise.

Will Mr. Hoover specifically ask for election of a republican house and senate in November to help him round out the policies he is expected to expound? Well, that is quite another matter. President Wilson once did that, with disastrous results.

Whether Mr. Hoover has determined to assume campaign spokesmanship for his administration or not, his October plans are significant. He will talk then in one week almost as much as he did during his whole presidential campaign.

YOUR HEALTH

Feeding The Sick At Home

By Katherine M. Thoma, Dietitian, Michael Reese Hospital, Chicago.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

The patient convalescing from an illness needs nourishing food attractively served. Nowhere can this be so successfully accomplished as in the patient's own home.

The sick patient at home is more than a sick patient, he is the most important member of the household. For him as for any other illustrious guest, the best of everything should be procured. Now is the time to bring out the prettiest china, the best linen, the brightest silver. Good food like a fine portrait needs a suitable frame. In fact, in this case the picture may be sold on the merits of the frame; the tray must look so tempting that in spite of a listless appetite the patient becomes interested and feels a desire to taste a bite or two. Often if the patient can be tempted to eat the first few mouthfuls of food his appetite is stimulated and he will finish the whole portion.

The trays must not be monotonous in appearance. Change the dishes, change the color scheme. There are few houses that cannot boast several different sets of dishes. Dig them out of those top cupboard shelves—that set of mother's wedding dishes with the little pink roses and gold bands. They are not too precious to use now. They will never serve a better purpose than tempting brother John to eat a little of that scraped beef ball and stuffed baked potato. Where is that bright blue willow ware pattern with its queer little figures; how about that clear golden yellow breakfast set? What have they been saved for if not for just such an emergency—helping to get little Mary to eat a poached egg on toast and chopped fresh spinach? In using colored glass you will find that food like people has certain colors that are becoming and others that are not. So use your discretion in your choice of colors, particularly of glass. Try to imagine the food you are planning to serve before you go in too heavily for some of the vivid colors.

Linen now days can do a lot for the tray. A wide range of lovely colors and patterns will give a wealth of variety if the household is really short of dishes. Silver must be bright—not discolored and stained. Silver tea pots and silver plate covers are an addition not only for the gleaming lights and reflections they contribute but also because of the very practical service of keeping the food hot. If silver is not available, a china plate cover and earthern ware tea pot will serve. Some provision must be made for keeping the hot food hot and the cold food cold. Cover the hot fod and be sure the cover is hot so that it will not absorb heat from the food. Wherever practical, serve cold dishes in a bowl of cracked ice.

Before carrying up the tray to the sick person's room, check it carefully to see that it is complete. It will save you steps and more important it will save the invalid the annoyance and distress of having his tray stand by his bedside while he waits for a glass of water, or the salt, or perhaps the knife and fork. Because of your carelessness Willie may not touch the good cream soup which had been allowed to cool to an unappetizing temperature.

Before the tray is served, someone should arrange the room comfortably and get the patient ready. Straighten up any disorder that may naturally enough exist: adjust the window blinds so that the light is bright but not in the patient's eyes. Clear off the bedside table where the tray is to be placed. Help the patient to wash, comb his hair, get himself freshened up. Arrange his pillows get him in a comfortable position, and then when everything is ready, bring in the bright pretty tray with its viands temptingly displayed.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

The Door That Was Closed

A mystery that doth perplex
In like degree may often vex.
—Mother West Wind.

Impy the black Chipmunk paused at the entrance to his own home. He dreaded going down there; he dreaded what he might find inside. Had he not seen Shadow the Weasel sitting right there by that doorway and licking his lips? That Shadow had been inside there wasn't the least doubt. So Impy dreaded to go inside.

"I'll never go in here again after this time," said Impy to himself. "I'll dig myself a new home. That's what I'll do—I'll dig myself a new home. This one wouldn't be safe and certainly I could never be happy here. I never could be happy here without Frisky."

Impy hesitated for a few minutes longer and then he went in. His heart beat very fast as he hurried down the long hall straight to the bedroom of which he had been so proud. His nose told him that Shadow the Weasel had been there, before him. Straight to the bedroom Impy hurried. It was there he expected to find all that was left of little Mrs. Impy. The bedroom was empty. That is, it was empty of everything but the bed. Yes, sir, the bed was all that Impy could find in that bedroom. Impy didn't know whether to feel sad or glad. Could it be that Shadow had eaten her and left nothing? He couldn't believe that.

Impy turned and hurried along the hall to the first storeroom. He stopped to look in there. Pretty little Mrs. Impy wasn't there. Impy hurried along to the second storeroom. The result was just the same. Little Mrs. Impy wasn't there. Impy paused before continuing his search. Somehow, he was beginning to get a wee bit of hope. He had been so sure of what he was going to find and now he hadn't found it. Was this a good sign or a bad sign? Impy was inclined to think it was a good sign; at least, he wanted to think it was a good sign. Still, if little Mrs. Impy was not there, where could she be?

"Perhaps she wasn't at home when Shadow arrived," thought Impy. "Perhaps she was outside somewhere and saw him. Oh, I do hope she did! I'll go out and look for her."

He started to scamper along the hall toward the entrance. Then he thought of the third storeroom—the new one that Mrs. Impy had had built. He would look in there before going out. So Impy checked himself and went back to visit the third storeroom. Apparently, there wasn't any third storeroom. There were only two open doorways and those led to the storerooms he had already visited. Impy was puzzled. Yes, sir, he was puzzled. He stopped to scratch his nose. Somehow, scratching his nose helped him to think better. But all the nose-scratching and all the thinking in the world wouldn't supply a doorway where none was. Impy was the most puzzled Chipmunk you could imagine. Now he had not only lost Mrs. Impy but he had lost a storeroom as well. You see, it didn't occur to Impy that some one might have closed the door to that extra storeroom. No, sir, he didn't once think of that. He quite forgot that it was possible to close a door. You see, in his short life he had never had occasion to close a door.

Straight to the bedroom Impy hurried

But, oh, how puzzled he was! In trying to find out what had become of his lost storeroom he almost forgot about Mrs Impy. Yes, sir, he did so. And it was all because of a closed door.

How Press Views Rogers' Nomination

(New London Day)

In Lieutenant Governor Rogers the republicans offer the electors of Connecticut an exceptionally able and experienced man for chief executive. He has devoted the past ten years to the service of the state. He has been promoted from one position to another, gaining valuable knowledge from each. No one today knows more or better what Connecticut needs to continue on the path of progress and prosperity. He is familiar with its past history and traditions, and he knows its present-day needs. He is imbued with high aspirations to give Connecticut a progressive, clean and businesslike administration, and has the will and determination and capacity to carry out his program.

(Hartford Courant)

In placing Mr. Rogers in nomination Governor Trumbull referred to him as a man of ability and integrity, who thinks clearly and sees straight. He has an inquiring mind, he is diligent, and he has given an excellent account of himself in every position he has been called upon to fill. There is nothing of the spectacular about him. He is just a plain, substantial, level-headed citizen who has been a student of government and is intimately acquainted with the work that is being carried on by the various state departments. He makes a good appearance; his manner is gracious. He may not be a match for Dean Cross the democratic nominee, in oratorical pyrotechnics but he has what the lovable Dean lacks, a valuable experience in the science and art of government and an intimate understanding of the state's governmental functions.

(Hartford Times)

Mr. Rogers' loyalty to Connecticut is unquestionable. His faithfulness in public office has been meticulous. Whether the responsibility were small or greater, he has given it painstaking attention, and exhibited an unusual degree of executive energy. His whole record of citizenship is an open, creditable one, in so many respects that his reception of the honor now accorded him was long ago freely predicted and has come naturally.

(New Haven Register)

In presenting to the electorate of Connecticut the name of Ernest E. Rogers as its candidate for governor the republican party has made a happy choice. Mr. Rogers has earned the confidence of the people, not alone by a career in politics that has trained him especially for the arduous duties of chief executive, but he has demonstrated his ability and capacity in the business world in a manner that leaves no doubt about his qualifications for the position.

Few men in the state enjoy a larger personal acquaintanceship and few men have had better personal knowledge of the difficulties that he will face if elected than Mr. Rogers. He knows the agricultural, the industrial, the financial and the political conditions of Connecticut as well as anyone and undoubtedly has a clear vision of the needs of the day in any of these directions.

CHILD TRAINING

Who Is Responsible?

Viola Woodville

I was sitting with Billy's mother when her lively son dashed through the room, leaving the door unlatched and squeaking behind him.

"Billy! Billy!" called his mother, "come back and shut the door, so it won't squeak."

Evidently Billy didn't hear; his mother closed the door. In a few minutes he re-entered, leaving the door to make the same disagreeable noise. This time he got a good scolding before company whom he would have liked to impress favorably. I was his Sunday school teacher. He really hadn't seen me on his first swift passage through.

When the boy was gone, his mother said. "It's really my fault. I've been meaning to put a little oil on those hinges. It would only take a minute."

She was willing to take the blame to me, but not to Billy.

Many grown people consider it very important that children shall think them always right. Of course the young people are not fooled, but the pretense must be kept up. A teacher told me once that she was in constant fear of making a mistake that the children would discover.

It is most unwise for grown people to assume infallibility. If by any chance a child should grow to manhood with such a belief regarding his parents, there would be trouble in self adjustment when he saw them through mature eyes.

It is very much better to be natural with children and tell them that you will do your best to show them what is right, and that you will be very sorry if you make a mistake. In that way children will learn to take a part in being responsible.

One little boy came to his mother with many little problems for her to solve. She soon saw that in nearly every case they were concerned with some bit of conduct that the child very well understood. For instance, one problem related to some little thing that he much wanted to do, and yet questioned whether he should. He rather hoped when he had laid the case before his mother she would make it possible for him to choose the tempting course. She refused to take such a responsibility.

She willingly discussed each case thoroughly. Then she insisted that he must choose. In the case where he made the wrong decision, the result was usually punishment enough.

One of the hardest things grown people have to bear is to see young people make avoidable mistakes. However, mistakes are good teachers, and if we assume the responsibilities belonging to our boys and girls we are liable to make weaklings of them instead of developing the ability for courageous resistance. Children ought to be helped as much as possible, the better way being pointed out, but after all, the final decision should be theirs, for moral growth comes only through their own choice.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

A Desert and Freightless Railway.

Eight hundred miles of railroad that begins in a desert, runs through a desert and ends in a desert, carries no freight, and whose only potential passengers are pilgrims may soon be running again.

Mohammedans of all complexions: Persians, Egyptians, Turks, Syrians, Moroccans, Algerians, Iraqi, Javanese and Tunisians have petitioned Ibn Saud, King of Hejaz, to reconstruct the Damascus-Medina Hadj railroad that was destroyed during the World war.

"Glistening black 'Abdul Hamid,' puffing and blowing smoke, with its whistle screaming to an empty desert, pulled its first string of coaches, loaded with robed sheiks from the desert, and fezzed, besworded, gilt-braided Turks from Damascus into Medina in 1908," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society from its headquarters in Washington, D. C., "but only after three sheep had been sacrificed by high priests in front of its 'camel catcher.' Medina, the terminus, is only 200 miles north of holy Mecca.

"Ordered by the sultan, paid for by faithful Mohammedans throughout the world, designed by a German engineer, built by Italian, Polish, Hungarian and Turk engineers, using Italian, Greek, Turk and Montenegrin labor, the completed pilgrimage express ran regularly until Bedouins began planting bombs in 1917. Some of its rails were made in America, some in France, some in Belgium; the cars the pilgrims rode in were manufactured in Belgium, while 'Abdul Hamid' and the other engines that whirled them through desolation were German. Christians built it, Christians equipped it, but they could not ride on the railroad of the 'faithful.'

"The pilgrim railroad banished one of the most remarkable processions in the world, one witnessed by few Christians, because the great Mecca caravan whose weary, toiling legions once numbered more than 10,000 men and thousands of camels opened its tents only to Mohammedans.

"Every true Mohammedan burns with hope to make the Hadj, that is, the trip to Mecca and Medina, holiest of Islam holies. If the journey costs his life, as well as his fortune, so much the better. There is greater glory in paradise for those who die making the Hadj.

"Many of those who travel by land gather at Damascus in Syria. To go by sea, as thousands do in our softer civilized days, earns the pilgrim less merit than to make the strength-sapping, overland journey through sun-burned valleys between black rock walls, balanced on an evil-tempered camel, drinking the luke-warm water of desert wells, and risking cholera.

"Once outside Damascus the great caravan used to halt until all companies assembled and until the caravan leader had buttered the palm of the desert Bedouins. To pass safely through the desert, free from attacks by the crafty Bedouins, fat bribes were paid every year.

"Convoying a pilgrim army one thousand miles through an almost waterless desert was no easy task. Everything was minutely organized. The Persian tents were grouped together; Syrians kept to their section; sects and tongues and nationalities split the seemly confused mass into manageable units. Camel boys waited for orders to bring their grumbling beasts to the riders; the tent corps was prepared to tear down the camp and rush it ahead to the next well the moment the caravan marched. There was even a market street that keen Syrian merchants from Damascus set up the moment the host halted, a noisy smelly market, where pilgrims bought food and where Bedouins of the desert flocked to buy cloth and bright trinkets. At night the camp twinkled in the plain as hundreds of candles were lighted within paper lanterns that swung from poles before tent doors.

"Before dawn a cannon shot echoed over the camp. The signal! Men cursed in many tongues as they stumbled over tent ropes in their haste to be off. Squealing camels bent their knees protesting against the riders climbing up. Dogs barked, stray Damascus dogs that went with the caravan annually to Mecca like dogs that ally themselves to hunters walking through forests. Tied nose to tail in long files the camels swung along to the tinkling music of a pilgrimage sung by the bells tied to the ugly beasts. The great caravan was on the march; no journey for a weakling. Sometimes it traveled as much as 50 miles by steady going 22 hours out of 24.

"Some of the camels carried huge curtained litters on their backs for women, for wealthy pilgrims and for dying pilgrims. When a pilgrim on Hadj felt the spirit leaving his body he willingly spent the last of his savings to die in luxury so he hired one of the camels bearing the lurching compartment reserved for dying men. Friends lifted his sickening body in. When the caravan stopped they would look in, find him dead, roll out the body, bury it in the sand that has received so many bodies of men and camels, and prepare the litter for the next weary traveler.

"Travel of a vast pilgrim army in picturesque array ended with the coming of the railroad. Then in 1914 came the World war and Turkey used the pilgrim railroad as an iron whip to keep Arabia loyal. Mountain ranges between the railroad and the Red Sea protected it from attack by the Allies until the insurrection."

FRENCH TO MAKE TALKIES IN LAND OF VEILED MEN

IN AMGEL, Hoggar, Sahara Desert (AP)—Modern "talkies" are to take the sights and sounds of inaccessible Africa to the outer world.

A scientific expedition is coming here soon to gather material for the International Colonial Exposition at Paris next year and sound pictures are to be made.

A thousand miles from the Mediterranean coast, a month's march by camel train from civilization, the mission will gather material in the land of the Touaregs, the land of veiled men, where the women show their faces and have great influence.

SCHWARTZ BROS. CUT BIG ANNIVERSARY CAKE

The big furniture store of Schwartz Bros., Inc., at 74-84 Main street, was peacefully mobbed Thursday evening by a crowd of from two to three thousand who wanted to be in on the cutting of the 25th anniversary cake. Early in the evening it was deemed advisable to have some police authority to keep the crowd within bounds and two officers were sent there in response to a request made to headquarters.

The big birthday cake, 60 pounds of it, three layers high, frosted all over, and with 25 candles for the anniversary date, reposed in one of the big front windows, ready to deliver its board of 250 prizes when President Abner Schwartz, founder of the business should plunge in the knife and begin to distribute the pieces.

When that time arrived the cake was borne to a table at the office end of the store and the crowd milled and jammed its way to get as close as possible to the center of operations. The pieces of cake were distributed in paper napkins and as President Schwartz could be seen holding the first aloft to pass it out to the crowd, the crowd suddenly became a bristling front of reaching, stretching hands and pushing, hauling humanity that almost engulfed President Schwartz, but he weathered the storm successfully and kept at his task for over an hour until every man, woman and child had secured his share and here was nothing left but a few crumbs and broken bits of icing.

The prizes ranged in value from $2.50 to $20 and included $250 in gold which was in the form of two dollar and a half gold pieces. Certificates wrapped in oiled paper, which were placed in the cake, showed the recipients what prizes they were entitled to.

The big cake contained 17 dozen eggs and was 30 inches in diameter. It was baked in a pan specially made by the Barstow company, the largest size that could be placed in the oven at the Providence bakery.

INCREASES COTTON YIELD BY PLANTING LESS SEED

Winters plants the rows five and a half to six feet apart, where the average farmer plants them three feet apart. He gets in return from one to two and one-fourth bales an acre. Planters ordinarily expect from one-fourth to one-half bale an acre.

HARVARD SQUAD HAS FIRST WORKOUT OF YEAR

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 18—(AP)—Harvard's football team held its first scrimmage of the year in its morning practice session here today. As a result, George Talbot, veteran guard, received a leg injury that will probably keep him on the sidelines for a week.

The injury to Talbot increases the hors de combat list to four. Sam Batchelder halfback Vahan Mousheglan, end, and Henry Gildea, center, watched today's drill from the sidelines due to injuries received earlier in the week.

The afternoon drill was light owing to the strenuousness of the morning scrimmage.

GYPSY MEDICINE WOMAN ACCUSED OF THEFT

A man and a woman gypsy from a band that had been at the fair in North Stonington were before Justice of the Peace Walter Tarbox at Poquetanuck Wednesday night with a charge against them of stealing $8 from Aldoros Hill, father of Constable Hill of Preston.

After a hearing the two were dismissed for lack of evidence, but the justice court secured the return of the $8. The woman who had been arrested and was before the court was not the one who, it is claimed, extracted the money from Mr. Hill's pocketbook.

It is understood that two women of the gypsy band came to the Hill house Wednesday afternoon and while one went to the house, where she asked for some matches and was supplied with them, the other stayed out in the yard to talk to Mr. Hill. When she discovered that he had not been feeling well of late, she professed to be able to do something for him and spread a handkerchief over his back where he had indicated he had been having pains. While she was muttering incantations and making passes with her hands, Mr. Hill kept his hands over his vest pocket where he had his watch, and it was not until some time after the woman had left that he thought to look in his pocketbook, which had been in his trousers pocket. The pocketbook was there yet but $8 out of it was gone.

The gypsy pair was held up at Preston bridge, where they arrived in an automobile, by Officer Luke Riley and was taken before the justice by State Policeman Arthur Whitmarsh.

FLETCHER POST HEARS GOVERNORS OF SIX STATES IN BIG AIR PROGRAMME

At a meeting of R. O. Fletcher post, No. 4, American Legion, Thursday evening, Charles B. Gilbert was named chairman of a committee in charge of the arrangements for an Armistice day parade to be held the morning of November 11th under the auspices of the post. The business session of the post preceded a smoker held at the post rooms, in the Thayer building, and there was an unusually large attendance. The meeting opened in regular form with Commander Patrick J. McMahon presiding. During the business session John Bennett was named chairman and Harry Lathrop vice chairman of a committee in charge of the annual Armistic day banquet. The meeting also appointed a committee to arrange for the entertainment of visiting Legionnaires who will visit Norwich on their way to the national convention at Boston next month. This committee comprises Dr. Thomas O'Neil and Gilbert Rogers. Charles B. Gilbert was named chairman of the committee in charge of the Armistice day parade and the remaining members of the committee are Dr. Thomas O'Neil, Harry Lathrop and John Bennett.

Following the business meeting the members listened in on an all American programme from radio stations WEAF and WJZ. Governors of six states were heard in brief addresses.

From Boston, the control point of the entire programme, were heard Governor Frank Allen and Mayor James Curley. William T. Gardiner, governor of Maine, spoke from Portland, former Governor Alfred E Smith, of New York, spoke from New York city, and O. L. Bodenhamer, national commander of the American Legion, was heard from Washington, D. C.

The programme then shifted to Florida from where the listeners heard an adress by Governor Doyle E. Carlton at Jacksonville. From Dallas, Texas, Governor Daniel Moody was heard and Governor C. C. Young was heard from San Francisco. Governor A. W. Norblad spoke from Portland, Ore., and Lieutenant Governor Fred E. Sterling spoke from Chicago.

Legion bands were heard from each of the several cities and also on the air were choruses of Legion members. A feature of the programme was a series of sketches portraying the birth and preservation of the nation. The opening scenes were in the tower of the Old North church in Boston and the actors in the episode spoke from the tower. Subsequent scenes depicted Woodrow Wilson's declaration of war and some of the important battles of the World war.

The first Armistice celebration was reproduced and the sounding "Taps" closed this feature of the programme. Soloists heard during the broadcast were Madame Schumann Heink, Martha Atwood and Reginald Warrenrath. The Victor orchestra, under the direction of Nathaniel Shilkret was heard in support of the soloists and in special selections.

The radio was lent and operated by the Hanover-Curland Co., refreshments were served and cigars circulated. WTIC, the Hartford radio station, was not on the air for this broadcast, but will have a special Legion programme of its own Friday evening of next week.

DANIELSON STIRRED UP BY FREAK FIRE ALARMS

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 18—A barrage of fire alarm calls succeeding each other in a hit and miss fashion and blowing of all kinds of numbers that started in at 9:20 this evening had the average citizen so upset that he might have been excused for searching around as to whether the town was burning or his coattails were on fire. It later developed that not much was the matter. But don't tell it to the firemen. They went out to fight a fire that could not have done much damage anyhow in the automobile morgue on the banks of the Assawaga river, just across the stream from Westfield cemetery and off Main street. It was twenty minutes after midnight when they got to headquarters and if there are any inquiries as to what the fire loss was they must be answered by the old wheeze, ask me another?

The firemen do not work on a salary up in this town and they were not at all enthusiastic shortly after this midnight for being called out and to do what amounted to a lot of shadow boxing. It took a lot of water in an effort to save a lot of stuff that apparently already had been discarded. It was nearing 1 a. m when most of the smokeaters had a chance to go home.

As to the surplus calliope series of fire alarm calls that came in and startled the whole borough and as to how it all came about there was no explanation early this morning. It is possible that several boxes were pulled in at or near the same time. It so happened that northern lights were flashing their strange phenomena in the skies at the time and there were those who said the aurora did it. But it just wasn't true.

SUFFERS SLIGHT INJURIES IN AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT

Joseph Mulhall, Juliet street, Dorchester, Mass., a construction foreman at the new county home on Laurel Hill, was slightly injured early Thursday evening when the machine he was driving tipped over at tunnel hill on the Jewett City road. Mulhall was taken to the W. W. Backus hospital where he was found to be suffering from cuts and lacerations. He will be discharged from the hospital this (Friday) morning. Constable Potter of Lisbon, who investigated the accident ordered Mulhall under arrest on a charge of reckless driving. The accused will be tried before the Lisbon town court. It was reported that the machine ran up the side of the bank and tipped over when it ran back into the road.

WILLIAM BREND FIGURES IN BIG FLORIDA PUBLIC WORK

The laying of the last of a 30-mile pipe line for the water system of St. Petersburg, Fla., is illustrated in a St. Petersburg paper, which shows a former Norwich boy, William R. Brend, who is superintendent of the plant of the Lockjoint Pipe Co., at Dellwood. The final piece laid was a 16-inch section in the 36-inch line. Due to the fast work of the pipe-laying crew the Pinellas Water company was unable to plan a ceremony marking the laying of the last pipe, but officials found it out in time to notify Mayor J. D. Pearce of O. F. Fraze, director of public utilities and they were on hand to witness the historical event and be in the picture in which Mr. Brend appears.

Mr. Brend was graduated in the Norwich Free academy class of 1918 and is a brother of Carl W. Brend of 156 Palmer street.

FRESHMEN ARE WELCOMED AT CONNECTICUT COLLEGE

About one hundred and seventy-five freshmen arrived at the Connecticut college Wednesday afternoon and evening for the introductory program of events, arranged for their benefit, which takes place yearly at the college for one week preceding the actual opening of the academic year. Met at the station by upper classmen who are assisting the freshmen week committee, the newcomers were escorted to their new homes to be welcomed by their respective house fellows and house juniors, and to receive their first introduction to the campus. In the week to come they will have opportunities to familiarize themselves with their new surroundings and become acquainted with the faculty and with the heads of important student organizations. They will also undergo certain routine examinations.

An assembly in the recently completed Fanning hall opened the schedule for Thursday. Addresses of welcome were made by President Blunt, and by Miss E. Elverna Burdick, acting dean of students. To facilitate the handling of the large class the freshmen were divided into two groups, one of which proceeded to medical and physical examinations, while the other listened to an address by Miss Alice Ramsay, director of the college personnel bureau.

A tea was given in the afternoon by the upper classmen for the freshmen, and their families. A student assembly in Fanning hall in the evening at 7:30 completed the program for Thursday.

NORWICH STATE HOSPITAL NEEDS NEW BUILDING

An addition to the main dining room and a building to house male employes were two needs of the Norwich state hospital which were presented Wednesday at a meeting of the budget committee of state board of finance and control which met in Hartford. There was also a request for two new shops at the Cheshire reformatory. The Norwich work would call for about $30,000 and the Cheshire work for about $40,000.

The running expenses of both institutions will be larger for the coming biennium than during the biennium of 1929 to 1931 Commissioner of Finance Edward F. Hill said, as there are more inmates in each institution than at the time the present budget was drawn up.

Other departments which had hearings made no requests for unusually large appropriations. They are: adjutant general's department, state athletic commission, public utilities commission, education of the deaf, and department of state agencies and institutions.

No need to Change Laxatives

If in your fight against constipation you have been continually increasing your doses—changing from pills to salts and back to pills for relief—you will welcome this interesting discovery of modern science.

It is now known that the success of any laxative depends on uniform internal distribution—that unless it is thoroughly and evenly distributed throughout the intestinal tract irregular and unsatisfactory action will result.

This explains the success of the modern chewing gum laxative known as Feen-a-mint. As you chew this delicious gum the tasteless laxative it contains is mixed with the saliva and carried to the intestinal tract evenly, smoothly, without shock to the system.

Because of its thorough distribution, you will find Feen-a-mint effective in milder doses than ordinary laxatives. With the proper dosage it is not necessary to increase the amount of Feen-a-mint you take nor to switch to another laxative for a change. Feen-a-mint is harmless and contains no habit-forming drugs. Truly the health laxative. Ask for a package at any drug store.—Adv.

When Will You Be 42?

ATHLETICS CLINCH AMERICAN LEAGUE PENNANT BY WINNING FROM WHITE SOX

CHICAGO, Sept. 18—(AP)—Connie Mack led his Philadelphia Athletics to the threshold of world series gold and glory for the second consecutive season today. They scored a 14 to 10 victory over the White Sox, while Washington was losing to Cleveland, to clinch the American league title.

The 68 year-old leader—born Cornelius McGillicuddy—saw his team move into the championship port today for the seventh time since he took charge of the club.

The seventh championship gave Philadelphia an all-time American league record for producing winners, Boston and New York having been tied with the A's until today's climax.

On October 1, the kindly strategian will send his team in quest of a fifth world baseball title. In 1910 and last year, the Athletics defeated the Cubs in world series play, winning four games to one on each occasion. In 1911 and 1913, John McGraw's New York Giants were Mack's victims, Philadelphia winning four games and losing two in 1911, and taking four out of six two seasons later. Boston, under the late George Stallings, won four straight from the American league titleholders in 1914, causing Mack to wreck his club and assume a 15-year task of rebuilding.

The Athletics did not blaze impressively to victory today. Rather, they staggered in. George Earnshaw, one of Mack's righthanded aces, was extremely wild and was removed in the third after being caught for five runs. Philadelphia tied it up in the third with a five-run assault of its own, but the Sox kept going and by the end of the sixth were leading 10 to 6. The Athletics arose in their might in the seventh and banged in five more runs to win the game and the pennant.

It was necessary to call in Bob Grove, the fireball southpaw, to quell the Sox. Grove went to work after Earnshaw, Le Roy Mehaffey and George Walberg had failed, and smothered all further attempts to delay the title clinching.

Philadelphia generated a 20-hit attack on five White Sox pitchers, with Al Simmons, Mickey Cochrane, Bing Miller and Dykes showing the way with three each. A homer and a pair of singles, which accounted for three runs was Simmons' contribution to the championship cause.

The Athletics will move on to St. Louis tomorrow, with nothing to worry about until October 1, when either St. Louis, Brooklyn or the Cubs will invade Shibe park at Philadelphia for the opening of the 1930 world championship struggle.

THE NEW PENNANT IS CONNIE MACK'S EIGHTH

NEW YORK, Sept. 18—(AP)—The 1930 triumph of the Philadelphia Athletics, insured today when the Athletics defeated the Chicago White Sox and Cleveland ended Washington's last hope of victory, marked Connie Mack's eighth American league championship, although it sent him to only his seventh world series. There was no world series when he won for the first time in 1902.

The tall tactician has won four world championships, 1910, 1911, 1913 and 1929. He was defeated in 1905 and 1914.

Although it has appeared almost a certainty that the Athletics would win this year's American league championship ever since they staged their great August spurt which put them ten full games ahead of the field, their 1930 effort was greater than that of 1929. The championship was won last year on September 14, when the Athletics defeated Chicago, and the A's won their 100th game Sept. 21. The standing at the close of the 1929 season was 104 victories and 46 defeats.

This year, there probably will be fewer victories and more defeats on their record. Today's triumph was their 99th of the season against 48 defeats, and they have only seven games left to play.

The decision in the National league as to the Athletics' world series opponent, now very much in doubt, was made last year on September 18 when the Chicago Cubs became established beyond dispute, not by a victory on their own account but by a defeat of the Pittsburgh Pirates by the Boston Braves.

JOCKEYS ARE LOCATED, SAFE AT THEIR HOMES

CHICAGO, Sept. 18—(AP)—The mystery of the disappearance of Jockeys Paul Neal and Jimmy Marcum was solved today when the youngsters were located at the home of the former at Benton, Ill.

Each had riding engagements for yesterday at Lincoln Fields—Neal having three mounts and Marcum four—but they failed to appear for checking in and it was feared they might have been kidnaped.

Trainer J. B. Patridge of the Valley Lake stable, at whose home Marcum lives, attributed the trip to Benton in Neal's new automobile, as a "whim trip," and homesickness on Neal's part.

For failing to fulfill their engagements the riders are liable to $100 fines and suspensions of 30 days. Neal is 18 years old, and Marcum, one of the leading riders on Chicago tracks this season, is 17.

YANKS NOSE OUT BROWNS IN TENTH

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 18—(AP)—The New York Yankees won their last game of the season with the Browns today by a 7 to 6 count in ten innings, giving them 16 triumphs in the season's 22 games.

Four home runs, two by Charley Ruffing, Yankee starting pitcher, featured the slugging match. Combs hit another for New York and Schulte one for the Browns. Ruffing fared better at bat than on the mound. He gave way to Herb Pennock after seven innings when his second homer had given the Yanks a 6-5 lead.

Pennock allowed the Browns to tie the score in the ninth but got credit for the victory when Lary's single in the tenth scored Cooke with the winning run. McEvoy pitched the last inning.

Stiely and Coffman worked for the Browns, the latter being charged with the defeat. Score:

FERRELL PITCHES HIS 25TH WIN AGAINST SENATORS

CLEVELAND, Sept. 18—(AP)—Wesley Ferrell pitched his way to a brilliant 3 to 2 victory, his 25th of the season, over Sad Sam Jones as Cleveland made it two out of three from Washington today and spoiled the Senators' last chance for the pennant.

Dick Porter, right fielder, shared honors with Ferrell blasting a double to score Jameson with the winning run in the ninth, when the score was tied and two were out.

Jones pitched masterful ball, an error giving the Indians their first run. He struck out nine batters. Ferrell suffered more from errors, two runs resulted from miscues. He struck out 6 men, and allowed but 7 hits, one less than his mates got off Jones.

RED SOX NOSE OUT TIGERS ON FLUKE HOMER

DETROIT, Sept. 18—(AP)—Mark Koenig, veteran shortstop, went into the Detroit-Boston game today as a relief pitcher. The Red Sox won by 4 to 3 but through no fault of Koenig. He held them scoreless during the last two innings allowing one hit.

Koenig who was acquired from the New York Yankees on a trade this season, has been having eye trouble and today wore eye glasses in the game. He showed a good slow ball, curve and some fast ones.

The Red Sox made three of their runs on a fluke homer by Scarritt off Bridges' delivery in the second inning. The ball struck Doljack's shin as he was trying for a shoestring catch and bounded to the right field pavilion, with Oliver and Heving on base.

BERG HAS LITTLE TROUBLE OUTPOINTING JOE GLICK

Berg swarmed all over the Williamsburg veteran to win seven of the ten rounds in the opinion of ringside critics. Glick held the Englishman on fairly even terms for the first half of the bout but in the last five rounds Berg cut loose with a bewildering assortment of punches for which Glick could find no adequate defence. There were no knockdowns.

Koli Kola, of Porto Rico, stopped Terry Roth, New York featherweight, in the second round when the referee stepped in and halted the bout, declaring Roth no match for his rival. Each weighed 124.

GAINER ADDS LIGHT HEAVY TITLE TO HIS LIST

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 18—(AP)—Al Gainer, dusky New Haven fighter, added the Connecticut light heavyweight championship to his state heavyweight title by nosing out a hairline decision over Waterbury's Lithuanian, Jack Kelly, in a 10-round battle at the White City stadium, Savin Rock. Both fighters spent part of the evening in recumbent attitudes on the canvas and Gainer took a short excursion through the ropes after stopping one of Kelly's vicious right handers. Weights were even, each scaling 170 pounds.

BATTALINO WORKING HARD FOR BOUT WITH KAPLAN

HARTFORD, Sept. 18—Bat Battalino has started boxing now in preparation for his ten-round bout with Kid Kaplan at the Hurley stadium next Wednesday night and from now until the day of battle the featherweight champion will move at feverish pace in the training grind.

Kaplan, off to an intensive training schedule long before the champion since he is faced with the necessity of making 131 1-4 at weighing-in time Wednesday, has been boxing for several days with his three training partners, Tony Leto, Johnny Scatzi and Mickey Genaro. Kaplan is down to 133 and says he will make the required poundage and be fast and strong.

An unprecedented demand for tickets from all parts of the state and from western Massachusetts indicates a gate of $50,000, a New England record for a non-title affair.

Matchmaker Ed Hurley has arranged five six-rounders for the undercard.

Tony Leto, who hails from Florida but is now making Hartford his headquarters, will be a principal in one of the sixes, but his opponent is yet to be named. Leto defeated Jimmy Watts in the star bout at the New Haven Arena Monday night.

Ralph Lenny of Union City, N. J., Bat Battalino's clever stablemate, who has had easy opponents in his bouts in Connecticut rings, will meet the best boy he has yet encountered on Nutmeg State soil when he fights Jose Martinez of Spain. They are lightweights.

This is the balance of the supporting card:

While interest centers in the star bout, the clash between the present and the former world's featherweight champions, Matchmaker Ed Hurley has given much attention to framing an undercard which promises a lot of rugged action though the names of no headliners adorn it.

JONES NOT YET TUNED UP FOR COMPETITIVE GOLF

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 18—(AP)—Another large gallery, kept in check by policemen and ropes, followed Bobby Jones today in his second practice round over the Merion Cricket club's championship course, where next week the world's premier linksman will attempt to capture his fourth major title of the year, the national amateur.

Jones teamed up in a foursome with T. A. Bourn, youthful "native" champion of England, and lost by a margin of 2 up to Roland MacKenzie, brilliant young Washington golfer, and George V. Rotan, veteran Texan. The incomparable Atlantan was not yet attuned to competitive pitch, and many of his shots went astray. He took 40-38—78, six strokes over par. MacKenzie played the best golf of the quartet, turning in a card of 36-39—75.

Harrison R. "Jimmy" Johnston, of St. Paul, United States amateur champion, arrived today and took his first practice in the afternoon. Playing in a foursome with Richard A. Jones of New York, as his partner, against Max R. Marston, former amateur king and Gene Homns. Johnston scored a 71 to make the match end all even.

Scores ran lower than any previous day of the practice. Walter S. Brown, California and Hawaii champion, and George Von Elm were tied with Johnston for the low scoring honors. Others who turned in low scores included J. Wood Platt, 72; Arthur Sweet, 73; Johnny Lehman, 74; Don Carrick, 74; Chick Evans, 75, and George Voigt, 75.

Nearly all of the prominent players were guests at a luncheon in the Penn Athletic club today at which Jones was made an honorary life member of the club, an honor bestowed upon only four other persons, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, Clarence Chamberlain, Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, and Lieutenant Frank Schoble, a young Philadelphian who lost his eye sight in the World war.

BIG FIELD FOR OPEN TOURNEY AT ST. LOUIS

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 18— (AP) —Two hundred and fifty amateurs and professionals, including almost all golf stars in the country, were ready tonight for the opening tomorrow of the $10,000 St. Louis open golf tournament at Sunset Hill Country club. It will end Sunday.

So large is the field that some of the players will have to start around at 7:25 tomorrow morning, and others will not get going until 2:30 p. m.

Horton Smith, slim Missouri youth, rules as the favorite, but will have a lot of competition from Walter Hagen, Leo Diegel, Tommy Armour, Gene Sarazen, Johnny Farrell, Al Espinosa and a host of others. Bobby Jones is one of the few stars not here for the tournament. Chick Evans Chicago amateur, has withdrawn.

Advance estimates of the low score needed to qualify for the final 36 holes of play and to win the first prize have changed considerably due to recent rains slowing up the course. It is expected 150 will enable a player to go all the way through and a 72-hole score of around 278, ten under par, is considered likely to win.

Diegel, Agua Caliente, Mexico, professional and former United States professional champion, turned in a 67 in a practice round today. He went out in 32, two under par, and came back in 35, three under par.

FRIEDMAN DRILLS BACKFIELD AND ENDS IN AERIAL GAME

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 18— (AP) —Guest Coach Bennie Friedman, Michigan's All-American quarterback, today put Yale's backfield and end candidates through a two-hour forward passing drill and demonstrated how the passes that won him fame were made. Friedman will aid Head Coach Mal Stevens in the workouts tomorrow and Saturday, and return from time to time during the season, to help develop Yale's overhead game.

Joe Crowley, the most promising backfield candidate from last year's freshman team, appeared at the practice field today on crutches. He sprained his ankle in yesterday afternoon's workout and will be out for a week or more, Stevens said. The first scrimmage of the season is scheduled for tomorrow.

CARDINALS BEAT BROOKLYN TO TAKE STRATEGIC POSITION AT HEAD OF LEAGUE

By BRIAN BELL

Associated Press Sports Writer

BROOKLYN, Sept. 18—(AP)—The fighting Cardinals of St. Louis today made it three out of three from the somewhat punch drunk Robins of Brooklyn, winning the final game, 4 to 3.

The series advanced the Red Birds to a position of odds on favorites in the pennant chase, and barring another astonishing upheaval in the turbulent championship season, seemed to insure their right to challenge the Athletics in the world series now just around the corner.

In the closing contest the home team out-hit the visitors, eight to five, but the safeties of the invaders were a bit more substantial than those of the home guard. St. Louis won the game with three hits, converting two triples, a home run and a base on balls into the four runs needed to sweep the board.

Burleigh Grimes, who spent nine years pitching for Brooklyn but since 1926 has been touring the National league, was tight in the pinches, but St. Louis reached the delivery of Raymond (Babe) Phelps, Brooklyn youngster, when hits were vital.

Grimes, with a fair suggestion of a fighting bull dog and a tenacious spirit living up to his appearance, stilled Brooklyn bats when activity would have meant at least a temporary red flag, turned against his team's mad dash, which has given it 24 victories in the last 28 games.

Hollis Thurston, a veteran, rushed to the rescue of Phelps and stopped the Cards in their tracks, but then it was a lost cause. Grimes received sensational support, especially from young Charley Gelbert, the short stop who was all over the premises scooping up ground balls, sometimes with one hand, and throwing runners out. Douthit helped with a startling catch and Grimes too, made an extraordinary fielding play on his own account.

Phelps, called "Babe" because he is big, and "Chatterbox" because he has little to say, retired the first nine Cardinals in succession, a sensational one-hand catch by Ike Boone, robbing Douthit of an extra base hit at the very start.

But again a base on balls rose to plague the ambitious Robins. Douthit walked to start the fourth. Wright took Adams' roller and forced Douthit at second and then Frisch, who had not made a hit in the series, tripled to left scoring Adams. Bottomley kept the ball rolling with a home run drive over the right field wall and three runs were in on two hits.

Another run came in the sixth when Douthit tripled to start it. Adams walked and Phelps retired in favor of Thurston. Frisch forced Adams as Douthit scored. The Cardinals later garnered a pair of insignificant singles from Thurston but they were harmless.

The Robins, too, made three hits in the first five innings but they were allotted one to an inning and figured in nothing but the averages. Gelbert tripled with one out in the sixth and ran home when Herman flied deep to Douthit.

Herman's home run over the right field wall, his first hit of the series, added a run in the eighth. Brooklyn launched a late rally in the ninth but it fell a run short. Hendrick singled with one out and Boone slashed a vicious single to right, sending Gink to third. There was wild excitement in the "bull pen" of the Cards as pitchers peeled off bright red windbreakers and furiously began to throw warm-up balls. Grimes, however, was undisturbed. He mopped his brow, took another chew of slippery elm, an aid to his famous "spitter" and prepared to pitch to Lopez.

Warner was sent to first to run for Boone. Lopez hit to deep short and Gelbert made a sparkling pick up and toss to second, forcing Warner. Finn took the place of Lopez at first and Flowers batted for Thurston. Flowers lifted a puny fly in front of the plate for which Mancuso had to run only a few feet. As the ball struck the catcher's glove, Grimes was kneeling in front of him with outstretched hands, prepared to catch the ball if it popped out.

The game today gave the two clubs an even break on the season's play with 11 victories each, but it marked seven straight games won by the Cardinals, for the play once stood at eleven to four, in favor of Brooklyn.

The position of the Cardinals is now regarded by baseball men as well nigh impregnable. The men who make the game their business look at the losing column for their "dope" and this shows that the Robins and the Cubs have each lost three more games than St. Louis.

St. Louis has nine games left to play, the Cubs eight and the Robins seven. The Cardinals now move over to Philadelphia for five games with a double header scheduled for Saturday. Sunday gives them an off day, the series being resumed next week.

GIANTS GIVE CUBS BAD SETBACK IN LEAGUE RACE

NEW YORK, Sept. 18—(AP)—Behind the six hit pitching of Fred Fitzsimmons, the Giants defeated the Chicago Cubs today, 6 to 2, to rob the Chicagoans of a chance to take second place in the standing. The Giants won the series 2 games to 1 and finished ahead of the season 12 to 10.

George Kelly's home run with Gabby Hartnett on base in the fourth saved the Cubs from a shutout and gave them the lead for the only time during the game. The Cubs made three of their six blows in that inning.

Mel Ott started the Giants off ahead by connecting with Guy Bush's delivery for a homer in the second. After losing the lead, New York regained it in the fourth by bunching five more hits off Bush for four runs, singles by Ott and Hogan and a walk to Jackson filled the bases. A double play retired two men with no score, but Fitzsimmons singled to bring in the two men that remained on base and Hughey Critz hit a homer to complete the rally. The final Giant run came in the seventh on a triple by Leach and Lindstrom's single. Lynn Nelson, who replaced Bush in the seventh, gave this tally.

Through this defeat, the Cubs dropped to 2 1-2 games behind the league leading St. Louis Cardinals with only nine games in which to try to make up the big difference. Although victorious the Giants failed to gain on the leaders. They are 5 1-2 games behind first place and three games back of the Cubs.

THREE AMERICAN WOMEN REMAIN IN CANADIAN PLAY

MONTREAL, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Helen Hicks, of Hewlett, N. Y., and two of her compatriots survived quarter-final round play in the Canadian women's open golf championship today.

Joining the champion in the semi-finals were Maureen Orcutt of New York, Mrs. Harlan Higbie of Detroit and Ada Mackenzie of Toronto, sole surviving Dominion hope.

Miss Hicks eliminated Marion Bennett of New Britain, Conn., after an unexpectedly close battle, 3 and 2. Miss Orcutt surprised the gallery with a decisive 6 and 5 triumph at the expense of Mrs. Alexa Stirling Fraser of Ottawa. Mrs. Higbie eliminated Peggy Wattles of Buffalo at the 20th hole after a bitter duel. Miss MacKenzie easily defeated Edith Quier of Reading, Pa., 5 and 4.

Miss Bennett's fine showing against Miss Hicks was a distinct surprise to the gallery. The Connecticut girl rallied after a shaky start to play Miss Hicks shot for shot over most of the route. The champion won the first two holes when Miss Bennett explored every trap she could locate, but a birdie four on the long fifth cut Miss Hicks' margin to one up, where it remained through the ninth hole. Miss Hicks won the 10th and 12th holes to go three up, but Miss Bennett, through some sensational putting, won the 13th and 14th, holing a 30-footer on the 14th. The next two holes went to the champion, however, and the match was over.

JOHNNY GREENE TO PITCH FOR CITIZENS ON SUNDAY

Manager George Bizinski of the Polish Citizens announced that Johnny Greene, the speed ball artist who pitched such a brilliant game last week, will be his choice for mound duty against the Kaceys at New London on Sunday. Johnny completely mystified the New London team in the first game and had them well under control for nine innings last Sunday.

The report from New London is that Tillie Daniels will toe the slab for New London as it was Tillie who held the Citizens to three hits in the third game of the series which was taken by the Kaceys, 2 to 0. The umpires for Sunday's game will be Devlin and Finall, two men from Providence, who have been umpiring league and college ball for a number of years.

KLEIN AND SIMMONS GAIN IN BIG SIX STANDING

(By the Associated Press)

Chuck Klein and Al Simmons registered big gains in the Big Six standing yesterday, mainly through the home run route. Klein hit two homers and two lesser blows in five trips to the plate and raised his average three points to .387. Simmons gained two points with three hits in six times up, one of the blows being a homer. Babe Herman held his mark at .393 with one hit in three attempts and Lou Gehrig retained his .383 mark with one out of two. The leader, Bill Terry, made one hit in four attempts but a semi-official revision of the figures deprived him of one blow previously credited to him and dropped his average to .400. Babe Ruth hit one out of five for a one point loss.

The standing:

PERLICK-RICHARDS BOUT TOPS N. L. ARENA CARD TONITE

NEW LONDON, Sept. 18. — Al Weill, matchmaker for the Thames Arena, will stage his first professional boxing show tomorrow night that will feature a 10 round contest between Herman Perlick Kalamazoo, Mich., lightweight sensation, and Phil Richards of England. Perlick, one of the outstanding 135 pounders, has fought some of the best boxers in his class during the past year and he can be depended upon to give the Englishman a tough argument. Richards fought Bobby Mays here recently and gave the Whaling City southpaw a great fight. Although the verdict was given against him, the decision was booed for several minutes.

In the semi-final windup, Frankie Garcia, Boston, will trade punches with Johnny Pena, rugged New York featherweight sensation. This bout is expected to furnish plenty of action as both lads are hard hitters. Pena has been going great in battles about the state, having won 15 straight. Among his victims are Al Beauregard of Taftville, Eddie Reed, Hartford and Frankie Traynor New Haven.

A six rounder will bring together Jimmy Quinn, Norwich featherweight, former state amateur boxing ace, and Rene Peloquin of Danielson. Both boys have been training hard for the tilt and a great battle is expected. Quinn made a hit with local fandom on the last professional boxing card staged here and they will welcome him back in action.

Two four rounders will feature Tommy Hartell of the Coast Guards attempting to beat Joe Russo, Westerly middleweight puncher; and Benny Galenin, Coast Guards, will mix with Billy Buelle of Westerly in the opening tilt.

INDUSTRIAL BOWLING LEAGUE TO BE ORGANIZED TONIGHT

A meeting of the Norwich Industrial bowling league will be held at 7:45 o'clock this evening at the Italian club, to formulate plans for the league which will operate at the Aetna alleys during the fall and winter. There are twelve teams entered in the league and these teams will be divided into two divisions, the National and the American. The teams entered are the Thermos No. 1, which won the American title last year; Thermos No. 2, Atlantic Carton Co., J. B. Martin Co., U. S. Finishing Co., Lane Battery Co., Connecticut Co., Oakland Co. Smoke Shop, Italian club, the Saxony Co. and the Gas and Electric team.

The Atlantic Carton Co. league will get underway at the Aetna alleys on Monday evening, Sept. 29. The Cutting and Creasing department team won the title last year and hope to repeat this year although strong competition is expected from the Shipping department team, runners-up last season.

BELL THAT TOLLED NEWS ALMOST CENTURY RETIRED

MANSFIED, Ohio (AP)—The ancient fire bell which has tolled tidings of disaster and joy in this little city for almost a century will be mounted in the public square as a public monument.

The bell pealed the announcement of the entry of America into the Mexican war. The news of the firing upon Fort Sumter by the Confederate batteries was also relayed to Mansfield by its metallic tongue, and when Abraham Lincoln was assassinated it chanted a dirge of mourning.

THE FARMER'S TALK TO FARMERS

THE PROBLEM OF UNEMPLOYMENT

(Written Specially For The Bulletin)

"If it isn't one thing, it's another."

"The farm problem," so-called, we have always with us. It greets us at dewy morn and tags us to stilly eve.

But you must have noticed that of late it has been sort o' playing second fiddle. It isn't any longer a really first-class, A-No.-One bogie. Its place on the first page among the scare-heads has been taken over either by "business depression," or "the mid-west drouth," or "unemployment."

Especially "unemployment."

As the evidence is gathered, it becomes clear that drouth damage has been local and exceptional, rather than universal or even general, while some sections have been hard hit, others have escaped. There is need for temporary assistance, here and there, but we lie in no danger of famine or even of serious shortage.

Business depression, on the contrary, instead of being local or confined mainly to this country, is found, upon investigation, to be simply world-wide. The department of commerce has been collating the reports sent to it from its agents in England, France, Germany, Italy, Cuba, Canada, Australia, Japan, etc. It finds the same "business blues" tinging them all. "British trade depression has reached a critical stage." In Italy "business is at a practical standstill." Cuban and Canadian merchants unite in complaining of "extremely low sales volume." France can't pay its debts because of poor business; Germany reports "money tight and collections slow;" Japan complains that it can't sell its raw silk, and the Philippines that they're carrying over almost all their rice for lack of buyers; South America is breaking out, almost all over, in revolutionary boils and blains and carbuncles, induced by the "prevailing economic depression."

Instead of being confined to ourselves, it is evident that the business sickness is a universal contagion or infection, from which the whole world is suffering quite as badly as we. It is self-evident that we, as a people or as a government, can't any more effectually control world trade conditions than we can weather freaks. We can't make it rain when Iowa crops need water, nor can we make the people of Europe and Asia buy big bills of goods which they haven't the money to pay for.

But when it comes to unemployment, ah, than the dogs begin to bark and the crows to croak!

The bolshevists, both those of the so-called parlor and of the bomb-factory variety, join in demanding that the state take charge.

The socialists, whether of the torch-bearing or the tract-distributing kind, unite in denouncing the government as responsible.

The politicians, whose appetites for office can only be seated by keeping the mob comparatively good-natured, exude gallons of crocodile tears and make countless windy promises of what they'll do for 'the dear peepul,'" if only said dear people will elect them to office.

Even they lack the assurance to charge that the government is responsible for mid-west drouths or South American revolutions. But they pretend to believe that the government could give everybody work and wages if it really wanted to.

Consequently, this unemployment bogie is being exhibited to all and sundry, from hundreds of different political side-shows, with the intent of scaring or cajoling voters into paying their dimes or quarters to the showmen; eventually, of course, with the idea of enmeshing their votes.

All of which leads this particular John Farmer to wonder a little, in his slow country way, just what the real facts are about the unemployment situation.

The real facts, I say, not the statistics gathered by the census bureau or by local boards of trade.

Such statistics are, no doubt, fairly accurate so far as they go. They tell how many people are not working.

That, however, does not show the number who want to work but can't find work.

These last are the only sort we are called upon to sympathize with and help or even consider.

I can hardly conceive of a more terrible situation than that in which an honest and industrious man is placed, who wants to work for his own and his family's living, but can't find any work to do. He is entitled not only to sympathy but to help. Not charity, but warm-hearted brotherly help, just such as any decent farmer would give to a neighbor who had broken his leg, and couldn't milk his cows or swill his hogs till the bones grew together again.

But no census reckons up that class. All it can do is tell us how many are not working, regardless of whether they want to work or not.

This latter category includes a certain number who aren't a bit in love with labor, who would much rather let the town or the state support them in idleness; who plead unemployment as a mere camouflage for laziness; who, if offered work are apt to refuse it as "below them" or abandon it after a day or two as "too hard."

Consider, in this connection, two illuminating facts. The city of New York maintains a free employment bureau, purposely to provide all possible employment to those out of work who want work. During a recent week 200 women who applied to it for jobs turned down 160 offers of positions as cooks, domestics and housekeepers, some paying as much as $80 a month with board and lodging. That is one fact.

The other is that in every farming community (in the east, anyway,) farmers are being compelled to cut down or abandon their farming operations, because they can't get competent men to help them in farmwork. The men who used to earn their livings planting corn and hoeing potatoes now scornfully refuse to stoop to such "menial" labor, just as the "unemployed" women of New York city would rather remain unemployed than condescend to cook and wash and sweep.

I don't know but it is already too late for people who really want work to find it on eastern farms. His inability to secure adequate help has driven the average employing farmer to a conviction that the case is hopeless, and that he must constrict his activities to such "hand-to-mouth" farming as he can manage, alone. One by one his outlying fields have been abandoned and his plans for improvements canceled. Sorely against his will he has been deprived of the use of his own lands by the refusal of those who once helped him cultivate them to continue their services.

But, if it be true that there is no longer an insistent call for workers on the farms, the fault must be laid squarely at the doors of the workers themselves. They have so long and so unanimously turned deaf ears to the call from Macedonia, "Come back and help us," that the opportunity for help has itself diminished almost to the vanishing point.

The man or woman who really wants to earn a living by honest work may and probably does have a preference regarding the sort of work he would choose. This is natural. But, when confronted with the merciless Hobson's choice of necessity, he or she will take any sort of honest work which offers, rather than beg, borrow or steal. She will not turn down a job as cook because she would rather be a "saleslady," nor will he refuse work on a farm because the hay-field is too far from the movies.

If we could only know how many people who really want to work are idle because they can't find anything of any sort to do, we'd know better what steps to take to remedy an intolerable condition.

There are a good many, however, who are out of work all summer because they won't do anything but shovel snow, and others who are out of work all winter because they won't do anything but mow lawns.

There are men who won't touch a ditch-digger's shovel because they prefer to be salesmen or bookkeepers; there are women who turn down a chambermaid's job because they want to be social secretaries or chorus girls.

They won't do what they can, when they find themselves unable to do what they'd like.

I'm blessed if I can see why you and I should be taxed, officially or unofficially, to provide doles for such critters.

Most of us, in the course of our lives, have had to do things we didn't want to. We've had to plow and plant and fight midges in the hot sun when we'd much rather have been soaking in "the old swimmin' hole," or fishing down the willow-shaded brook. We've had to get out cornstalky manure when we'd much rather have been attending the Sunday school picnic. We've had to work, perhaps all our lives, at undesirable tasks, simply because they were the only ones we could honestly earn our bread at.

That's life. It's a struggle for most of us, not a merry-go-round. We can't always or often pick and choose. We must take what we can get and be glad of a half-loaf when we can't feast on sirloin steak.

We can't any of us go too far out of our ways, or take too much trouble, or make too great sacrifices to help tide over men and women who sincerely want to earn their livings, but can't, for reasons out of their own control.

But it is harder to see why we should be asked to coddle people who won't work unless they can pick and choose their employment and dictate their own wages.

There ought to be some way in which we could tell the two kinds apart, so as to know when to offer help and when to use the horse-whip.

THE FARMER.

VILLAGE SPORTS WISH LUCK TO LIPTON'S GREEN SHAMROCK

The time is at hand for the big yacht race between Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock V. and the American Enterprise, off Newport, on the 30-mile course. Many in the village are betting on the greatest sport that ever came out of England, losing with a smile. He never won the mug, but if the year 1930 will bring the tea merchant luck and let him take back across the ocean the cup for the first time, the people of the U. S. A. will be happy to see the great sport win, after spending many thousand dollars building yachts. Will he carry an English rabbit foot to shake off the hard luck he has had trying to win so many times? If he wins the races, his crew will get a pension for life more than a John D. Rockefeller dime.

When the Shamrock V. was in Groton getting groomed for the big races, about 50 yacht builders went over to see the craft. Never in their life did they see such a mast and so straight. It was over 100 feet long and well built, sets pretty in the water and sure can step in the wind. That is quite a ways to come with a yacht to try to win the mug—over 3,000 miles of open space, nothing but water to look at. Not many sports would do that. Sir Thomas is 81 years young, active, can walk fast, and seems as if about 50 and is waiting for the race day, to see what his green yacht can do in American waters. The steward on his yacht has served more beans than any steward in the world; it seems he has been at it for 38 years, behind a pan in a yacht or steamer. He claims if the tea-maker's yacht don't win it will not be his fault, for he sure has fed the crew good to make them full of pep.

One member of the crew was having a drop of tea and got telling fortunes, how the races would turn out. He told his buddies that the Shamrock would win the first one and the Enterprise the second, with Shamrock the third, American yacht fourth and the Shamrock the next two. That would take across the ocean the cup for the first time, and then some American yacht would have to sail over the waves to win it back.

Two good sports, Andrew Samson and Mike Sprat, who sure love yacht races and have plans to attend the races at Newport in their yacht, Quick Eye, have been following yachts. Samson, who is 82, and has not a gray hair, told his pal, Sprat, who is 80, and has a new tooth growing in his upper jaw if Sir Thomas wins the races he would buy him a new Austin auto that can almost run on castor oil. But if the American yacht takes home the bacon, Sprat would have to give Samson a parlor suite. Talk about sports! Those two young timers, or as they are called "The Waterfront Timers" are always together. They have attended three races of Sir Thomas Lipton's craft before this race. Samson claims he has never talked to such a good sportsman as he is—always telling a joke, never looks on the dark side of life, but on the bright side. This is the year for the great old sportsman to win, it is claimed, unless some hard luck happens, and his admirers are betting anything from a steamboat to a doughnut that the green yacht, Shamrock, will win the race. About 100 from here have planned to watch the contest off Newport.

WM. H. MARSH INJURED— STRUCK BY NEW JERSEY CAR

William H. Marsh, of Mystic, was painfully injured Wednesday when he was knocked down by a car from Englewood, N. J., operated by William Brant, of East Main street, in front of the Buick auto shop. Mr. Brant, a patrolman, had stopped near the Liberty Pole and asked the way to Boston. He had started up and was in second gear when he noticed Mr Marsh crossing the street, from the left side. Mr. Marsh apparently saw the car and stopped. As he did so he threw out his hand, and Mr. Brant, thinking he meant for him to come ahead, started his car and as Mr Marsh started at the same time, the latter was struck by the auto, just below the right knee and thrown to the ground. Mr. Brant stopped and helped pick up the injured man who was unconscious, and carried him into Dr Meyer's. The doctor was not at home so Dr. Dunham was called. It was found that Mr. Marsh had a bad bruise below the knee, his hands were badly cut and he had other cuts and bruises. As soon as he began to regain consciousness, he was carried to his room in the Clinton hotel. His nephew, Dr. Walter Russell, of New Haven, was notified and came on immediately. He took Mr. Marsh to New London where he was to be examined at the hospital and if able to, would continue on home with Mr. Russell. The police barracks were called but as they were so busy they in turn called the Mystic night patrolman, as the day patrolman was out of town on business, and Patrolman Noyes took Mr. Brant to Groton where he told a straightforward story. He was placed under $500 bonds and being unable to furnish it then was brought back to Mystic and held. He was released later in the day and his car was kept for security.

Mrs. Sarah Welch, of Baptist Hill, has a night-blooming cereus and Wednesday evening, when two blossoms came out, numerous friends came in to see them. They also offered congratulations to Mrs. Welch on her 80th birthday.

Mrs. William Slack, who has been a patient in the Westerly hospital, has been dismissed and returned to her home.

Mr. and Mrs Charles B. Allyn, of Mystic, and their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Everett Gallup of Ledyard and Mrs. H. O. Hawthorne, of Groton, motored to Hamburg Wednesday and attended the Grange fair.

When the Women's Baptist Mission society of Stonington Union association met in the First Baptist church, Stonington, Tuesday, the following local women were elected to office: First vice president, Mrs. Artis Stoddard; treasurer, Mrs. Anna R. Williams; secretary, Mrs. Sadie Van Pelt; auditor, Mrs. L. J. Shepler.

Burial was in St. Patrick's cemetery.

Frederick Smart

Funeral services for Frederick Smart, 61, who died suddenly at his home in Old Mystic Tuesday afternoon, were held Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the funeral home on East Main street. Rev. Louis J. Shepler, pastor of the Union Baptist church, officiated. The bearers were John Burrill, Roy Sebastian, Frank Sebastian, Charles Sebastian, Harry Jones and Edgar Royster. Burial was in Elm Grove cemetery.

Doyle, Paul Massey, Mrs. Ida Crandall, Mrs. Alida Hill, Mrs. Stanley Barber and Mrs. Frank Moore

Mrs. Susanna H. Pugh, of Old Mystic, has purchased about four acres of land adjoining her property. The property was auctioned off by Tax Collector Carlos W. Allyn, Tuesday, to satisfy back town tax claims and was owned by C. F. and A. R. Hartley. The owners have been dead many years. The tract is almost valueless, but Mrs. Pugh now has absolute right of way to her property.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Holmes and children, Kenneth and Norma, and Mr and Mrs. George R. Swain attended North Stonington fair Tuesday evening

Supt. W. H. Noyes, of Stonington schools, has made numerous changes in the school schedule. In Old Mystic, school now begins at 8:30 and is dismissed at 3:05. Up to this year, all pupils went in at 9 o'clock and were dismissed at 3:35, except the kindergarten which was dismissed at 11:30 in the morning. At the start of this year, the first grade came to school at 8:30 and remained there until 12:30, then went home for the day. The kindergarten came in at 1:05 and was dismissed at 3:35. The other grades came in at 9 as usual. This seemed to cause so much confusion that the first mentioned schedule is now being tried out, having started Wednesday morning.

FISHING ON C. V. BRIDGES MUST BE DISCONTINUED

Officials of the Central Vermont railroad have been warning local fishermen who have been fishing from the railroad bridge at Uncasville and Trading Cove bridge every day for the past six weeks to discontinue this practice. Engineers on the trains have been filing complaints in the main office, they having to apply their air brakes when approaching these bridges. This results in a great loss of time and on the other hand if a fisherman happens to be in the middle of the trestle while the train is rumbling along with 60 or 70 freight cars, by the engineer applying his brakes quickly which he must do to avoid loss of lives, a great expense to the railroad might result. Final warning will be given this week by the railroad representatives who are patroling these bridges and if the warning is not heeded the trespasser will be brought before the town court.

The C. E. society of Palmertown Union Baptist church plans to conduct a community lawn social at the Palmer homestead.

Local fishermen are reporting large catches of bluefish which are being caught on the waterfront at the Gair plant, Uncasville. Snapper blues are also abundant.

TEMPERATURE, NOT CALENDAR, DECIDES REAL "AGE" OF EGG

Seeking the answer two Cornell scientists find that it is not so much days as degrees of temperature that produce the antiquity.

It is found that an egg as "fresh" as three days from the hen may actually be older than an egg more than two months old by the calendar. In other words, high temperature ages the egg far faster than does father time.

These findings are reported to the American Chemical society by Dr. Paul F. Sharp and Charles K. Powell of Cornell university. They find that the flattening of egg yolks is a better index of the real antiquity than is any other age indicator.

Measured by this standard the quality of eggs dropped 30 per cent in about three days at a temperature of just under 100 degrees Fahrenheit. As the storage temperatures were lowered the yolks retained their freshness for greatly increased periods.

At 77 degrees eight days passed before 30 per cent deterioration, at about 61 degrees 23 days, at 37.6 degrees 65 days and at a little above 35 degrees required 100 days to age as much as at the 100 degree temperature.

BANKS CARRY LESS CASH TO DISCOURAGE ROBBERS

MINNEAPOLIS (AP)— Bankers in northwestern states have agreed to cut drastically the amount of cash they keep on hand as a means of discouraging bank robbers.

In Minnesota, between 98 and 99 per cent of the 1,026 banks that are members of the state bankers' association have agreed to the plan, and customers are being notified that all withdrawals of sums greater than $500 must be preceded by advance notice to the bank.

Million Cattle Tested

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP)—Tuberculosis tests were administered to 1,001,675 cattle in 93,001 herds in Illinois during the year ending June 30, 1930, according to the state director of agriculture.

Leper Colony at Amoy

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

Crane Co., Bridgeport Division.

Messrs. Charles Belknap and E. G. Burnham formed a partnership at Bridgeport, with a joint capitol of less than $8,500 in the year 1863, and existed until January 20, 1872. Articles of association of the Belknap and Burnham Manufacturing company were adopted and by-laws passed at their first meeting on January 25, 1872. At that time, brass screwed valves and fittings, in small sizes, seemed to be the popular material manufactured.

On December 18, 1874, articles of association of the Eaton, Cole and Burnham company were drawn and signed and the first stockholders' meeting held and by-laws passed. Later on January 29, 1875, they purchased the Belknap & Cole company in New York city. This purchase included the business in Oil City and Karns City, Penna.

The newly formed company, (The Eaton, Cole and Burnham company) increased their lines of valves and fittings, and entered into the manufacturing of gas burners, oil well pulp valves and many other articles pertaining to the oil and gas industries, including pipe threading machines, which were becoming so popular at that time. The largest valves and fittings manufactured in 1903 were 24-inch globe, angle and gate valves. Some sizes of valves were tested as high as 1000 pounds hydrostatic test. Up to this time, a full line of cast iron and brass valves and fittings had been successfully made.

In 1903, the plant was purchased by Crane company, whose main office is located in Chicago. They immediately started to erect a new plant at Cedar creek, a tributary of Long Island sound. The new plant included a malleable iron foundry, and galvanizing department so that a complete line of malleable iron fittings could be manufactured and the sizes of valves increased to 36-inch.

The new location is ideal for receiving raw material by rail or water. The shipping platform is suitable for loading 23 cars, and their private steamer delivers foreign shipments on board ocean-going steamers.

In 1909 the name was changed to The Crane Valve company and later in 1914 this company was absorbed by Crane company, which started in business in 1855. They now manufacture a complete line of iron body brass mounted valves, both wedge gate and double disc; in sizes 2-inch to 72-inch inclusive, globe and angle valves up to 24-inch, a full line of malleable iron screwed and flanged fittings, cast iron and ferro steel screwed and flanged fittings, cast steel screwed and flanged valves and fittings, radiators, boilers, steam specialties, pipe bends, fabricated pipe, drop forged valves and fittings, ammonia valves and fittings and a full line of plumbing material. Valves are manufactured for pressures ranging from vacuum to 6000 pounds pressure per square inch.

They have factories located at Chicago, Bridgeport, Chattanooga, Birmingham, Trenton, North Tonawanda, N. Y., Montreal, Paris, Ipswich, England. There are also branch houses, exhibit rooms and sales offices at 196 points in the United States and abroad.

Crane and subsidiary companies employes number over 20,000, ranging from one month to 59 years of service.

"Whoa."—Boston Transcript.

"Why shouldn't we love insects as well as animals?" asks a writer. We've often seen a man trying to pat a mosquito on the back.—Exchange.

Client—You deceived me with that dwarf spaniel you sold me. It gets bigger every day.

Salesman—Yes, it is a giant dwarf spaniel.—Exchange.

"Waiter, please close that window."

"Is there a draft, sir?"

"No, but it's the fourth time my steak has blown off the plate."—Arcanum Bulletin.

Sam the Glazier—Business is rotten. I ain't sold a piece o' glass for two months.

Mayor Biggs—Cheer up, Sam. We're gonna organize a fire department next week.—Exchange.

"I've been thinking, my son, of retiring next year and leaving the business to you."

"There's no hurry, is there, dad? You go ahead and work a few years more and then we can retire together."—Masonic Craftsman.

"No, we don't shade our prices to anyone," explained the salesman for the new Austin car, "but have you anything you would like to trade in?"

Customer (doubtfully)—Well, I've got a baby carriage and my son's kiddy car.—Portland Express.

"It's surprisin'," said Mike to Pat, as they gazed at a brick cottage that was being built, "how mortar binds the bricks together."

"Whinever will ye get since?" replied Pat. "The mortar doesn't bind bricks together—it keeps them apart."—Exchange.

STOCK PRICES LOST A COUPLE OF POINTS ON THE AVERAGE IN LIFELESS MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 18—(AP)—The stock market hobbled wearily lower today, losing a couple of points on the average in a session that was nearly as lifeless as yesterday's when prices made narrow recoveries. Sales once more dropped below 1,500,000 shares, aggregating only 1,377,000.

A selling flurry in the late trading was characteristic of the day's dealings, which were largely a succession of small bear raids. Assuming that the apathetic rally on Wednesday meant that some stock was waiting to be sold on further indications of weakness, the shorts shot at the big industrial and utility shares during the forenoon and chipped a point or two from quotations. Whenever pressure relaxed, nevertheless, the market was inclined to bob back and bearish professionals had to work a little harder in the afternoon. Their strongest drive was toward the close after a feeble rally had reduced or eliminated the small early losses.

Bonds showed increasing strength, bolstered by the cheapness of money which was plentifully offered at 1 1-2 per cent, although the stock exchange rate did not get below the 2 per cent renewal. Grains were easy, which seemed to have some effect on stocks.

An announcement that copper producers had cut to 10 1-2 cents a pound proved to be incorrect, for it developed that fabricators of copper and brass products had made the reduction and that the large producers were holding to 10 3-4 cents. Custom smelters reported small sales at their recently established price of 10 1-2.

Financial circles got a surprise after the close of the market when it was learned that brokers' loans had increased $79,000,000. This gain, in a week of declining stock prices, did not appear so startling, however, when it was recalled that temporary borrowing for income tax payments, as well as several large new security offerings, had been taken into account. Loans have risen $120,000,000 in the past three weeks.

The steady growth of strictly investment market found further reflection in the advance of U. S. Steel preferred and National Biscuit preferred, to new highs. Commission houses, unable to arouse any speculative enthusiasm, report an encouraging demand for the best grade shares, mostly in odd lots, and not all of the buying orders are confined to issues having dividend priority.

Merchandising and utility stocks were among the softest of the day. Yesterday's small gains in the latter group brought prompt profit-taking, with resultant net declines of a couple of points in American Telephone, Consolidated Gas, American and Foreign Power, American Water Works, and North American. Safeway Stores and R. H. Macy, lost 3 and Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck and Kroger Grocery about one.

American Can was a heavy industrial, dropping 3 points on the day. U. S. Steel and Westinghouse sagged 2 each, General Motors 2-4, and Radio, American Tobacco "B", International Nickel and General Electric a point or more. Auburn Auto and Worthington Pump closed 5 points lower, while Eastman Kodak was down nearly 4. There was some activity in the American Agricultural Chemical stocks when the terms of the proposed re-organization were announced. The preferred rallied six points, later losing half of its rise, while the common broke to a new low.

Wheat, closing barely steady, dipped 6-8 of a cent on reports of substantial Russian shipments and in sympathy with the Winnipeg market. Corn eased 3-8 to a full cent under September liquidation. Cotton closed a point higher to a point lower.

Chinese currencies again moved upward as the price of silver here rose to 37 cents an ounce. Other foreign exchange rates were firm. The French franc rallied to around the levels of fortnight ago.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Sept. 18—(AP)—Reports that extensive grinding of government sponsored holdings of wheat is planned to provide feed in drought territory led to lower prices today for all grain. Downturns, both of wheat values and of corn as well were in the face of recent statements by President Milnor, of the grain stabilization corporation that any wheat sales by the corporation would be replaced by open market purchasing. There were also reports current today that Canadian barley is being imported into the United States at a profit, notwithstanding 20c a bushel duty.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled 3-8 at 3-4c lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1-2 at 1c down, and oats a shade to 3-8c off, with provisions varying from 20c decline to a rise of 12c.

For the most part provisions ruled higher owing to commission house purchasing of lard, together with upturns in the value of hogs.

Treasury Balance

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18—(AP)—Treasury receipts for September 16 were $668,109,806.96; expenditures $418,242,890.30; balance $261,794,173.94.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 18—(AP)—A desultory session of the New York Curb market today resulted in losses for most of the active stocks. Widest changes occurred in the utility section which, with much backing and filling, worked gradually toward lower levels throughout the quiet session. Here and there, a stock showed strength to move against the general trend and losses in the oil and investment and holding company group were only nominal.

The day's trading revealed the mixed sentiment prevailing in speculative circles. Selling did not become very aggressive until late afternoon, although an ample supply of stocks held the principal trend downward throughout the session. Sales for the day totaled 315,500 shares.

Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line was the market leader for the day, being the center of a sharp contest. Buying apparently inspired by the prospect of a working agreement between the company and Columbia Gas and Electric, kept the stock moving contrary to the general trend until profit taking and additional short selling forced the issue 3-4 net lower in the final hour.

Most active stocks in the utility list were little affected by the selling movement with the notable exception of Electric Bond and Share, which dropped 2 points. Less active stocks such as American and Foreign Power, United Light and Power A, Brazilian Traction, Duke, Consolidated Gas of Baltimore, selling ex-dividend, and American Gas and Electric, sagged 1 to 2 points.

Utility Power and Light and Niagara Hudson, were firm.

Strength of Dixie Gas and Utilities was a feature of the natural gas group, rising 3 points within a fraction of its year's high. United Gas new dropped 5-8 in active trading.

The greatest advance of the day was scored by General Tire and Rubber, up 20 points on thin buying. Columbia Pictures gained 4 points. In contrast was the weakness of Safeway Stores warrants, off 8 1-2, Aluminum Company of America, off 2 and Mead Johnson and Ford, of Canada, down 1, each.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 18—(AP)—Prices of domestic bonds were further bolstered today by investment buying and not only railroad issues but also some utility and industrial issues climbed into new high ground for the year The price level as reflected in the composite averages reached a new peak for 1930 and is only 6-10 of a point under the best figure of 1928, the year when the previous buying movement in bonds reached its apex.

Selling dominated the trend of foreign issues and some of the issues that have been adversely affected by political developments lost ground the German International 5 1-2 slipping to a new low for the year. Buying of U. S. governments was on a small scale. Active issues registered small gains with the exception of Liberty 3 1-2s, which moved contrariwise.

Bonds of the Boston and Maine railroad were strong and buying inspired by anticipation of their addition to the New York State Savings bank legal list pushed prices of the 5s to new highs for new tops were registered also by Missouri Pacific 5s of 1965, Erie Construction 4s, Hocking Valley 4 1-2s, Hudson and Manhattan 5s, Long Island 4s, Mobile and Birmingham gold 4s, Norfolk and Western 4s, Pittsburgh, Chicago, Cincinnati and St. Louis 5s.

American Telephone 5s of 1960 climbed to 107, a new high for the year, and Kansas City Power 4 1-2s, New York Telephone 4 1-2s, Kings County 4s, and Laclede 5 1-2s D, forged ahead.

Industrial issues were not neglected. National Dairy 5 1-4s were extensively purchased at the year's best price, and oil and steel company issues were active and firm.

Rock Island 4 1-2s, was the most active issue in the stock privilege group which was steady. The railroad issue was fairly firm. Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron 6s, and Lautaro Nitrate warrant 6s, lost ground.

Turnover of German 5 1-2s, was heavy. The 7s, so called Dawes issue declined 1-4. South Americans were mixed.

Friends Meet After 35 Years

At Maple Hill farm, early Monday morning, when the auto heard coming up the long grade rolled into the dooryard, two well dressed appearing strangers stepped out with the hearty greeting "Hello, Jim!" "You have got one on me!" "Why we were old neighbors and schoolmates 35 years ago! Don't you remember Frank T. Farrell and Maurice King, his home is in Huntington, L. I., and I live in Windsor, Conn., now!" Old schoolmates and events of days gone by were subjects of much interest to talk about for the next two hours.

Take the World As It Is

Take the world as it is!—There are good and bad in it
  And good and bad will be from now to the end;
And they who expect to make saints in a minute
  Are in danger of marring more hearts than they'll mend.

If we wish to be happy ne'er seek for the faults,
  Or you're sure to find something or other amiss;
'Mid much that debases, and much that exalts,
  The world's not a bad one if left as it is.

Take the world as it is!—If the surface be shining
  Ne'er rake up the sediment hidden below!
There's wisdom in this, but there's none in repining
  O'er things which can rarely be mended, we know.

There's beauty around us, which let us enjoy;
  And chide not, unless it may be with a kiss;
Though Earth's not the Heaven we thought when a boy
  There's something to live for, if ta'en as it is.

Take the world as it is!—with its smiles and its sorrows,
  Its love and its friendship,—its falsehood and truth,
Its schemes that depend on the breath of tomorrow
  Its hopes which pass by like a dream of our youth:

Yet, Oh, whilst the light of affection may shine
  The heart in itself hath a fountain of bliss;
In the worst there's some spark of a nature divine,
  And the wisest, and best take the world as it is.

Charles Swain (1801-1874)

ENTERPRISE SMASHES ALL AMERICA'S CUP RECORDS

British challengers have been victorious only three times. On two occasions, in 1871 and in 1920, American defenders were disabled. Only one race was won by a challenger on its merits and that was scored by Shamrock IV over Resolute with Charles Francis Adams at the wheel, in 1920.

That accomplishment, at least belongs to Sir Thomas Lipton, although in the five challenges he has made since 1899, his boats have captured only two out of sixteen races. All except Shamrock IV have been the victims of American sweeps as the veteran British sportsman has spent in the neighborhood of $5,000,000 on the quest in vain.

Whatever jinx there is that rides the yachting waves attached itself to the fifth Lipton's line of challengers. It seemed an ill-fated venture, both as to the merits of the boat and the quality of seamanship manifesting her handling.

Shamrock V lost the first race by only two minutes, 52 seconds over a leeward-windward course, with full ballast aboard. Removing a ton of this lead the challenger dropped the second race by nine minutes, 34 seconds over a triangular course. After being twice badly beaten on the start, Shamrock, her ballast restored, broke away in the lead of the third race only to be disabled after 45 minutes. The main halyard parted and Enterprise had a sail-over.

The repaired challenger was a beaten boat before she went to the starting line today. What slim chance she had of checking her losing streak was dissipated by poor handling on the first leg of the 30-mile course. She tacked off after gaining some advantage in a brief early brush, seeking the breeze that would lift her along fast enough to get to weather of Enterprise.

The maneuver was fatal. Shamrock went too far inshore, losing her wind on a long port tack, while Enterprise was still pointing high and footing faster. By the time the challenger got back on the starboard tack, she was more than a mile behind and lost another half mile before turning the first mark. They were never within hailing distance after that.

Although she cut the margin from nine minutes to nearly five minutes in the last 20 miles, Shamrock knew it was a hopeless chase and manifested it by failing to break out her spinnaker, as Enterprise did, for the last part of the race.

In four days of racing in which she covered herself only 95 of the 120 scheduled miles, Shamrock was in front only twice. Her most effective work was done at the outset of the third race, in getting the better start and holding a lead until just before the main halyard parted and sent the mainsail tumbling down. Except for the briefly held advantage early in today's race, there were no other occasions when Shamrock more than threatened her speedy rival.

MESSAGES EXCHANGED BY LIPTON AND VANDERBILT

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 18.—(AP)—A tall, stooped old man stood in the sun this afternoon on the deck of his big steam yacht. White hair straggled out from under the yachting cap perched jauntily on the side of his head. His famous polka-dot bow tie stood out under the points of his wing collar and a white handkerchief peeped jauntily from the breast pocket of his blue coat, companion-piece to the traditional flannels and white shoes of the yachtsmen.

It was Sir Thomas Lipton, gamest of sportsmen, taking once more the defeat that has always been his share in five gallant efforts to lift the America's cup. He was taking it as he always has taken it, standing up, his browned face wrinkled deeply and his dim eyes staring at the Enterprise, a better vessel than his, swooping across the finish line of the fourth and last race of the series, with his own Shamrock V a mile behind.

He looked at the eye-filling picture the defender made, sweeping along under a fleecy cloud of curving canvas, a tall, slender, beautiful picture of speed and power. He looked at the darker Shamrock, making a gallant fight but outclassed as she had been since the start of the series. He took a long last look at the magnificence of the scene, the flotilla of accompanying craft, hustling through the bright waters, tooting their horns and sirens to signal another American victory.

Lipton Through

Then he turned to the group that had gathered about him for the finish.

"It's the end of the race," he said. "It's the finish. Yes, the finish. I willna challenge again. It's no use. We canna win."

The 80-year-old Scotch-Irish baronet turned away and started for his cabin. He found pencil and paper and brought his radio man a message for Vincent Astor, commodore of the New York Yacht club, owners of the Enterprise, aboard the Vara. He asked Astor please to accept and convey to Harold S. Vanderbilt, skipper of the defender, and his crew "congratulations on your well merited victory."

"I want them to know right away," he explained, "that I hold no hard feelings. Although they've beaten me again I couldn't have fairer sportsmen against me. You can't blame them for doing their best.

"I put their success down to the mast; they have the metal mast, and I don't blame them for having it. Taking everything into consideration I think my boat did very well. They licked us fairly and squarely."

About that time the radio operator came back with a slip in his hand. It was a message from Astor and said:

"Very many thanks for your kind and thoughtful message, which will indeed be appreciated, not only by the Enterprise, but by every member of the New York Yacht club."

"This is from the boat that licked us," Sir Thomas said, and he passed it around for all to look at. Then he carefully tucked it away in his pocket, a thin paper souvenir, one of the few he has to remember his fifth and last quest of the "old mug" that has cost him almost $5,000,000.

TOAD'S INSECT APPETITE BIG HELP TO GARDENERS

RALEIGH, N. C.—(AP)—If you want your garden free of insects, give the toad a big hand, says Dr. Z. P. Metcalf, head of the department of entomology at North Carolina State college.

Insects make up about 90 per cent of the toad's food and its appetite is almost beyond belief. Dr. Metcalf says he fed 177 May beetles to a toad in his yard in five nights. If each of these 88 pairs of beetles had lived and laid 100 eggs, they would have developed 8,800 white grubs in the Metcalf lawn during the summer.

Dr. Metcalf suggests that toads can be readily increased by building permanent pools with water plants in which the amphibians can breed. They're finicky about shade, too, but loose boards, especially under the shrubbery where it is nice and cool in midday, will suit them nicely.

"VET" HAS NEW JOBS IN ERA OF TRACTORS

MONTGOMERY, Ala. —(AP)— Tractors have replaced horses and mules on the farm, but the veterinarian has more work to do than ever.

Forty years ago, says Dr. C. A. Cary, head of the veterinary school at Alabama Polytechnic institute, treatment of work animals was the main work of veterinarians.

New demands have been made, however, and they are busy now eradicating cattle ticks, bovine tuberculosis, hog cholera, anthrax, blackleg and septicaemia.

ILLINOIS FARMERS URGED TO BOOST ALFALFA CROP

URBANA, Ill. —(AP)— Alfalfa is one of the most profitable crops that can be grown in Illinois, yet more than 200,000 tons were shipped into the state in 1928, say crop experts at the University of Illinois college of agriculture.

They advise farmers that while the wheat growers of other states were trying to solve the problem of raising less wheat, Illinois could cut down her acreage by growing more alfalfa.

Measure of Reverberation

NEW YORK (AP)—The period of reverberation of a room is the time in seconds it takes a sound of average initial intensity to die away to one millionth of that intensity.

FINE EXHIBIT OF INDIAN HANDICRAFT AT DOWSETTS

If magazine and newspaper articles are a criterion, interest in the American Indian is rapidly increasing, as we realize that a pre-historic civilization has been almost blotted out by our ruthless machine age. Thousands of years before Christ the Indians of the southwest were living in well constructed houses built along definitely conceived architectural lines, were weaving baskets of graceful shapes and molding pots that compare favorably with greek vases.

The Spanish conquerors introduced sheep into the southwest a hundred years before the Pilgrims landed in Plymouth Rock, and the Navajo tribes soon learned to raise and sheer sheep, spin the wool and weave it into blankets which for beauty and durability cannot be surpassed. Recent magazine articles have featured the collecting of Navajo rugs.

The Navajos, too, are the silversmiths of the southwest. With turquoise dug from the mines of New Mexico, and Mexican silver press, they produce beautiful and wearable belts, rings, bracelets and brooches recognized as real objects of art among connoiseurs.

Examples of these Indian arts and crafts are being shown at Dowsett's House O' Gifts, 51 Broadway, Norwich, on Saturday, September 20th, by a student of American Indian handwork.

Norwich Produce Market

Furnished by Bureau of Markets
Conn. Dept. of Agriculture

Potatoes continue to show firmer developments. Best Long Island were reported selling as high as $1.30 to $1.40 per bushel in New York. Maine has started shipping heavily, as many as 300 cars per day have been shipped already. As yet only Irish Cobblers are being shipped from there, the bulk going to points south and west.

The local market is supplied principally with native potatoes of good quality, mostly Green Mountain and is showing an upward price tendency. Tomatoes were in comparatively light supply but growing little activity. Sweet corn was more plentiful and large Evergreen in good demand. Most other items on the vegetable list were in moderate supply and cleaning up well.

The peach season is near its close. Good quality Elbertas are still available at low prices. Apples were liberal and market slow.

NEW LONDONERS RETURN FROM RACE BUT ALL ENTHUSIASM LACKING

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 18.—Steamer Ramona arrived in port at 6:30 this evening from the last of the yacht races between the challenger, Shamrock V, and the defender, Enterprise. The steamer carried but a few passengers on today's trip. During the late afternoon and early evening several small power boats also put into port, their occupants boarding trains for New York. None of the big yachts that were included among the fleet of pleasure boats at the international event, however, arrived here.

VIRGINIA IRENE PALMER RUNAWAY FROM BOSTON

The New London police have been requested to be on the lookout for Virginia Irene Palmer, of Boston, who is wanted as a wayward girl. It is believed that she may come to this city for the girl is one of the type who seek the companionship of members of the navy or coast guard. The girl is 18 and when she disappeared from home wore a black dress, blue coat with striped calf skin collar, black hat, but no stockings. She also wore a wedding ring, but is not married.

Teletype for State Police

Valuable equipment today was installed at the state police barracks when a teletype was put into service there. Heretofore the teletype at New London headquarters has been at the disposal of the state police. With the installation of the apparatus the state police will be in a position to facilitate the apprehension of criminals and for the almost immediate delivery of messages to practically every department in the state and one in Massachusetts, that department being Springfield, besides being connected with state police departments throughout Connecticut.

Announcement was made by Atty. and Mrs. Frank L. McGuire at a tea given at their residence, 471 Pequot avenue, this afternoon of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Winifred Ellen McGuire, to Lieut. Richard Leon Burke, U. S. coast guard. Lieutenant Burke, who is a son of Mrs. Florence Burke and the late William Burke, of San Antonio, Texas, is stationed at the naval air station, Pensacola, Fla. He is a graduate of the United States Coast Guard academy class of 1927, of this city, also of St. Louis' college, San Antonio. Miss McGuire was graduated in June from the College of St. Elisabeth, Morristown, N. J., and returned recently, after passing the summer in European travel. Upwards of 50 guests attended the tea at the beautiful residence, formerly the Bond home, on Pequot avenue. Assisting Mrs. McGuire during the afternoon was her sister, Mrs Arthur T. Keefe, also Mrs. Thomas F. Foran.

MR. AND MRS. O. E. STRAHAN BOTH SERIOUSLY INJURED

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 18.—There was but slight change today in the condition of Mr. and Mrs. Oak E. Strahan, 3 Thames street, Groton, seriously injured Wednesday night when the automobile in which they were riding and which was driven by Strahan crashed against a tree in Groton when Strahan fell asleep at the wheel. The man and woman are patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, both having sustained possibly fractured skull, internal injuries and fractured legs.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the return of the driver's license of Frank Pollard, 21 Eastern avenue.

George E. Touchard, Alamonte Springs, Fla., was arrested this afternoon by Patrolman Ernest Opperman, charged with passing an automatic danger signal, corner of Main street and Crystal avenue. Touchard furnished a bond of $15 for his appearance in the police court tomorrow.

Patrolman James McKenna, of Riverview avenue, who has long suffered from a diseased hip bone and who was compelled to relinquish patrol duty a fortnight ago, was operated upon at New Haven hospital last Monday. According to advices received from the hospital, Mr. McKenna is resting comfortably in spite of the fact that the limb is in a cast and will remain in that condition indefinitely. It is believed that the patient will be greatly benefited by the operation.

TAXPAYERS' LEAGUE GROOMING CANDIDATES TO WIN

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 18.—A meeting of the advisory committee of the New London Taxpayers' league, held this week, has revealed that definite working plans have been made whereby it is hoped the three candidates endorsed by the league for the office of member of city council, will be elected. The committee will adopt methods similar to those employed under the former municipal form of government in order to endeavor to secure the votes of the members of the league and the supporters of the organization. Automobiles and workers will be at each of the five voting places throughout the entire day and checkers and runners will be employed at each voting place. The candidates who are favored by the league are former Mayor E. Frank Morgan, who obtained the greatest number of votes at the election a fortnight ago; Edward Prentis, Jr., and Edwin Cruise. The other candidates are Robert B. Chappell, William C. Fox, James H. Murray and Malcolm M. Scott, who are seeking re-election, and David A. Connors, the latest to endeavor to obtain a seat in the council. Messrs. Scott, Fox and Murray obtained splendid support at the election two weeks ago. The candidates for board of school visitors are Rosemary O. Anderson, Cecil P. Caulkins, Ellen C. Kelley, William T. May and Ernest Nibbs. Mr. May and Mrs. Kelley obtained the highest number of votes at the last election. The candidates for office of selectmen are Lawrence S. M. Cook, William L. White and Ralph Wetmore, who seek re-election, and Leo B. Reagan, a new aspirant. At the last election Mr. Cook received the greatest number of votes. Apparently at the present time there is not any more than ordinary interest being manifested, although it is known that the candidates not endorsed by the league are working quietly and systematically in an effort to cause their friends to go to the polls and vote for them. With favorable weather prevailing next Monday an exceptionally large vote, it is expected, will be polled.

BAD LIQUOR LEFT STAMAND UNAWARE OF HIS ACTS

Clifton Stamand, an East New London youth, was in the police court today charged with intoxication and breach of the peace. He was fined an aggregate amount of $35 and costs.

Stamand and several companions were on Main street, near Crystal avenue, last night and all were hilarious and demonstrative. Patrolman John Clifford ordered the youths to disperse and discontinue their loud and boisterous conduct. All the group obeyed the order of the officer excepting Stamand, who informed the officer that the latter did not have the power nor authority to compel him to get off the street. Clifford finally escorted the trouble-maker through Main street as if to arrest him, and at Hallam street, advised Stamand to go to his home and avoid trouble. The officer had left the youth but a few seconds when Stamand returned to Clifford and attacked him, endeavoring to obtain possession of the officer's night stick. Clifford then arrested Stamand and the latter displayed fight. The officer and his prisoner battled through Main street, to Jo n to North Bank streets and on the latter street, Patrolman Henry Hick went to Clifford's assistance and Stamand was quickly landed in a cell at police headquarters. In testifying in his own behalf, Stamard declared that he was not intoxicated last night, but he could not explain why he did not remember being ordered off the street by Clifford or his attack upon the officer.

Raymond McPartland, a youth who has been arrested several times, was charged with breach of the peace and intoxication. He was fined $15 and costs. McPartland was arrested last night by Patrolman Harold Goldberg when the youth created a disturbance on Bank street.

One other case of intoxication was tried. A man, not a frequenter of the court and who went to police headquarters last night for no other reason than to engage those he found there in conversation, was given suspension of judgment. A youth who was arrested on the same charge and who is pursuing studies at college, was ordered discharged by Acting Prosecuting Attorney John Quinn.

Mrs. Thomas B. Congdon gave a tea yesterday at her home in honor of Mrs. Elbert Chambers of Asheville, N. C., who is visiting her mother, Mrs. M. V. Burgess at Lighthouse Inn. Mrs. Congdon invited to meet Mrs. Chambers and Mrs. Burgess: Mrs. James T. Robison, Mrs. Cecil W. Brown, Mrs. William Porter White and Mrs. Thomas E. Troland.

The recently elected republican town committee held an organization meeting last evening in the office of Attorney Daniel M. Cronin. P. LeRoy Harwood was re-elected chairman and Miss Madeline Freeman was re-elected vice chairman. John M. Malon, Jr., was elected secretary and treasurer.

CAR GAS TANK EXPLODES— MRS. RAYMOND KING BURNED

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 18.—Mrs Raymond King, of Blackhall, was painfully burned this morning, suffering first and second degree burns following the explosion of a gasoline tank of the Ford automobile in which she was driving in Blackhall. The explosion occurred without warning and in an instant the woman's clothing was a mass of flames. Before passing motorists could go to her assistance, her head, face and upper body had been terribly burned for, with the igniting of her apparel, Mrs. King was enveloped in flames. The woman was placed in an automobile and rushed to this city, where she was admitted to Lawrence-Memorial hospital.

There is every indication now that John Davidson, 119 Golden street, a painter in the employ of the Thames Towboat Co., who suffered the crushing of his right leg beneath a New Haven railroad passenger train ten days ago, will recover. Within the past few days, Davidson, who is a patient at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, has shown marked improvement.

The marriage of Frederick H. Voss, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick H. Voss, of Rosedale, L. I., and Miss Mildred Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Johnson, of 233 Broad street, will take place Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the Methodist Episcopal church.

Mrs. Stanley Moseley and infant daughter, 209 Pequot avenue; Henry Burdick, 80 Baker avenue, Groton; Mrs. Mary Pattee, 74 Williams street; Joseph Urban, East Haddam; Mrs. Clyde Crouch, Mystic; Mrs. Carrie Richardson, 256 Thames street, Groton; James Coogan, 204 Connecticut avenue, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

Attorney Alfred Coit has returned to his home on Huntington street, having toured the European continent for several weeks.

Nicholas Haleftiras, 48 Reed street, reported to the police this morning that his Ford truck, which he parked in front of his residence last night, had been stolen. The truck, Haleftiras said he believed, had been taken by his son, Demo, 16, for the youth did not return home last night and neither could he be found today.

Patrolman William Graham today discovered that a slot machine at Danceland, Ocean Beach, had been smashed during last night, the thief wrecking the machine and taking whatever money it contained. The machine was used to dispense handkerchiefs. It is believed that the robbery was the work of boys.

Isaac Lutin, Hartford, owner of a cottage on Park street, Ocean Beach, communicated by telephone with the New London police today, stating that he had been informed that the cottage had been entered by a thief since it was closed for the season Labor day week. The police have no report of the cottage having been entered, but Lutin said that he would come to New London for the purpose of making an investigation.

Mr. and Mrs. Donohue will make their home in St. Louis, in which city Mr. Donohue is supervising engineer in the office of the Travelers' Insurance Co.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

Those who enjoy murder mysteries, spiced with just the right amount of romance, will find "Scarlet Pages," the First National and Vitaphone production which is playing at Warner's Broadway, one of the most thrilling and dramatic stories of the year.

Adapted from the play by Samuel Shipman and John B. Hymer, "Scarlet Pages" brings to the screen a story of mother love and sacrifice that will never be forgotten.

It is packed with "baker's dozens" of thrills and tensely dramatic moments, and never once suffers a let down of tempo. More than that, the characterizations are surprisingly human and realistic.

Little need be said regarding Elsie Ferguson, for as the brilliant criminal lawyer, this splendid actress provides a characterization of unusual merit. Marian Nixon and Grant Withers, who have already achieved widespread popularity as team, are seen once again as sweethearts.

Much of the credit goes to Director Ray Enright, for he has proved his ability by the deft way in which he handled the picture.

Palace Theatre

"The Czar of Broadway" which is now playing at the Palace theatre on the double-feature bill which combines it with "Dough Boys" is remarkable in that it gives an entirely new angle to the underworld and the people who live there.

The story is the love affair between a night-club entertainer and a cub reporter who is torn between his desire and his duty. He makes his choice and the story culminates with one of the most fascinating climaxes which has ever been presented.

John Harron plays the part of the newspaper reporter to perfection and Betty Compson as the night-club entertainer is excellent as always. John Wray in the role of Mort Bradley contributes one of the greatest crook characterizations that the screen has ever known. Many other well known stage and screen stars have also done good work in the production.

Buster Keaton offers a new recipe for laughs in his latest comedy "Dough Boys" which is the story of a rookie who wants to be a good soldier. He is the son of a millionaire and not a little slow at thinking and when the big attacks are on he is perfectly oblivious to all that is happening.

Although there are laughs and laughs galore in "Dough Boys" there are also more serious moments and the production was made with all the care of the more serious war films.

Supporting Keaton are Cliff Edwards, "Ukulele Ike" as he is better known perhaps, who has a good role and of course plays many tunes on his instrument. Sally Eilers play the part of a war entertainer at the front and is also one of the members of a charming love affair.

This double-feature will be shown at the Palace for the last times today and tomorrow. On Sunday the Palace will present the greatest war picture which has ever been produced. 'All Quiet on the Western Front" with a superb cast, splendid drama, spectacular events and excellent photography is a picture which no one will want to miss. Those who have read the great novel of the same name will be more thrilled than ever with the production.

The United States mint at San Francisco minted $2,754,180 in half dollars, quarters, dimes, nickels and pennies in 1929. The penny production was $501,480.

EXPECTING BIG GET-TOGETHER BY COUNTY REPUBLICANS AT RED TOP

Invitations have been issued for the outing which is to be held Oct. 1 at Harvard training quarters at Red Top, Gales Ferry, by the New London County Republican club, which will be an endorsement meeting of the nomination of Ernest E. Rogers for governor and republican state ticket. Invitations have been sent to a mail list, but the committee desires that every republican in the county should consider he is invited to attend the affair, whether a formal invitation is received or not.

The outing will be held at noontime, and indications are that an attendance of between ?00 and 400 will be recorded. J. Henry Roraback, chairman of the republican state central committee, has promised the outing committee that he will be present and all of the candidates nominated on the state ticket will also attend, as will most of the other state leaders of the party.

The committee is now casting about for one to deliver the principal address at the outing, and it was said that there was a possibility that Vice President Curtis might be prevailed upon to attend. The republican national committee has promised to send one of the party's best known orators in the event that the vice president will be unable to attend and the other speakers will be drawn from among candidates on the state ticket.

DEVIL'S FOOTPRINT IN BOULDER AT HOPYARD

Miss Emily Saunders, historian, who came to Ferry tavern on the Connecticut river bank in Old Lyme found herself plunged into a job when she innocently inquired how the Devil's Hopyard became so named. She exhausted vacation days and week-ends tracing stories of name origin. She started something which residents of the section are now seeing through to the finish.

Charles J. Soule of Moodus is the latest writer to come to the aid of the Hopyard controversy. He writes:

"It has been a great pleasure to read the articles and to follow them up, but no article I have seen treats with the theory that has always been told to me by different ones living in and around the Devil's Hopyard country.

"When a young man I was visiting in the Devil's Hopyard section and, after being there a while, I asked the question, 'Why do they call this place the Devil's Hopyard?' 'Well,' said my friend, 'I'll tell you.' So, going further into the wilderness, which it certainly was at that time, we came to two large boulders, separated, I should say, about four or five feet apart. At the extreme top of one of these boulders is the imprint of a human foot, more of a club foot, there being only one.

"Across this space, four or five feet, between the two rocks, the Devil hopped. This story has always remained in my memory. It is years since I have visited the spot. If you happen to visit the Hopyard again, look for the imprint of the foot in the boulder."

Miss Saunders reports that she is off to find the big boulders and see for herself the giant footprints—one on each rock—as this latest correspondent reports.

"But even though I do find footprints, as I expect I will," says Miss Saunders, "the presence of hop marks doesn't dispose of the growing of hops in the district by the Dibble family, and I can believe, too, that dances or hops were held there."

MACHINES STOLEN IN TAFTVILLE AND CITY

Reports of the theft of two automobiles in Norwich sometime Wednesday night were made Thursday to the local police. A Hudson sedan, registration number N-2685 in the name of Edmund Proulx of 70 Hunters avenue, was stolen from a street in Taftville and a Chevrolet owned by William Barry was stolen from the Main street garage.

A woman who resides in the neighborhood stated that she was awakened about one o'clock by the starting of a machine and saw a machine being driven out of the garage. The machine was driven in the direction of Preston bridge.

Although there were two cars standing outside, the thieves did not touch these but went inside the garage after the other car.

Engagement Announcement

TAFTVILLE

Over a score of the members of Peter Gallan post, No. 104, and the American Legion auxiliary have signified their intention of attending the annual convention of the organization to be held in Boston, Mass., next month.

Local farmers have been busy for the past few weeks pulling up and destroying the wild carrot plants which grow in their pastures. They state that it is practically impossible to keep down this fast-spreading weed, as the birds carry the seed from the plants to other places.

Under the supervision of Superintendent Richard Oat of the Taftville Congregational church school, the members of the Workers' conference met Wednesday evening in the church parlors to attend to the grading and promotion of the school scholars.

The scene of the tragic automobile accident on Occum road near Riverside grove has been visited by hundreds during the past few days.

Numbers of local people are attending the Eastern States exposition at Springfield, Mass., this week. This is the most popular of the autumn fairs and makes a good outing for the villagers who have cars and desire a pleasant day's trip.

Mrs. Albert J. Aberg, of North A street, has returned from a few days' stay at Crescent Beach.

The Ladies' Benevolent society of the Taftville Congregational church held the first meeting of the season Wednesday afternoon in the church parlors. There was a large attendance, and the president, Mrs. Richard B. Snow, presided. After the business session the members worked for an hour, folding the Christmas seals to be sent out in the annual anti-tuberculosis campaign. Refreshments were served later.

The reception committee of Court Wequonnoc, No. 88, Foresters of America, Chairman William Smith, Allan Bogle, David Lambert, Wilfred Peltier, George Taylor and Theodule Snow, met at the home of Chief Ranger Patrick J. Fogarty on South Second avenue early in the week, and discussed plans for the social, smoker and reception of the Grand court officers of Connecticut, which is to be held Thursday, Sept. 25. Court Wequonnoc has been greatly honored by having the privilege of entertaining the Grand court officers of this state. Therefore, the committee expects a large attendance of members at the meeting to give the grand chief ranger and his staff encouragement in stimulating the growth of Forestry in the local court and in the entire state of Connecticut.

WOMEN VOTERS BOARD HEARD COUNTY REPORTS

A well attended meeting of the executive board of the New London Co. League of Women Voters was held on Wednesday afternoon at Miss Edna Tyler's studio in New London. Mrs. Thomas M. Shields, of Norwich, chairman of the county league, presided. Mrs. C. E. Case, of Baltic, secretary, gave an interesting report of the August meeting. This was one of the popular quarterly gatherings of the county league and was held at the home of Mrs. William Porter White in Mystic.

Mrs. Leslie L. Brewer, reporting for the Norwich league, announced an open meeting to be held early in October in the town hall. The speakers will be some of the candidates for the state election. Miss Tyler reported that the New London league has a complete slate and that at a recent open meeting in Bulkeley auditorium eight candidates for the city council and school board spoke to an audience of 3?0. Mrs. L. H. Bigelow Jr. reported the interest with which the Old Lyme league is watching the local public schools now under the supervision of Yale. Miss Louise Trumbull of Stonington told of the enthusiastic league work being done for the local anti-mosquito fund. Mrs. C. E. Case stated that the Sprague league plans for programmes on child welfare and education lines. Mrs. William Porter White reported that the Mystic league devotes five minutes of each meeting to talk on international relations. Mrs. Laura Tucker, of Lebanon, reported two league meetings with Miss Elizabeth Andrews, national chairman of emigration and Miss Gleaton as speakers. Mrs. Harry E. Hunt, of Niantic, urged every league to send delegates to the state citizenship school to be held at Connecticut college on Oct. 21 and 22 and having for its consideration juvenile delinquency.

GAVE THRIFT TALK FOR TELEPHONE CO. EMPLOYES

Charles E. Rolfe, general information manager of the Southern New England Telephone company, gave a talk on Thrift Activities and ways and means of broadening this worthwhile movement among the telephone workers from the exchanges in the New London district at the Mohican hotel in New London Thursday.

The plant traffic and commercial district boards met in the morning and all joined for luncheon at the hotel. The boards reconvened following Mr. Rolfe's talk for further discussion of business related to their respective departments.

Mr. Rolfe spoke of the inception of the thrift movement among telephone people and of its growth. He outlined in some detail the plan by which employes of the telephone company may purchase stock of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co. by paying a small sum weekly for each share subscribed for. He spoke of other phases of the thrift movement in the business as they relate to the employes' welfare and announced that a thrift board, to be composed of workers in all sections of the state, will soon be formed to give further impetus to the saving habit among telephone people.

Mr. Rolfe characterized thrift as wise spending rather than practicing a great degree of self-denial in order to acquire a savings fund, and stressed the fact that the company offers employes exceptional advantages in their effort to save from their earnings.

HARTFORD MAN DIES FROM MOTORCYCLE CRASH

Fatally injured, William Movehuk, 64, of Hartford, died at 10:45 o'clock Thursday morning at the W. W. Backus hospital where he was taken shortly after midnight Wednesday, following an accident near Marlborough, on the Hartford-Colchester turnpike. Death was caused by a fractured skull.

Movehuk was riding in a sidecar on a motorcycle driven by Michael Mogas, 21, of 418 Garden street, Hartford, when the cycle left the highway and turned turtle. Mogas claimed he was driving north about 25 miles an hour when a front tire blew out and he lost control of the machine. Movehuk was thrown into the highway, landing on his head.

A passing automobilist called the state police barracks at Groton, from Colchester, and Officer Arthur Whitmarsh responded. The officer took the injured man to the hospital and arrested Mogas on a technical charge of reckless driving.

Coroner Edward G. McKay was notified of the man's death but as the scene of the accident was out of the coroner's jurisdiction he notified Coroner Phelan of Hartford who will conduct an investigation.

POSSIBLE LIFE JOB FOR BARROWS AS ATTY. GENERAL

It was pretty generally conceded by lawyers who gathered at the New Haven county court house for the opening of the September term that a well-defined move to take the attorney generalship of the state of Connecticut out of politics had been made in the naming of Federal Judge Warren B. Burrows as the republican nominee for that office, says a New Haven paper.

Like the chief justice of the supreme court, the attorney general should be named to hold office throughout his lifetime or until such time as he reaches a retirement limit fixed by legislation, it was said by prominent members of the New Haven county bar.

"I think that such an office should be taken out of politics in this manner," Mr. Fitzgerald told a reporter.

It was the understanding of other leaders of the bar that the next session of the legislature would be asked to pass an act giving the governor authority to appoint for life such a man to the office of attorney general as would be recommended by competent authority.

With a republican victory at the polls in November, Judge Burrows would be elected to office. The 1931 legislature which convenes in January would be asked to consider a bill which in its passage would void his election but would give the governor the right to name him permanently to the position, should it become effective before the term for which he was elected expired.

Judge Burrows' election to such a post would be favorably met by the rank and file of the Connecticut bar it was reported.

BLOCK ISLAND BURIAL FOR LARCHMONT HERO

Thrice honored by his country and his state for heroism on the sea, Capt. Albert W. Smith, Block Island skipper, who risked his life together with his crew 23 years ago in rescue work at the time of the Larchmont steamer disaster, was laid to rest last Sunday in the soil of his native Block Island. The veteran sea captain died at his home there last Thursday in his 69th year.

Among the bearers was Eugene N Stinson, also the holder of three medals for heroism in the Larchmont tragedy.

Captain Smith held the Congressional Medal of Honor, the Carnegie Foundation gold medal and a special medal conferred by the state of Rhode Island for his part in the rescue of passengers of the wrecked steamer.

The veteran Block Islander was a member of the crew of the schooner Elsie when that small vessel put to sea in a wintry gale on the night of Feb. 12, 1907, in an attempt to succor the lives of passengers of the Larchmont, left to the mercy of the sea after the steamer was rammed in waters off Block Island. The Elsie and another schooner rescued 19 persons. The victims numbered 131.

The state of Rhode Island, by a special act of the legislature, voted the medals in recognition of the heroism of the Elsie's captain and crew and subsequently the congress of the United States and the Carnegie Foundation awarded their own medals to the group of seamen.

NORWICH MAN ELECTED TO SONS OF AMER. REVOLUTION

Nine members, including S. Alpheus Gilbert of this city, were elected to the Connecticut society, Sons of the American Revolution, at a meeting of the board of managers at Danbury, on Wednesday. The other members were M. Allyn Wadhams, Hartford; Clifford I. Packer, Meriden; William Lounsbury, Bridgeport; Edward L. Barlow, Fairfield; Raymond L. Beard, Milford; Harold C. Chandler, William Pettingill, Greenwich; Edward B. Manville, Detroit, Mich.

James T. Pierce, Portchester, N. Y. and John Miller of Greenwich were transferred from the Empire society, and John W. Drown of Rutland, Vt., was reinstated to membership.

Repairs at St. Patrick's Church

Men in the employ of Contractor Patrick F. Sweeney are engaged in making a number of repairs at St Patrick's church. The granite is being repointed and the slate roof repaired where needed. The old tar walk in front of the church is being torn up and a concrete walk will be laid.

STOECKEL SEES POINT IN THROUGH TRAFFIC SCHEME

A short discussion of the Connecticut adaptation of the so-called through traffic system, prepared by Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel, was read Thursday afternoon from WTIC, the station at Hartford.

"This state has recognized," said Commissioner Stoeckel, "that, like every other traffic device, there are places where the through traffic system is useful. It recognizes also that this system should be used sparingly, and only by way of experimentation at present. If it is found to work properly, is reasonably observed, and the rights of the pedestrian are not interfered with, then it is a valuable adjunct for assistance and use in Connecticut.

"The purpose in bringing this system to general attention at this time is to insure that everybody knows something about it, as it may be used increasingly by Connecticut towns. When an operator approaches a main thoroughfare and sees a sign which urges caution or a full stop, he should be ready to obey that sign. The sign is a warning that it has been found necessary to move cars along at a reasonably fast rate of speed on the main thoroughfare, and that cars which come into that thoroughfare must do so with extreme caution.

"The department of motor vehicles, in giving advice on traffic control, has been careful to limit the number of gadgets and regulations which it recommends for the state system. The aim has been to keep the rules as simple and plain as possible, centering the responsibility upon the operator, while trying to make certain that he operates in a reasonable manner without being over directed. But where direction is provided, and where it is determined that such direction is a good thing, rather than a drawback and a nuisance, the operator must learn and observe all of the various and sundry rules.

"The through traffic system is one which will probably survive. It has many applications, and has been found to operate successfully, even when adopted as a rule of action throughout a state or in a large territory."

MENTAL HYGIENE WORK DESCRIBED TO LIONS

The Norwich Lions club held its weekly noon luncheon Thursday at the Wauregan hotel with President Louis M. Crandall in the chair. There were several guests in the large attendance. Fred Geer presided at the piano and Dr. K. K. Markoff was the song leader. Jean Kieffer and Miss Loretta P. Higgins were heard in vocal solos, the latter being received with great favor and called on for repeated encores. Several humorous selections were given by Attorney Harry Schwartz.

C. Edward Carpenter spoke briefly on present business conditions and made a plea for contributions to the United Workers. The retiring president, Charles W. Cassidy, and the vice-president, Abner Schwartz, also briefly addressed the gathering.

Miss Nancy E. Tomlinson, psychiatric social worker of the United Workers, was the speaker of the day and spoke on Mental Hygiene in Business. Miss Tomlinson explained the work of the psychiatric bureau. The bureau, she said, was interested in normal people who have got thrown off the track for various reasons. The psychiatric department of the United Workers would study these people and their problems and after analysis would attempt to find a remedy. This department and the United Workers being a private working organization is not for mentally deficients who are insane, but is "primarily for the service of this community and the difficulties they get into," and again the speaker emphasized, for normal people. The United Workers clinic in psychiatric tries to serve anyone who cares to come to it to have their personal difficulties solved.

Cases of school children, especially boys, many of whom are bright and intelligent, who are found to have become backward in their studies, have been called to the attention of the clinic. In many instances it has been found that the pupils have become bored and have neglected their studies.

A first class stenographer, most efficient, was found to be making mistakes. A study by the employer resulted in his finding out that the stenographer was bothered with trouble at home. Still another instance was that of an office manager, whose domestic troubles he carried with him in the office, resulting in it affecting the entire personnel. The story of a prosperous merchant who rebuked his customers for trading elsewhere, resulting in his loss of business and bankruptcy, was also mentioned by Miss Tomlinson.

Several piano selections were given by Krachur Cham of the Stockbridge Mohegan Indian tribe and Miss Mary E. Bundy, acting secretary of the Norwich chamber of commerce, spoke briefly. Louis J. Fontaine led in the Lions roar.

Jean Kieffer, Abner Schwartz and Charles W. Cassidy have charge of the programmes for the remainder of the month. The officers will be installed at the last meeting of the month.

FOREIGN MISSIONS BOARD HAS $79,607.18 DEFICIT

Frederick A. Gaskins, treasurer of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, Boston, has announced the closing of the board's books for the 121st fiscal year ending Aug. 31, 1930, with a deficit on the year's operations of $29,402.90. This deficit added to the one incurred the previous year leaves the American board carrying a debt of $79,607.18. Total receipts from all sources amounted to $2,151,766.08. As last year, the increase in the deficit is due to falling off of gifts from churches and individuals. This falling off has been offset to a considerable degree by an increase in legacies and matured conditional gifts, and income from miscellaneous funds. "Through careful controlling of expenditures, both for field expense and for home administration," says Treasurer Gaskins, "there was a saving over our estimate of $20,806.80. Part of this saving, however, was realized through the withholding of new missionaries to take the places of those withdrawn or retired, which means an added load upon those who are on the field.

"During the last two months of the fiscal year the friends of the board were invited to send personal gifts and while the total amount received was somewhat less than last year it showed an increase over the amount of two years ago, which, in view of business and financial conditions is highly gratifying to the officers of the board," Mr. Gaskins adds.

Westbrook Dem. Turns Republican

Michael Ackerman, who was nominated on the democratic ticket in Westbrook, Tuesday night for second selectman, has notified the committee he wishes to decline the nomination, as he wishes to have his name enrolled on the republican caucus list. Captain Horace E. Kelsey has accepted the democratic nomination, and his name will be placed on the ballot.

It is sometimes easier to make a bluff than it is to stand on it.

GROTON STATE POLICE BARRACKS HAVE TELETYPE

The state police barracks at Groton was on Thursday brought into communication with the other barracks throughout the state and with the police departments of most of the Connecticut cities and many in Massachusetts and Rhode Island, through the installation of a teletype apparatus. The Groton barracks is a direct communication with the other state police posts on an exclusive circuit but cuts into the various other departments through a hookup at the Hartford headquarters of the state police.

FORMER MAGISTRATE EWALD INDICTED FOR CORRUPTION

Ewald's Wife, Martin J. Healy, Tammany Leader, and Thomas T. Tommaney were Also Named in the Indictment—Mr. and Mrs. Ewald Were Held in $2,500 Bail Each—Mrs. Ewald Was Alleged to Have Lent Healy $10,000 About the Time Her Husband Was Appointed Magistrator—Tommaney Was Accused of Acting as Go-Between

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—(AP)—Charges that former Magistrate George F. Ewald bought his appointment to the bench for $10,000 today resulted in the indictment of Ewald, his wife, Bertha, and two other persons by a special grand jury.

The Ewalds, indicted on three counts, were arraigned before Supreme Court Justice McCook soon afterward and were held in $2,500 bail each.

Their attorneys were granted until Monday morning to bring in for arraignment the other two persons indicted—Martin J. Healy, Tammany district leader and resigned city official who allegedly received the $10,000 and Thomas T. Tommaney, resigned sheriff's clerk, accused of acting as go-between in transferring the money.

A statement from the office of the attorney general, who was empowered by Governor Roosevelt to investigate the Ewald case, said the three crimes charged against the Ewalds are:

"Requesting of Martin J. Healy the appointment of George F. Ewald as city magistrate of the city of New York, and with understanding and with subsequently paying the sum of $10 000 to Martin J. Healy, pursuant to and in connection with such request.

"Making payment of valuable consideration, namely $10,000, to Martin J. Healy in consideration for and upon condition that George F. Ewald receive the appointment to the office of city magistrate.

"In the third count, George F. Ewald is charged with the crime of accepting the appointment to the public office of city magistrate upon the payment of $10 000 to Martin J. Healy. Bertha Ewald is named as principal in this crime in that George F. Ewald accepted the appointment with direct and indirect counsels, commands and inducements of said Bertha Ewald, and in that she aided and abetted in the payment of the $10,000 to Martin J. Healy."

The specific charges against Healy and Tommaney were not made public, since they did not appear for arraignment.

Court recessed after the Ewalds were arraigned and the former magistrate and his wife left to find a battery of cameras awaiting them on the courthouse steps.

"I suppose they'll try to put us in the electric chair, too," said Mrs. Ewald, to which her husband added, "It's all just a circus."

Special Prosecutor Hiram C. Todd, in charge of the grand jury investigation, said presentation of evidence will be continued next Wednesday. This evidence will be used in an attempt to bring further indictments, either against those already named or against other persons under scrutiny.

The investigation leading to today's indictments was an outgrowth of an earlier inquiry instigated by United States Attorney Tuttle as a result of which Ewald and several others were indicted by a federal grand jury for mail fraud and conspiracy in the sale of Cotter Butte Mines, Inc., stock.

WIDOW SAYS DEATH HAS NOT BROUGHT CONAN DOYLE REST

LONDON, Sept. 19.—(AP)—Death has not brought rest to the late Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, according to a statement which the Daily Mail attributes to his widow.

Speaking at a Daily Mail reporter of the communications she claims to have received from her husband, Lady Doyle is quoted as saying: "He is very tired. Just as on earth a man after years of labor desires rest, so my husband wants peace for a while.

Referring to the will of her husband, Lady Doyle told the Daily Mail that "Sir Arthur would have been a very rich man but for gifts to spiritualism. He sacrified a handsome income for the cause but I speak for myself and my family when I say that we would much rather he spent his life and money, and so wonderfully, and that we received less."

TO TERMINATE GENERAL STRIKE IN BARCELONA

BARCELONA, Spain, Sept. 19.—(AP) —Strikers in a mass meeting late this afternoon voted to terminate a general strike which had kept more than 50,000 workers off duty since Monday.

The men, employes of the company for improvement of construction works, approved an accord reached earlier in the day between their representatives and the construction company.

By its terms the company recognizes the Sindicato unico, outlawed under the Primo De Rivera dictatorship, as a legal union organization, and also will re-employ six workers whose dismissal was one of the causes of the trouble.

The men are expected to return to work by tomorrow, or Monday at the latest.

Ruth Alexander Was Unwitting Bigamist

Supposed That She Had Been Divorced When She Married Robert A. Elliott

OLATHE, Kans., Sept. 19.—(AP) —Ruth Alexander, 24-year-old aviatrix, fell to her death at San Diego yesterday apparently unaware that a divorce had not been granted her second husband here prior to her marriage last June 21 at Yuma, Ariz., to Robert A. Elliott, naval reserve flier.

An unanswered letter from the aviatrix in the district court files revealed today she was under the impression a decree had been granted the second husband, Mac Alexander, a farmer, near here.

She wrote June 2, saying she "understood" a divorce had been obtained by Alexander and requested that papers in the case be forwarded.

No reply was made to the letter and the belief was expressed by Alexander and attorneys that she assumed, in the absence of an answer, that she was free to remarry.

Miss Naomi Ayres, district court clerk, explained she had delayed answering the letter, intending to send a reply after the case had been finally settled.

The woman flier's first marriage to Aldon Fanuelson of Near Irving, Kans., her old home town, became known to Alexander and her friends here only today. Then known by her maiden name of Ruth Blaney, she eloped and was married to Fanuelson at Richmond, Mo., in 1925.

A year later they were divorced.

Her marriage to Elliott also was unknown to Alexander and to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Blaney of Irving, until they read about it in news dispatches after her death.

The girl was married to Alexander here July 8, 1926. They separated about two years ago and she went to California, where she took up flying.

The aviatrix will be buried at Irving, Kans.

New Clue To Missing Magistrate Crater

Barber in Halifax Hotel Says That He Shaved Crater Last Wednesday

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 19.—(AP)—A. W. Eulath, barber at a Halifax hotel, asserted today when shown a picture of Joseph Force Crater, missing New York supreme court justice, that he had shaved the man last Wednesday morning. The picture was shown to the barber by Sergeant Mather Young of the Nova Scotia police, who began a search in the province today for the jurist.

Eulath said he had seen several photographic likenesses of the justice within a day or two and was positive he was the man he shaved. His customer, the barber said, weighed about 175 pounds, was five feet, ten inches tall or thereabouts, had his hair parted in the middle and combed tight to his head. The man was heavily built, but carried his weight with apparent ease, the barber said. He wore a brown suit with a small check.

The man he shaved wore "nose pincher" spectacles, the barber told police, with a very heavy gold bar on the glasses where they met at the bridge of his nose.

The barber said the man's face was pale and he was not communicative.

Inquiries at the hotel failed to reveal that Justice Crater had been registered there under his own name, and desk clerks could not recall that the hotel had had any guests of the judge's description.

INFANTILE PARALYSIS MAY CLOSE MIDDLETOWN SCHOOLS

MIDDLETOWN, Sept. 19.— (AP) — Middletown physicians at a conference here this afternoon, to decide whether the city's schools were to be closed on account of an outbreak of infantile paralysis which already has claimed two lives, were unable to reach an agreement. Decision in the matter was postponed and is expected to be reached after another conference called for 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

At their first meeting this morning, the physicians voted to close the schools for two weeks but reconsidered the decision after a conference with a state health official, who gave as his opinion that such a step was not necessary.

No new cases of infantile paralysis were reported today and no change for the worse was noted in the condition of the three infantile paralysis patients in the hospital here.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—(AP)— Princess Marie Charlotte Constance De Broglie, member of a princely French house, and Prince Louis Ferdinand of Bourbon-Orleans, infante of Spain, were married here today after triumphing over legal obstacles and family opposition.

The princely couple, under a pouring rain, drove up in separate taxicabs to a dingy registry office in dingy Paddington. In ten minutes they were wedded.

This brief ceremony, kept secret even from their intimates, culminated an attachment which Prince Louis today said had begun 20 years ago.

Disparity in their ages—the princess is 73 and Prince Louis 42—made the course of their romance difficult but failed to end it.

FIND RUSSIAN GOVT. HAS BEEN SELLING WHEAT SHORT UPON CHICAGO MARKET

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19.— (AP) — A charge that the Russian government has been selling wheat short upon the Chicago market, contributing to the fall in price and to the injury of American farmers, was made today by Secretary Hyde.

In a telegram to John A. Bunnell, president of the Chicago board of trade, the agriculture department chief said an inquiry had established the short selling "beyond all question of doubt." He asked what provision the exchange has made or can make "for the protection of our American farmers from such activities."

"There can be no question," the telegram continued, "that this selling has contributed to the fall in the price of wheat and to the injury of American farmers now engaged in their intensive marketing season. Obviously it would be impossible for soviet Russia to deliver grain in Chicago over our tariff of 42 cents a bushel."

Secretary Hyde said the telegram was based upon the admission of the All-Russian Textile syndicate, of New York, that it had sold 5,000,000 bushels of wheat short upon the Chicago market. This syndicate, he continued, is a subsidiary of the Amtorg Trading Corp., the Russian commercial organization in this country.

The investigation, which was inspired by newspaper articles and rumors, was made by Dr. J. W. T. Dubel, administrator of the grain futures act.

Hope was expressed by Hyde, that the grain exchange would make regulations "guaranteeing a fair price for the American crop."

Pending advice from the Chicago board of trade official, the secretary declined to comment upon what action would be taken.

SHIPS IN DISTRESS IN GALE OFF THE COAST OF BRITTANY

Italian Tankship Tuscania Wirelessed For Assistance—Several Other Ships Off the Coast of France Have Sent Out Calls For Help—Ocean-Going Tugs Are Rushing to Assist the Vessels—A Severe Gale is Raging in the English Channel

PARIS, Sept. 19—(AP)—The Italian tankship Tuscania wirelessed a call for aid in a heavy gale off the coast of Britanny today. Several other vessels, including the British steamship Temple Mead, also sent out calls for help.

Southwesterly gales, veering to the northwest, were sweeping the entire seaboard of Britanny from Cherbourg down to Lorient. Wireless stations were continually receiving appeals of distress from ships floundering in heavy seas between Cape Finisterre and the Lizard.

Besides the tanker and the Temple Mead, the Greek steamer Stravondis and Dohodaka asked help. The seagoing tug La Tour Billon sailed from Saint Nazaire to the assistance of the Dohodaka, reported sinking in latitude 47 north and longitude 6 west.

(First wireless reports indicated that the Tuscania was the Cunarder which sailed from London today, but a later wireless identified the vessel as Italian).

TUG HAS BEEN SENT TO ASSIST THE TUSCANIA

BREST, France, Sept. 19—(AP)—The salvage tug Auroch put out from port late tonight in the face of heavy seas to assist the Italian tankship Tuscania, which sent out a wireless call for help this evening during a furious storm west of Brittany.

The Tuscania was last reported to be four nautical miles northwest of Ushant Island. The gale, in which half a dozen ships were floundering in distress, showed no signs of abating.

LEVITT'S ORATORY HALTED BY JUDGE ALLYN B. BROWN

HARTFORD, Sept. 19.—(AP)—Arguments over the attempt of the attorney general to obtain a new trial on the issuance of a mandamus writ ordering him to proceed against the public utilities commissioners for neglecting to enforce the grade crossings elimination law, were heard today in superior court by Judge Allyn L. Brown with Prof. Albert Levitt, of Redding and Deputy Attorney General Ernest L. Averill as the contestants.

The issuance of the writ of mandamus by Judge Newell Jennings on Mr. Levitt's petition, has been upheld by the supreme court of errors but action on it has been blocked by the filing of the attorney general's position for a re hearing, which was countered by Prof. Levitt's motion that this plea be dismissed. Prof. Levitt's motion was in turn attacked by another motion of the attorney general, who asked that Levitt's motion be stricken out as improper in form.

Judge Brown heard both men for more than an hour and took the papers in the case. For the most part the arguments were highly technical but once in a while Levitt grew heated and let fly a shaft at the political aspects of the case.

Once he said that the attorney general is attempting to delay the case and that "the attorney general does not come into court with clean hands. And not all the water that flows from the turbines of the electric light and power companies can wash his hands."

Mr. Averill objected to this and Judge Brown remarked, "I don't think we need any flights of oratory in an argument of this kind, Mr. Levitt."

DRY AGENT WAS SLAIN DURING RAID ON BREWERY

ELIZABETH, N. J., Sept. 19.—(AP)—Attacked by eleven men with drawn pistols, prohibition agent raiding the Rising Sun brewery today engaged in a gun battle and one of their number, John Frenelli, 40, of Philadelphia, was fatally wounded.

Frenelli was shot three times, and first reports said there was wild confusion in the brewery. A detachment of state police and squads of city police were rushed to the Old Elizabeth landmark and entered the building. Their guns drawn, and tear gas bombs in their free hand.

Frenelli, his companions said, lost his life when one of the agents was seized and held as a human shield in front of a gunman. Frenelli, refusing to fire lest he shot a comrade, was an easy target for the invader.

At least four of the gang were said to have remained in the old fortress-like structure. Information from the inside was meagre and whether there was any more shooting after Frenelli's death could not immediately be ascertained.

Jahncke praised the efforts of the Federated Veterans of the World War in behalf of peace and said "The American navy is in sympathy with your great federation, heart and soul."

Similar sentiments were expressed before the women's auxiliary of the Fidac in a message from Assistant Secretary of State Castle, calling the organization a "bulwalk of peace."

The aged woman had just alighted from a Middletown-Haddam bus in front of the Haddam postoffice and was crossing the street when hit by Wells' automobile.

POLICEMEN AND BURGLAR WOUNDED IN DANBURY

DANBURY, Sept. 19.—(AP)—A gun battle between two policemen and two burglars who had looted a sporting goods store today, resulted in the wounding of the officers and one of the burglars.

Shortly after the shooting police arrested Harold Skiff, of West Haven, as one of the two men who broke into the store. Tonight Skiff's companion, who fled, was being sought.

Skiff, wounded three times in the right leg as he clambered over a fence to escape, was found hiding in a packing box. A trail of blood led to the discovery of his hiding place by a toy. When police broke the box open they found Skiff with a gun in his hand and a rifle resting between his legs. He was overpowered before he could shoot.

The burglars were discovered by Patrolmen Arnold A. Schulze and Wilbur Simpson as they were about to drive away in an automobile laden with loot taken from Rocano's sporting goods store. In the exchange of bullets that followed, Schulze was wounded in the right hand and a second bullet inflicted a flesh wound on his chest over the heart. Simpson was slightly wounded in one finger.

Abandoning their automobile and the loot, the two men fled the scene. Police later learned that the car was registered in the name of Charleton W. Sarles, of West Haven, who, they said, has served five and a half years in state prison for the theft of an automobile and a term in the Cheshire reformatory for stealing bicycles. His home was under police guard tonight.

Two rifles were found near the abandoned automobile. One of the guns was identified as one of 16, valued at $573, which were stolen Wednesday night from the gun store of Gunner F. Nelson at Stamford. Sam Boccuzzo, an employe at the Stamford store, identified the gun.

60TH ANNIVERSARY OF FALL OF PAPACY'S TEMPORAL POWER

ROME, Sept. 19.—(AP)—The sixtieth anniversary of the entry of Italian troops into Rome, with the consequent fall of the Papacy's temporal power, falls due tomorrow; but in view of the lateran treaties concluded last year between the Italian kingdom and the Holy See the patriotic demonstrations, often smacking of the anti-clerical in the past will be lacking.

In fact, it will be the last time the Italians celebrate their triumph of 1870 over the papacy if a prospective bill is made by law by parliament.

This bill, to be laid before the council of ministers October 15, will abolish the September 20 holiday and substitute for it February 11, the date of the signing of the lateran treaties last year. It will formally end recollection of the old strife between church and state in Italy.

TO LAUNCH DRIVE FOR $500,000 FOR NEW HOSPITAL

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 19—John F. Carr, president of the board of trustees of St. Joseph's hospital, announced today that a drive to raise $500,000 to build and equip a new hospital to be known by the same name and to be located outside of the business traffic area, would be staged here this fall. The drive will extend to neighboring towns using local hospital facilities.

President Carr stated that the necessity of a new community hospital was in the balance with possibility of not having any hospital at all as the present building has long been recognized as inadequate for its present use and that it is needed by St. Joseph's parish for other purposes.

The church owns the building which has been occupied as a hospital for the past 23 years. The limited accommodations are frequently taxed, the building is not fireproof and inadequacy and risk is the result. The prospects of modernizing the building has been found entirely lacking in feasibility and the present site will not permit expansion.

Another ample justification of the project for a new hospital, as pointed out by Mr. Carr, is the fact that for 23 years the Catholic church has borne the responsibility of providing Willimantic and surrounding towns with hospital facilities. The church has given the use of its building and the sisters have given free service in the administration and operation of the institution. There has been no bar to creed or race and the city has not been asked to give anything in return. The church is now sorely in need of the building for its own use.

Limited in number and unable to augment the staff the Sisters of Charity are unable to cope with the constantly increasing demands for hospital care and they must now pass the work into other hands. The community is deeply indebted to the sisters for the services they have given.

"It is, of course, unthinkable," said President Carr, "that an enlightened community such as ours should be left without hospital facilities. Therefore, there is no alternative to the plan that we build for ourselves our own community hospital which we, as a community, need for the protection of our health. Willimantic is as capable of doing as much as other comparable cities and towns have done to provide themselves with modern community hospitals, and so this campaign to raise $500,000 needed to construct and equip an entirely new hospital on a new site is to be launched."

Realizing the impossibility of raising $500,000 in cash, the trustees have adopted a plan whereby the payment of subscription may be spread over three years. Subscribers to the fund may pay such amounts as they may choose to give in six equal semi-annual instalments, the first of which will not fall due until April 1, 1931, six months from now.

The plans for the new structure call for an attractive building, scientifically built, to have 96 beds for adult and child patients and 19 bassinets for new-born babies. It will have a modern maternity department, operating suite, X-ray department, laboratory, kitchens and all other indispensable hospital features.

Preliminary organization work for the campaign is already under way at the campaign headquarters which have been established in the chamber of commerce building.

Department Inspector Leon Loomis of New Britain conducted his annual inspection of A. C. Tyler camp No. 1, U. S. W. V., at the first fall meeting of the camp held in G. A. R. hall Thursday night. There were about 30 in attendance and the meeting was followed by a social session.

Convicted by the testimony of his wife who said that he had not contributed anything to the support of herself and their three minor children for the past three months, Joseph Boucher, 27, of West Main street, received a suspended sentence in police court this morning. Judge Frank H. Foss suspended execution for 30 days of a sentence of six months in jail unless the accused furnished a bond insuring payment of $8 a week to the family. Mrs. Boucher said that her husband was also accustomed to coming home intoxicated and being abusive to the family. She blamed his associates for his neglectful condition.

Rundown?

MAYBE IT'S WORMS

YOUR "run-down" child may be playing host to vitality-sapping worms which rob her of nourishment and poison her with their secretions. Worms are much more common than most mothers think.

Look also for the following symptoms: grinding of teeth, picking the nose, crossness, crying in sleep, offensive breath, loss of appetite or weight, nausea or general restlessness. Any one of these signs may be your warning that worms are present.

Wise mothers take no chances with these dangerous and disgusting childhood pests. Even if worms are only suspected they give the child

POETRY

For Her Sweet Sake

But if the gods those shades did now frequent, I'd pray:

Gods: Make me very clean and pure and delicate,
That I may learn to love with tender might;
Help me get rid of all that she would hate,
And be her gentle-man, clear-eyed and white—
For her sweet sake.

Gods: Make me brave, as true as steel, as strong,
That I might fight and conquer all her foes;
Not girt with mail as knights did redress wrong,
But shrewd and modern-wise, in evening clothes—
For her sweet sake.

Gods: Make me modest, thoughtful, very wise,
That I may take possession of her throne;
That I may come to her in kingly guise,
And, ruling gently, make her all my own—
For both our sakes.

—Anthony Comstock McKenzie, in New York Press.

Prayer of a Teacher

Father, between Thy strong hands Thou hast bent
The clay but roughly into shape, and lent
To me the task of smoothing where I may
And fashioning to a gentler form Thy clay.
To see some hidden beauty Thou hadst planned,
Slowly revealed beneath my laboring hand;
Sometime to help a twisted thing to grow
More straight; this is full recompense, and so
I give Thee but the praise that Thou wouldst ask. . . .
Firm hand and high heart for the further task.

—Dorothy Littlewort, in the Commonweal.

FOURNIER MAY BE NAMED AS GATES' OPPONENT

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 19—The big guns of Windham county's democracy will congregate in Danielson, at the Union St. John Baptist hall, next Monday evening in county convention. The principal business before the meeting will be the selection of a nominee for sheriff, to oppose Sheriff Charles A. Gates, Willimantic, the republican candidate, nominated in Putnam at the republican county convention, a few days ago, to succeed himself.

Delegates to Monday evening's convention will assemble here from the 15 towns of the county, which, among them, constitute the 28th and 29th senatorial districts of the state.

This afternoon it was indicated that Napoleon J. Fournier of Moosup is the outstanding candidate of the county's democracy for his party's nomination for sheriff. There may be other candidates for the privilege of opposing Sheriff Gates in the campaign, but they were without mention hereabouts today, a crcumstance that might be without significance.

Mr. Fournier is said to be a considerable personage in the democratic party in Plainfield, a rock-ribbed republican town for two generations, but where the democrats have been triumphant in town and state elections for several years past, more or less completely upsetting the old order of things. The disciples of Thomas Jefferson down in old Plainfield have been so successful that they are now reaching out for county offices, and are boosting Mr. Fournier for the sheriff nomination.

If he gets it, the very popular and efficient Sheriff Gates likely will have to contend with more lively opposition than otherwise would be the case.

Another bit of business that will be before next Monday evening's democratic county convention here will be the matter of selecting a county committee.

The call for the convention is signed by Edward Keegan of Thompson and Valentine L. Murphy of Willimantic, respectively members of the democratic state central committee for the 28th and 29th senatorial districts.

You can't "kid" Bernard Casey—he's too much that way on his own account. Deputy Chief C. A. Hamilton of the fire department had this fact demonstrated to him in startling manner just before 11 o'clock this morning. A group that included the mentioned persons, with Chief John McFarland nearby, were standing at the corner of Main and Center streets, near where Box 23 of the fire alarm telegraph system is located. In the heart of the business section, the ringing of this number always causes a scare.

Chief Hamilton opened the box for inspection as Mr. Casey, enjoying his lunch hour, stood by watching. Mr. Casey, reached over in a make-believe gesture to pull in the alarm. Mr. Hamilton smilingly dared him to do it, and Mr. Casey accommodated.

As the dread number blared out on the fire sirens Deputy Chief Hamilton frantically tried to choke off the automatic box, but without success, and then turned about and hot-footed it up to the central fire station in Academy street to halt the apparatus from responding to a call.

From all of the borough cars streaked down town to see what the affair was all about. Mr. Casey blandly watched the excitement. Deputy Chief Hamilton looked as though he would like to order some dynamite for use on the said Casey, but evidently thought better of it.

Norwich Car in Crash

Cars owned and operated by Carlo DePucchio of Central avenue, Norwich, and Sliby Saad, Moosup, crashed about 6:15 this morning, in a fog, on the new Danielson-Wauregan state highway. Both cars were proceeding northerly just prior to the accident. The DePucchio car was ahead. Saad, operating a heavy sedan, started to pass the DePucchio car just as DePucchio, who is employed with the road building crew, swung over to the left of the highway toward a place where he parks his car while he is at work. In the crash that followed the Norwich man's car was damaged to the extent of about $50, Saad's machine being banged up for a loss of about $25. State Officer George Martin of the Danielson barracks investigated the accident. There were no personal injuries, and no arrests.

Arthur "Pop" Williams, Danielson's premier football star, will draw a very considerable gallery from Danielson and surrounding communities when he is in there battling as a member of the Providence Steam Rollers of the National Professional Football circuit during the regular season that opens a week hence.

Williams, who mowed the opposition down as a member of a Killingly high school team, a few years back, and later as a star back at the Connecticut Agricultural college, is in fine fettle for the 1930 season. He has been engaged on tree surgery work for months past, and that's no idle pastime. "Pop" may be expected to appear regularly in the Roller lineup this fall. He is bigger, stronger and more experienced than ever—one of the outstanding stars of the professional football aggregation.

There's no getting away from it in Danielson these days—about every other man one meets wants to talk politics. Above all the pros and cons arises the keynote. It has to do with the general desire of the average property owner to insure that the town retains the services of Charles A. Tillinghast, republican, as first selectman. This comes about not so much because Mr. Tillinghast happens to be a republican, but because the administration methods he has instituted has resulted in an all-time record for reduction of the town's debt within a period of two years. Definite figures cannot be given until the forthcoming annual report is released, probably during the coming week, but the reduction during the period mentioned is said to be in excess of $50,000. That's never been done before in this town in a like period, and that's why the average person who pays taxes, whether republican or democrat, is interested. Mr. Tillinghast is not a practical politician, this remark without criticism of anyone, but he is an almighty good business man doing something for the town that few others could do, for practically no compensation. Retired from his own business interests and in a position to play around if he liked, but does not, he has for the past two years given, with large dividends, his services for the betterment of Killingly's financial welfare.

Lieut. Albert S. Field, lieutenant-inspector of the state police department, today made an inspection of the state barracks on North Main street. These inspections involve a careful checkup on all department equipment, of the barracks and the properties of the state therein, as well as of the personnel. Lieut. Field formerly, as a sergeant, was the commanding officer of the local barracks. His home in Brooklyn, he spends much of his duty time at the barracks in Ridgefield where recruits for the department receive their training for service under his supervision.

A gaily decorated line of booths along the Broad street side of Davis park attracted many people from various sections of eastern Windham county tonight for the opening of the street fair being held in the interest of the Nurses' Home fund of the Day Kimball hospital. The sale of articles was brisk and the profits all go to the fund. The street fair is to be continued during Saturday.

One of the last of the old cisterns that were built at strategic points about the borough back in the long gone days when Danielson's firemen battled fires with hand-pump apparatus has been filled up near the Methodist parsonage at the head of Cottage street. It had not been used at a fire for time out of memory, and probably not within the last 40 years. After the installation of the city water service and the location of hydrants about the borough, the cisterns went out of the picture.

The announcement is made that the marriage of Miss Ruth M. Litch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William K. Litch, of Stearns street, and Theodore Redlack is to take place at the Westfield Congregational church here on the afternoon of Sunday, October 4.

PUTNAM

NORWICH DOG THAT BIT CHILD DID NOT HAVE RABIES

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 19.—A "mad dog" fright was thrown into residents of the Manhansett village section of the city this week when a stray dog attacked Threasa Nichols, 2-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Nichols of Arch street, on Wednesday, inflicting a wound when it sunk its fangs into the child's hand. Town Dog Warden E. L. Chandler, after a search of the territory, captured the dog, killed it and sent the head to Hartford, where it was examined for rabies. On Tuesday Warden Chandler received a negative report from the state department of health, indicating that tests of the animal's skull showed that it was not affected with rabies.

Precautionary measures were taken, however, when the Nichols child was given the Pasteur treatment, which was administered by Dr. J. J. Russell. Warden Chandler said last night that the dog which attacked the child came from Norwich, this fact being ascertained by a registration tag on its collar.

It was announced today by Supt. of Schools Leon M. Farrin that teachers in the Putnam evening school this year will be Mrs. Anna C. Jarvis and Miss Mildred Orwatt. Mrs Jarvis will be in charge of the bookkeeping department, while Miss Orwatt will supervise instruction in shorthand and typewriting. Both teachers are graduates of Putnam high school and have directed the evening school in past years. The first session of evening school will be held on Monday evening, Sept. 2 in Putnam high school.

Plans are now being formulated for the dedication of the new athletic field at the high school, which will take place probably on Sept. 27, when Putnam high school football eleven clashes with the gridsters of Northbridge, Mass., high school in the season's opening tilt. An informal meeting of school officials at which Principal E. L. Robinson, Coach L. F. Noyes and John H. Bulger, chairman of the school board's building committee, were present, was held yesterday afternoon at the high school for the purpose of discussing the dedication programme.

Mayor and Mrs. Charles A. Richard returned to their home today after two days spent in Boston, where they were the guests of Mayor James M. Curley, at the tercentenary exercises.

Tom Thumb golf is steadily enlisting new devotees of the sport in Putnam and vicinity. Miniature courses in the territory hereabouts are all equipped with electrical systems for illumination of the greens at night. The problem on the minds of many who sit in the galleries on the courses each night, but never play, is whether or not the popular innovation of 1930 will prove permanently attractive or is the present craze just temporary. An interesting debate was heard on the sidelines of a local course last night when two persons discussing the future of the game compared it to ping pong and mah jongg, parlor sports of other days, which came into popularity with suddenness and went out, almost as suddenly. One devotee of "real" golf in conversation today said that from his observations the miniature greens certainly have proved their mettle by graduating numbers of followers of the sport from duffers to the ranks of the par breakers, an achievement that is worthy of a whole lot of praise from golfers who play on 100-acre courses.

Police in Putnam and surrounding towns have been advised to be on the lookout for Thomas Mulligan, Charles Flynn and Charles Reel, who started out of Danielson Monday evening on an adventure of crime that terminated with the hold-up of a dining car in Woonsocket, R. I. Considering the proximity of Danielson to Putnam it is unlikely that they would put in an appearance in this community so soon after their act.

Candidates nominated for town offices at party caucuses held a week ago, are showing little aggressiveness in the campaign thus far. The real political action will get underway on election day, Oct. 6, when the campaign workers in each party will center their efforts on getting out the vote. The situation at the present is one that should furnish a wealth of action. Both the democrats and the republicans have nominated complete slates. The republicans have majority representation on the board of selectmen, while the tax collector's office is held by a democrat.

The registrars of voters are busy these days with applications of new citizens seeking the privilege of voting this year. Both parties are enumerating many new members, while the shift from one side to the other has been comparatively small. And, after all factors are considered, there is still the same talk as to what the outcome will be on election day, which leaves everyone guessing, except the certain few professing to be "in the know."

The announcement that an aviation school may be established at the state trade school in Putnam, has created widespread interest among Putnam boys of high school age, deeply interested in joining the ranks of the steadily increasing army of the air-minded. Doubtless, the officials at the trades institution will soon be deluged with requests for immediate establishment of such instruction The lure of aviation alone is sufficiently great to warrant such a sentiment among boys and the importance of an aircraft school to the community is enough to enlist the interest of the elders, who have already voiced their willingness to spend time in an effort to further the possibilities of such a course being added to the local trade school.

PROVIDENCE WOMAN INJURED IN GROVE ST. CRASH

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 19.—Mrs. Maria Clement, 167 Moran avenue, East Providence, is a patient at the Day Kimball hospital tonight, suffering from injuries sustained when she was thrown through the windshield of an automobile involved in an accident on Cemetery curve on Grove street late this afternoon. Mrs. Clement's injuries consist of a fracture of the collarbone, numerous lacerations of the face and head. Eugene B. Sullivan of East Providence, driver of the car in which Mrs. Clement was a passenger, was arrested on a charge of reckless driving, following an investigation of the accident by State Officer George Martin of the Danielson barracks. The accident occurred when Sullivan, who was driving in a southerly direction towards Danielson, in an effort to read a direction sign on the side of the road, drove his car to the left side of the highway and crashed into a heavy truck, driven by Fred Briere of Smith street, Putnam, which was rounding the curve in the direction of Putnam. Only slight damage was caused to the truck, but the Sullivan car, a Ford coupe, was demolished. Sullivan escaped without injuries.

COWS SEEK NEW PASTURES AND GET MAROONED

During the low water in the Quinebaug, a herd of cows owned by Mrs. Hannah Hiscox pastured in a lot that borders on the river, crossed the shallow stream to what evidently appeared to them better feeding grounds on the Lisbon side. At early evening, when milking time came, they failed to put in their usual appearance at the barn yard bars. When finally located across on the other side, no amount of calling would induce them to risk the return trip. Men from nearby farms offered their aid, and wading over, a regular movie rodeo and round-up was put on. All the herd was finally returned but one, which had strayed too far to be found. Mrs. Hiscox says it is now a case of ninety and nine safe within the fold with one away in Lisbon, stark and cold.

Evidence Of Chestnut Blight

A farmer, whose home is on the southern border of the town, and who owns over a hundred acres of fine wood and timber land, took a recent trip over parts of his forest area, to a spot where many chestnut trees used to flourish in the days before the blight ruined his fine stands of chestnut timber. There he found plenty of evidence of the attempted come-back of these trees, in the shape of new shoots, which in some cases were large enough in the fall of 1929 to bear a few clusters of burs. This summer, these new shoots have also died, evidently affected by the same deadly blight that killed all these valuable trees close to 20 years ago. This condition, he says, proves to him but one thing, that the reported come-back of the chestnut trees is only transient.

THE HUGE FIRE WASTE

When President Hoover fixes the week of October 5 as Fire Prevention week he is continuing a custom that has prevailed for a number of years. When he directs attention to the fact that the fire loss of the nation for 1929 was $470,000,000, he refers to a situation in which everyone has cause for being interested.

Fire losses vary from year to year, but they remain at a high figure, far higher than would be the case if there was the full assumption of responsibility and an earnest endeavor to cooperate in the effort to prevent.

This loss represents a tremendous waste, a large percentage of which is preventable. What the total would be if it were not for the efforts that are put forth no one knows and one shudders to think what it might be. And yet, with such a huge economic loss resulting in spite of the steps taken, it ought to be perfectly apparent to the public at large that there is still a big opportunity for keeping down the size of the great national ash heap.

There are those who recognize the need of more care and apply themselves at every opportunity to the task of prevention once it is called to their attention. Others listen and forget. They allow the suggestions to go in one ear and out the other and then wonder why there are so many needless fires, or why they didn't think to be careful when it becomes apparent that a lapse on their part helped to pile up the fire loss.

It is only by constantly keeping the situation before the people that there will be given the active cooperation that is needed. That is the purpose of Fire Prevention week. If through such efforts more thought can be directed to such conditions and the responsibility of the individual in connection therewith, there are reasons for feeling that progress is being made toward the desired goal.

It is just as easy in most instances to be careful as to be careless. It is a habit worth forming and in the long run brings returns which are reflected in more than reduced fire losses. We can hardly be proud of the fact that lack of adequate fire prevention produces for this country the largest fire waste in the world.

LITTERED STREETS

Sometimes we think we are far in advance of Europe and can show it much that is superior in the way we do things.

Sometimes we find out that there are many fine lessons which we ought to learn from European methods of doing things.

Dr. Bernard Sachs, chairman of a New York committee on street and outdoor cleanliness, has just returned from a three months' tour of Europe and he brings home the information that "everywhere abroad there is a proper regard for outdoor cleanliness and everywhere the people are expected and are by ordinance compelled to cooperate with the city authorities," and that New York's problem should have been studied and solved in the manner adopted abroad.

We are disposed to point with pride to our cities to the way our streets should be kept, to the need of cleanliness and to the desirability of making our communities attractive for citizens as well as visitors. But if Dr. Sachs is correct, it is necessary for us to go abroad to see how it ought to be done.

There is no getting away from the fact that well-kept streets are an asset, that cleanliness is of vital importance and that health conditions are bettered where careful attention is given to a tidy city. The New York doctor doesn't undertake to create the impression that all the commendable things that he found in Europe are accomplished with ease and without constant attention on the part of the authorities, but he points out that it is done even if prosecutions are necessary and it is easy to note the contrast to our negligence and indifference.

There is slight excuse for much of the litter that is to be found in our streets and public places. It is the result of that careless habit of discarding everything right at the point one happens to be when the use for them is over. It is the accompaniment of the view that the street is the common refuse can. The longer the practice persists the harder it is to put a check upon it.

BROMLEY'S AMBITION

Evidently Lieutenant Harold Bromley isn't governed by that rule of three trials and out but, rather, is guided by the old saying, "If at first you don't succeed try, try again."

The Canadian flier is determined to cross the Pacific ocean without stopping on the way over. He may succeed if he persists, but he has undertaken it four times and been obliged on each occasion to turn back. Fortunately he has escaped with no serious results.

Lieutenant Bromley cannot be charged with a lack of courage. If that was all he needed he would have completed his crossing a long time ago. But there are other considerations. It is a long trip, requiring a big load of gasoline in order to cover the 4,500 miles, and a machine that will keep him in the air for the necessary time. Weather conditions in the Pacific are just as bothersome as in the Atlantic and Bromley has repeatedly found out that he cannot expect to accomplish his task without a reliable motor and good air navigation.

There are plenty of hazards in any ocean crossing but there is no mistaking their presence in the long trip from Japan to the United States. There is a time of the year when conditions are more favorable than others and for that reason Bromley has abandoned further efforts this year. He is taking chances enough when he sets out under the most favorable conditions of weather and plane. Nothing could have convinced him of that more than his latest flight of 25 hours during which he covered about as many hundred miles, including the return. To the layman it would seem that he was particularly fortunate to have gotten back to Japan, in view of all the trouble he encountered, but while it served to spoil his trip and his efforts for this year it has not discouraged him in his determination to make the crossing. It is a non-stop trip that will be made just the same as the Atlantic has been crossed in both directions. Whether Lieutenant Bromley will be successful in being the first to do it remains to be seen. His ambition takes him on a quest in which not many others are displaying much interest.

NEW YORK DEMOCRATS

In anticipation of the conventions in New York state, the question of prohibition is getting full attention. This has resulted from the demands which have been made for the ending of present conditions and because of the setting forth of his position by Governor Roosevelt, who will unquestionably get a renomination from the democrats.

There is a division between the wet and dry republicans of that state over what should be done concerning a dry plank, even though it is known that the state has nothing at present to do with the removal of the constitutional amendment. Inasmuch as there has been much favorable sentiment concerning the nomination of Charles H. Tuttle, United States attorney, to head the republican ticket, more than the usual interest is attached to his recent resignation and his stand in favor of the repeal of the 18th amendment.

This means that Mr. Tuttle has found by experience that a change should be made, that he is unwilling to hold his office longer under existing conditions, and at the same time he sets forth where he stands in case he is sought as a candidate for the governorship. Pointing out that he is not a candidate, he leaves it for the republicans of the state to meet his position or to look elsewhere. His position on repeal preceded by only a few days that of Colonel Donovan, a former assistant United States attorney general, who not only advocates the repeal of the amendment but urges its incorporation in the republican platform of New York state.

On the other hand, there is a strong dry sentiment in certain parts of New York state, which threatens an independent candidate in case of a repeal plank. Whether the situation can be met by a compromise plank and with Tuttle as candidate will be disclosed in due time.

PREVENT THE RECOUNTS

Once again with the primaries in full blast we are hearing from various directions that recounts are being demanded. It is quite evident that through the method of counting there are excellent chances for mistakes, so much so that those who have been counted out are not satisfied. They feel that the vote was so close that there was a fine chance that they suffered through some intentional or unintentional mistake. This means, if the petitions for a recount are granted, that there will be much additional expense involved, and yet there ought to be no other desire on the part of anyone than to see that the one who got the most votes received the nomination.

Hardly is there a primary or an election but what there is a demand for a recount. This makes it evident that sooner or later proper recognition will be given to voting by machine so that, in addition to accuracy, there will be available early returns of the outcome of such contests, and there will be assurance when the vote is counted that no mistake has been made.

Not all recounts result in upsetting the original outcome. Few are the recounts which do not disclose errors of one kind or another, even though they are not sufficient in amount to change the result. Many cities have eliminated such delays and uncertainties through the installation of voting machines. Others are in the process of making the change and it is interesting to note that those which offered the hardest opposition when machine voting was proposed are strongest in its praise now that they have given it a test.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The man on the corner says: When man wants but little here below he ought to be willing to carry it.

Evidently Rhode Island thinks that Westerly will eventually get so disgusted that it will build the bridge itself.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

Every high school student of Latin will remember this first sentence of Caesar's Commentary: "All Gaul is divided into three parts." But there is another kind of gall that is unlimited as to its divisions and subdivisions, and many a person is acquainted of this fact from A to Z. He is not at all surprised to have some enterprising publisher send him a sample of beautifully engraved cards to be sold to his friends or patrons at a very low cost as a means of raising money for the poor, benighted heathen, or for any other worthy object. The writer, however, was a bit surprised the other day to have the manufacturer of jewelry suggest how much money he could make by selling jewelry. It was one way to make others sparkle. But the climax was reached in suggesting that he might do well in selling a new, up-to-date device for filling lemon piesh

It is hardly necessary to inform any intelligent public that it is not the dealers in material commodities who "are sinners above all others" in this gall business. It has been known to get under the skin of church functionaries. Isn't there a dash of gall in a letter that runs something as follows, written by the pastor of a country church in another state: "We are to have Rally Sunday in our church soon. There will be two services, one for the men and another for the women. We are in search for speakers for these meetings, a man and a woman. We want addresses that will be bright, timely, able and interesting. We are a poor church and can offer no remuneration whatever. It must be wholly a labor of love. Can you suggest two persons who will fill the bill? Lovingly yours, X."

If there are some phases of the human personality that are ludicrous and contemptible, there are surely others that are noble and inspiring. It is these latter that keep us from moral wreckage. Some years ago after a speaker had been addressing a company of men one of them very timidly asked the speaker if he would go with him to a certain home nearby where there was great poverty and suffering. On the way over the man very modestly informed him that for a month he had been giving one half of his dinner to the children who were crying for food. The conditions of that home were very bad, but quickly the authorities were informed and relief was given. But the point here is of this workman giving one half of his dinner to lessen suffering. Isn't that a type of Christianity that counts? Was it not a reflection of Him who "went about doing good?"

When it commes to a matter of doing good do we not see nobility of instinct in many directions? There is something that savors of the higher life that the lower animals seem to display. One day a farmer plowing in his field was attracted by a disturbance in the bushes close by. There he found a large snake attacking a bird. At his approach the snake made a hasty retreat. But there was a bird that did not retreat because it was nearly dead. Now that bird might easily have flown away at the snake's approach, but why didn't she? Because she was protecting three little birds in a nest not far away. Now that bird knew by instinct that fight with that snake meant sure death. Was it a Higher Power that sent that man who saved her little ones from certain death. At any rate it was only a short time later that he carried those little ones home where soon they were able to take care of themselves. Was not this a suggestion of what happened many years ago on Calvary?

Why is it that when the average man plunges into partisan politics the act seems to shatter his reasoning faculties? It is always the sign of a puny intellect when a man—or a woman—will let his prejudices smother his judgment. At a recent political gathering not more than 15 miles away, the presiding officer intimated that President Hoover and the heads of the several departments were responsible for the woes of the farmer and the general financial depression. One wonders if the same officers of state are not responsible for the widespread and long-continued drought; if they are not to blame for over-production which is evidently one factor of the present general unemployment. The unbiased mind knows perfectly well that the incumbent of the white house, being the chief executive, cannot act independently of congress, which is the legislative. It would be just as reasonable to accuse President Hoover of being responsible for the recent hurricane that devastated Santo Domingo.

Do we realize were it not for that type of mind that goes about doing good human society would very soon disintegrate? Suppose that selfishness in all its vicious forms were the order of the day, how long would organized society last? In spite of all the lawlessness that is extant, still the great majority of people are law abiding and insist that the laws shall be obeyed. The moral order would soon disintegrate were it not for the spirit that goes about doing good, because it is the right thing to do and because there is pleasure in doing it. The spirit of the Man of Galilee is still working in the hearts of men. We would be surprised if we realized how many men and women like their Master were still "going about doing good." It is this desire to be helpful that keeps this old world of ours still wagging more than any other single agency.

There are many traits of character that are candidates for immortality but those who possess them are generally the ones who have spent their lives in doing good to others. It is not the man who has amassed a great fortune just for what it will do for him who gets the most out of it, but the man who uses it to feed the hungry, clothe the poor, and restore health to the sick. Do you not think that John D. Rockefeller, Sr., whose money was the main agent that banished the hookworm from the suffering poor whites of the south found a vastly greater satisfaction than if he had spent it on the race track merely for self gratification? There never was a time when Christianity was doing so much for the betterment of humanity than now. And yet many people talk about the "good old times"!

BRAVE DAY RECALLED WHEN NORWICH NAVAL HERO OVERCAME ODDS OF 20 TO 1

When The Bulletin printed the news the other day that the United States destroyer Reid was destined for the scrap heap, the announcement focused attention once more upon the career of a foremost son of this community—Samuel Chester Reid, who designed the United States flag in its present form, and who was victor in one of the most remarkable naval engagements ever recorded.

This victory took place at Fayal, in the Azores islands, Sept. 26 and 27, 1814. Reid commanded a privateer carrying seven guns and 90 men, against a British squadron of three ships carrying 136 guns and 2,000 men.

The following account, written by "an English gentleman, at Fayal, to William Cobbett, Esq.," is republished from "Collection of the Official Accounts, in Detail, of All the Battles Fought by Sea and Land between the Navy and Army of the United States and the Navy and Army of Great Britain, during the Years 1812, 13 14 and 15" by "H. A. Fay, late Capt. in the Corps of U. S. Artillerists" (New York, printed by E. Conrad, 1817).

British "Gang Up."

Fayal, Oct. 15, 1814.

William Cobbett, Esq.

SIR—The American schooner privateer General Armstrong, of New-York, Captain Samuel C. Reid, of seven guns, and 90 men, entered here on the 26th ult. about noon, 17 days from that place for the purpose of obtaining water. The captain, seeing nothing on the horizon, was induced to anchor. Before the elapse of many hours, his majesty's brig Carnation came in, and anchored near her. About six, his majesty's ship, Plantagenet, of 74 guns, and the Rota frigate, came in and anchored also.

The captain of the privateer, and his friends, consulted the first authorities here, about her security. They all considered her perfectly secure, and that his majesty's officers were too well acquainted with the respect due to a neutral port to molest her. But, to the great surprise of every one, about nine in the evening, four boats were dispatched, armed and manned from his majesty's ships, for the purpose of cutting her out. It being about full of moon, the night perfectly clear and calm, we could see every movement made.

The boats approached with rapidity towards her, when, it appears, the captain of the privateer hailed them, and told them to keep off, several times. They, notwithstanding, pushed on, and were in the act of boarding, before any defence was made for the privateer.—A warm contest ensued on both sides. The boats were finally dispersed, with great loss.—The American, now calculating on a very superior force being sent, cut his cables, and rowed the privateer close in alongside of the fort, within half a cable's length, where he moored her, head and stern, with four lines.

The governor now sent a remonstrance to the Van Lloyd, of the Plantagenet, against such proceedings, and trusted that the privateer would not be further molested; she being in the dominions of Portugal, and under the guns of the castle, was entitled to Portuguese protection. Van Lloyd's answer was, that he was determined to destroy the vessel, at the expense of all Fayal, and should any protection be given her by the fort, he would not leave a house standing in the village."

All the inhabitants were gathered about the walls, expecting a renewal of the attack.

Stood Off 14 Boatloads

At midnight, 14 launches were discovered to be coming in, in rotation, for the purpose. When they got within clear, or gunshot, a tremendous and effectual discharge was made from the privateer, which threw the boats into confusion. They now returned a spirited fire; but the privateer kept up so continual a discharge, it was almost impossible for the boats to make any progress.

They finally succeeded, after immense loss, to get alongside of her, and attempted to board at every quarter, cheered by the officers with a cry of no quarter; which we could distinctly hear, as well as their shrieks and cries. The termination was near about a massacre.

Three of the boats were sunk, and but one poor solitary officer escaped death, in a boat that contained 50 souls; he was wounded. The Americans fought with great firmness—some of the boats were left without a single man to row them; others with three or four;—the most, that any one returned with, was about 10.

Several boats floated on shore, full of dead bodies. With great reluctance I state, that they were manned with picked men, and commanded by the first, second, third and fourth lieutenants of the Plantagenet; first, second, third and fourth of the frigate, and the first officers of the brig; together with a great number of midshipmen. Our whole force exceeded 400 men; but three officers escaped, two of which are wounded. This bloody, and unfortunate contest lasted about 40 minutes.

After the boats gave out, nothing more was attempted till daylight the next morning, when the Carnation hauled alongside, and engaged her. The privateer still continued to make a most gallant defence. These veterans reminded me of Lawrence's dying words, of the Chesapeake—"don't give up the ship."

The Carnation lost one of her topmasts, and her yards were shot away; she was much cut up in rigging, and received several shots in her hull. This obliged her to haul off to repair, and to cease firing.

Americans Abandon Ship

The Americans, now finding their principal gun (long Tom) and several others, dismounted, deemed it folly to think of saving her against so superior a force, they therefore cut away her masts to the deck, blew a hole through her bottom, took out their small arms, clothing, etc., and went on shore. I discovered only two shot holes in the hull of the privateer, although much cut up in rigging.

Two boats' crews were soon after dispatched from our vessels, which went on board, took out some provisions, and set her on fire. For three days after, we were employed in burying the dead, that washed on shore in the surf. The number of British, killed, exceeds 120, and 90 wounded. The enemy, to the surprise of mankind, lost only two killed, and seven wounded.—We may well say, "God deliver us from our enemies," if this is the way the Americans fight.—After burning the privateer, Van Lloyd made a demand of the governor to deliver up the Americans, as his prisoners—which the governor refused. He threatened to send 500 men on shore, and take them by force. The Americans immediately retired, with their arms, to an old Gothic convent; knocked away the adjoining drawbridge, and determined to defend themselves to the last. The Van, however, thought better than to send his men. x x x x x

With respect, I am, etc.,

Under H. K. F.'s account, the following note appears:

"The publisher has conversed with Captain Reid, who pronounces the foregoing account correct,—especially in many particulars which he, being engaged, could not have an opportunity of witnessing."

The following comment appears in "History of the American Privateers, and Letters-of-Marque, during Our War with England in the Years 1812, '13 and '14," by George Coggeshall (New York, 1856):

Famous Victories Cost Less

"Some of the most splendid victories the British have ever gained, were less dearly purchased. Sir Richard Strachan, with four ships of the line, and four frigates, fought a French fleet for several hours, on the 3d of November, 1805, and captured four ships of 74 and 80 guns, with a loss of only 135 killed and wounded—less according to his account than by the British attacks on the Armstrong, they lost in capturing a privateer, hemmed up in a port. A few such victories as this, would teach them better manners."

By Katherine M. Thoma, Dietitian, Michael Reese Hospital, Chicago. (From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Yesterday in our discussion we likened the tray for the sick room to a picture frame. We described the frame—and now for the picture—the food it shall contain. This depends on the patient's condition, on the doctor's orders, and on the patient's likes or dislikes. The family should follow out the diet recommended by the physician—particularly if it is restricted. Planning the food for the sick becomes simplified if we remember that the invalid's body has the same uses for food and the substances supplied in food as that of a normal healthy person. Individual modifications are always necessary to meet the particular conditions existing, but the food nutrients essential to an adequate normal diet must be included in the food for the convalescent. In many cases the man lying in bed needs as much food as the man mowing the lawn in front of the house. The man mowing the lawn is expending energy in muscular work; the convalescent patient lying apparently at complete rest is busy rebuilding body tissue.

The essentials of nutrients we remember from our school day physiology are proteins, fats, carbohydrates, minerals, vitamins, water and bulk. But how to translate all this to the invalid's tray? At first the patient may be very weak. He hasn't the strength to masticate his foods, so we begin with foods which require the least effort on his part, the liquid foods. One of the first foods we think of is milk, a natural liquid food that supplies practically all the food nutrients. To avoid monotony, some ingenuity must be used in the ways of serving milk. Serve it hot. Serve it cold, serve it sweet or as buttermilk. Add cream to enhance its food value. Freeze the milk and serve it as ice cream. Add the strained pulp of vegetables and serve it as soup. Add sugar and chocolate and serve it hot or cold. By adding an egg the protein, mineral, vitamins, are increased. Cook the egg and milk mixture and make a custard. Add cereal to hot milk and make a gruel, and so on. Orange juice or tomato juice will add color and variety. Liquid diet necessitates frequent feeding—probably like this—7 a. m., 9.30, 12.00, 2.30, 6.00 and 8.30, and perhaps at 10.00 or 11.00 if the patient is still awake. Alternate the milk mixtures with the beef juice or orange juice or tomato juice and serve whatever is served attractively.

With strength come some solid foods—crisp toast with soups; soft boiled eggs, vegetable purees, tender cuts of chicken, beef, lamb—potatoes, mashed, creamed, scalloped, all vegetables (except the strong flavored ones) chopped with butter or served with cream. Lettuce might be the first salad with later a sliced tomato. In desserts begin with a custard, ice cream, blanc mange, puddings with custard base, cooked fruits and raw fruits, etc. Soon the patient is getting as wide a range of foods as the family. Perhaps wider because the budget is often stretched to procure some dainty to tempt him.

As solid foods are supplied, the servings are increased and number of feedings decreased. The patient will be getting three regular meals a day with perhaps a fruit juice or milk drink in mid-morning and mid-afternoon. The rapidity with which the patient's diet is advanced from liquid to full diet depends entirely on his progress and should not be made without the consent of the attending physician. The size of servings should be based on the patient's appetite.

Above all, do not nag the patient about eating. If he has a poor appetite do not serve large servings—hide as many calories as you can in the food by adding extra cream and butter. Watch what he likes and enjoys. Let the tray be its own salesman.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

The Door Opens

Who quickest is in use of wit
To live doth prove himself most fit.
—Old Mother Nature.

Impy the black Chipmunk was the most puzzled Chipmunk that ever lived. Not only had Mrs. Impy disappeared, but a room in the house had disappeared. The disappearance of the room was much more of a mystery than the disappearance of Mrs. Impy. Mrs. Impy might simply be outside somewhere; but a room couldn't run away. No, sir, a room couldn't run away. That wasn't possible.

Impy was just about to go outside and look for Mrs. Impy when his keen ears caught a sound. Yes, some one was digging. There was no doubt about it. Suddenly he realized that the sound of that digging was coming from just about where that lost room used to be. What did it mean? What could it mean? Impy backed away and waited. He was all ready to run. Yes, siree, he was all ready to run! You see, he didn't know what it was all about.

Some sand came trickling down. A moment later a door had opened. Of course, that door was a door of sand and the sand had simply been dug away. A small head was thrust out of the doorway.

"Oh!" cried Impy. "Oh, Frisky, my dear, is that you?"

"Don't be silly! Of course it's me! Who else would it be?" replied Mrs. Impy. "Have you seen Shadow the Weasel?"

"Yes," replied Impy. "He left long ago."

"You're sure about that?" asked Mrs. Impy.

"If he hadn't gone, I wouldn't be here," replied Impy. "Of course I'm sure. I watched him out of sight. But tell me, my dear, how it is he didn't catch you?"

"What door?" asked Impy, who really was very much perplexed.

Little Mrs. Impy almost lost patience. "For goodness sake, Impy, what is the matter with you? You just saw me open the door, didn't you?"

"Yes," replied Impy.

"Well, of course, that is the door I shut in Shadow's face," she replied. "You see, I was lucky enough to see Shadow first. I was outside and saw Shadow following a trail with his nose, and I knew that he was going to find the entrance to our home. I knew that I wouldn't have a chance in the world outside and that I had but one chance inside. So I hurried down into this storeroom and packed the entrance full of earth. Sure enough Shadow came down here just as I thought he would. He came down, but he didn't get me."

"Oh, Frisky, my dear, is that you?"

"I'm so glad!" broke in Impy. "It would have broken my heart if he had caught you."

"Well, your heart won't have to be mended this time," declared little Mrs. Impy. "You see, he didn't even know there was this other storeroom. With the door shut, he couldn't even find the door, leave alone the room. So there I stayed until I was sure he had left. Now, let's get out of here and get busy."

"Get busy!" cried Impy. "Get busy doing what?"

"My goodness, Impy Chipmunk! I sometimes lose all patience with you," replied little Mrs. Impy. "We've got to close that outer doorway of ours and open another. Do you want Shadow the Weasel poking in on us while we are asleep? Now that he has found that doorway, he isn't likely to forget it."

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—When Senator, then representative, Harry Hawes of St. Louis decided to say a friendly word in the Congressional Record about dogs, he little realized what far-reaching personal results he was initiating.

He found out almost at once, to be sure, that a vast number of folks over the country felt about dogs just as he did.

The last time the Bystander heard the figures, somewhere around a million copies of that dog piece had been sent to people who asked for it.

Also, the popular success of that first plunge of the Missouri lawyer into literature not of a strictly legal or political character, let loose his writer complex which is still working to make him about as prolific a congressional author as there is.

Nature Lover

But that was about as far as Hawes ever expected all this to go. He was, quite definitely, turning to politics as a career when he first came to congress. He had sufficient private means, liked the game, had some things about conservation he wanted to get on the statute books and seemed firmly set in his political place, probably for the rest of his active life.

Yet now he is going to drop out when his term ends in 1933. He will become head of the most ambitious and best financed nature lover organization yet established. If it was not for danger of his senatorial seat going to a republican by governor's appointment, probably he would resign now to take up a work so close to his heart.

And it all goes back to that dog piece in the Record. It was Hawes' writing and the friendly, human way he talked in his various books about wild life and sport that brought him this great chance to round out his life directing a game conservation program.

Dwight Davis

Hawes' impending retirement might stir Governor General Dwight Davis out in the Philippines to evolution of senatorial ambitions of his own. He is a St. Louis republican of note, with private means, a fine war record, cabinet service as war secretary and an unrealized ambition for diplomatic service in Germany.

That is where he wanted to go when President Hoover came in. He inherited the Philippine post when Bill Donovan refused to accept it as a substitute for his desire to be Mr. Hoover's attorney general. And he is still mighty ambitious for public office is Colonel Davis.

When Hawes went to the senate, his highly experienced secretary, John Cochran, took over the house seat. He had served as secretary also for William Igoe who held it before Hawes. Cochran has been a figure in St. Louis politics for years. Maybe he will inherit also the Hawes seat in the senate. Who knows?

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

True Citizenship

We can consecrate ourselves to our country by setting an example of loyalty. The example of a thoroughly good citizen in any community is a mighty force for good. The man who will not descend to low and mean political shifts and tricks, who will dare to do the right, though foolish ignorant scheming men may counsel and attempt the wrong—such a man is his country's support and strength.

We can consecrate ourselves to our country by honoring our rulers. We do not have kings in our country, but we have presidents and we ought to help them in word and to uphold and honor our glorious country. If we feel that they are not the men for the office we have a perfect right to vote against them when the time comes.

There is need of consecration on the part of the Christian people in awakened interest in standing for the highest in our government. The Christian church has too long been an onlooker. Politics unmixed with religion soon becomes corrupt just as business without Christian ideals never reaches its best. The Christian who stands apart and deplores political methods and municipal corruption and then fails to attend the primaries or lets any trifling excuse keep him from the polls is unworthy the privileges of citizenship.

Consecration to our country is not for one day in the year, but for every-day not only in times of special menace, but amid the perils of greed for wealth, a disregard for God's day and God's laws, a general lowering of standards. No one is a good citizen whose interest in the welfare of the nation is buried beneath all sorts of purely personal and selfish interests and ambition.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

Rockbestos Products Corporation, New Haven.

The Rockbestos Products corporation manufactures all kinds of electrical wire and cable for use under severe conditions of service or where a fire hazard exists.

The basis of the insulation of these wires is asbestos, a substance that has been in the earth for millions of years yet has withstood the ravages of time, fire, heat, oils, moisture, chemicals and other elements of nature. Because it is practically unaffected by these various conditions, wires and cables insulated with it stand up and give continuous service when installed where conditions of service and severe.

In 1918 the company was a division of the Marlin-Rockwell corporation and experimental work was being carried on in the Whitney arsenal property at the foot of Lake Whitney, New Haven.

Experimental work showed such promise that in 1920 the Rockbestos Products corporation was formed as a separate division of the Marlin Rockwell corporation. Equipment was moved to a new building on Canner street, the present location. In 1923 the company was purchased by the present owners and the growth has been steady.

The products of the company are used throughout industry, in mines, on railroads, in central electric generating stations, in industrial plants and on electrical appliances.

The company is a most important factor in the manufacture of heater cord used on toasters, irons, and percolators, etc.

The present officers of the company are:

Arthur G. Newton, president; J. F. McClelland, vice president; Carl B. Ely, vice president; W. C. Armstrong, Jr. secretary and treasurer; B. H. Reeves, general manager.

NORWICH GRANGE FAIR OPENS WITH VARIED LINE OF INTERESTING EXHIBITS

Norwich grange, No. 172, Patrons of Husbandry, opened its first annual fair Friday at Grange hall on West Town street, using the hall and a fine large level lot in the rear for the display of exhibits, which were of great variety and arranged in such form as to make a very effective display.

The fair is to run through today (Saturday) and will be an attraction that will ensure a good crowd at the grounds, especially through the afternoon and in the evening when strings of electric lights furnish the illumination.

Tents were set up in the open lot where vegetable, fruit, and flowers were on exhibition, and other displays shown here were the poultry and pet stock, as well as a tent of the Connecticut state department of health, where a staff from state headquarters was on hand to give health information, and especially to weigh and measure all children and give advice as to shortage in weight and overweight.

Midway Attractions

For the general entertainment there is a midway that includes a merry-go-round, flying airships, ponies from Circle B ranch for the children to ride, ring the cane and a number of other entertainment features.

Grange Hall Exhibits

In Grange hall were located the following exhibits: Bees and honey, flowers, home cooking, canned goods, fancy work, antiques and miscellaneous exhibits. These were on the main floor of the building and all were specially arranged in groups.

Various qualities, colors and body of the honey were shown. In all there were over 1,000 pounds of honey on display. One of the features Friday afternoon was a novel stunt performed by Attorney Telley E. Babcock, local bee man. Attorney Babcock's hobby is bees and he displayed one of his numerous tricks with them. This trick was the releasing of an entire hive of bees, about 50,000, allowing them to swarm about out in the open and all about him. MENTION JUDGE WALLER AS FEDERAL JUDGE PROSPECT

Judge Charles B. Waller of the New London county court of common pleas was on Friday injected as a possible candidate for appointment as United States district court judge to succeed Judge Warren B. Burrows of Groton, who is soon to retire to devote his time to campaigning for election as attorney general of the state for which post he was nominated at the recent republican state convention. It is expected that Judge Burrows will tender his resignation to President Hoover in time to have it accepted by Oct. 1.

Judge Daniel M. Cronin of New London has also been mentioned in connection with the federal judgeship soon to be vacated, but he has made it known that he would not, under any circumstances, accept the appointment. Judge Waller's name, so far as can be learned, has been proposed by republican leaders in Hartford county and throughout eastern Connecticut.

Judge Waller is a son of the late Thomas M. Waller, who was the last New London county man to serve as governor of Connecticut. The elder Waller was a democrat but Judge Waller has been a lifelong republican and represented that party in the general assembly some years ago. He is one of the state's best known jurists and has served on the common pleas court bench for many years.

Others who are being mentioned in connection with the appointment to succeed Judge Burrows, are Judge Samuel Shaw of the Fairfield county court of common pleas; United States District Atty. John Buckley of Union; Assistant United States District Atty. John A. Danaher, Meriden and Atty. Henry Hunt, Glastonbury.

MYSTIC ART ASSOCIATION WORKING FOR NEW GALLERY

The Mystic Art Association, Inc., is to construct a new art gallery at Mystic, and a financial campaign for the project is now under way. For six years, Mystic artists have held annual exhibitions in Broadway school there, and much support of residents of the vicinity has been given.

The old Rafferty property on the west bank of the Mystic river south of the bridge, comprising a tract of land 210 by 360 feet has been purchased as the site for the building. The property is bounded on the east by the river, on the south by the river plot of the Standard Machine Co., on the west by Water street, the Noank road, and on the north by the James Brown property. It is just south of the Boston Post road at Bank square.

The building, to harmonize with the village, will face both Water street and the river, and will have adequate well lighted space for exhibitions of all kinds. There will be ample parking space for cars, a private wharf for yachts and a paved tea terrace overlooking the river.

The erection of the museum will be further financed through a loan of $4,000 from a group of artists, this loan being made to further evidence the good faith of the members of the association in carrying out its purposes. There is $7,500 cash in the association's treasury and this will be applied to the purchase of land and preliminary improvement.

The probability is that low land to the north of the gallery site will be deeded to a permanent organization interested in the improvement of Mystic's water front, and that a bulkhead will be made and the area dredged and filled to make a public wharf.

The officers of the association are: President, G. Albert Thompson; vice-president, Herbert M. Stoops; secretary, Kenneth Bates; treasurer, Carl Lawless. They and Lester D. Boronda are the board of directors.

KELLY-HARTNETT COMBINATION KEEPS CUBS IN THE RACE

BOSTON, Sept. 19— (AP) —"Long George" Kelly and "Gabby" Hartnett, two baseballers who were figured to be all washed up a year ago, gave the Cubs a close 5 to 4 victory over Boston's tribesmen here today to keep the Chicagoans in the chase for the National league pennant. Hartnett's double in the ninth and Kelly's hot single following it pushed over the winning run for Joe McCarthy's outfit.

The Cubs gathered a four run lead in the first two innings. In the first Blair doubled, English tripled and then scored on Wilson's infield out. In the second the firm of Hartnett and Kelly produced singles, Lester Bell forced out Hartnett but Blair beat out an infield hit, English walked and Cuyler walked to bring in two more counters. The Braves scored in the third on Maguire's triple and Frankhouse's infield out and in the fourth Welsh was scored by Spohrer's double.

The Braves tied things up in the seventh when they chased Teachout to the dugout. Neun's single and the doubles of Maranville and Clark did the work. Blake took Teachout's place and held the Braves in hand until Kelly and Hartnett went to work in the final frame.

BALTIC AND VERSAILLES IN TITLE GAME SUNDAY

The Baltic Sacs baseball team have signed up Versailles to play at Sayles field, Baltic on Sunday. Manager Godaire has promised to bring up his regular team for this game. Both teams have won a game Versailles in Baltic and Baltic at Versailles. Some weeks ago Versailles came to Baltic but they only had a few players and the Sacs let them have all their subs as the crowd wanted to see a game. It was called "no-contest." This game will decide the championship of the town of Sprague. Manager Coullard will have Coady in the box, while Arthur Godaire will be in the box for Versailles. Red Passmore, who is expected to go to Witchita of the Western league next season, will play center field for the Sacs.

GULDAHL SHOOTS BRILLIANT 66 IN ST. LOUIS OPEN

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 19.—(AP)—Ralph Guldahl, an 18-year-old fee course professional from Dallas, stole the spotlight of a great par-breaking act in the first performance of the $10,000 open golf championship at Sunset Hill today.

The tall Texan circled the water-spliced course with a spectacular 66, six strokes under par, and one stroke lower than the totals turned in by two of the outstanding favorites of the show, Tommy Armour of Detroit and "Light Horse" Harry Cooper of Chicago, who finished second.

Guldahl, a dark horse in the typical national field of 216 golfers, bagged six birdies on his triumphant round and held his advantage by stroking even par on the rest of the holes. Long drives and beautiful approach shots were his forte. He sailed his wood shots off the tee repeatedly for 230 to 265 yards and then whacked his seconds to within easy one or two-putt distances.

Other low scores in today's 18-hole round, the first of the 72-hole medal grind, which ends with 36 holes Sunday, were:

Harold McSpaden, Kansas City, 70; Leo Diegel, Agua Caliente, Mexico, 70; Horton Smith, New York, 70; Frank Moore, Henderson, Ky., 71; Johnny Manion, St. Louis, 71; Burt Montressor, Chicago, 72; Neil White, Topeka, Kans., 72; Ed Stokes, Denver, 72; Leonard Casale, St. Louis, 72; Jack Wentzler, Memphis, 72; Wilbur Gilbert, Topeka, Kans., 72, and W. S. Medart, St. Louis, 72.

AGGIES OPEN SEASON AGAINST COAST GUARD BEARS TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Sept. 19—The Connecticut Aggie football squad went through its final practice of the week here this afternoon and is now ready to face the Coast Guard Bears here Saturday September 20, in a pre-season practice game. The Coast Guard team is made up of enlisted men and last year competed with the Army, Navy, and Marine teams of enlisted men for the President's cup. Earlier this fall the Bears defeated Rhode Island State college in a practice game to the tune of 19-0.

Connecticut's line-up in tomorrow's game will probably be as follows: le, Chubbuck; re, Hakanson; lt, Sternberg; rt, Rebman; lg, Yesukiewicz; rg, Malewaik; c, Moore; lrb, Pierce; rhb, Captain Murphy; fb, Harger; qb, McCombe.

Today's practice was light, the men playing without shoulder-pads. Coach Dole put his men through a session of receiving kick-offs, punting, passing, and a short signal drill.

John Calahan of Roxbury, Massachusetts, who played regular in the position of end three years ago, reported for his first practice of the season yesterday. There are now 41 players on the Aggie squad.

ROYAL WELCOME AWAITS ATHLETICS IN PHILLY

Mayor Harry A. Mackey announced tonight that arrangements for the reception were being made in his office.

Intense activity pervaded Shibe park today as preparations for the world series games went forward. A small army of workmen started erecting temporary stands to take care of additional crowds. Other workmen mounted the roofs of the houses on 20th street facing the park and started repairing seats left in place from last year's series, and erecting new ones. Small refreshments stands were hauled from storage in nearby homes and put in shape for business in front of the houses.

Residents along 20th street who have stands on their housetops were offering single seats today at $5.50, the same price as reserved seats in the grounds, but stated that as the demand increased the price would go up.

SEA SCOUTS TO HAVE LEAGUE BATTERY FOR SUNDAY

What promises to be one of the best games of the season will take place Sunday, when the Westerly Independents and the Sea Scouts meet on the White Rock diamond.

The Sea Scouts, owing to a ruling of the major league teams, were unable to secure the battery from the Boston Nationals, so they secured the best they could find, and this one comes from the Eastern league. They are Watermon, the sensational pitcher of this league, who is the property of the Philadelphia Athletics, and Karlon, the catcher of the Springfield team, who is the property of the New York Yankees and has made over 20 home runs this season. Playing third will be Dressen, who leads the Eastern league with a batting average of .343. On second base they will have Krauss of the J. B. Martin's, one of the strongest players around Norwich, Walter Dabrowski, center field, who played for three years on the same team. The rest of the team will be made up of Rod Rhodes, shortstop, Ray Rhodes, first base, Terranova, left field, and either Trebisacci or Azzanaro in right, these players being on the Sea Scouts roster.

JONES STEALS AWAY FOR SHORT GAME PRACTICE

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 19.—(AP)—Bobby Jones, wonder golfer, took his threatened "trolley ride" today—to New Jersey, where he practiced pitch shots and putts at the Pine Valley Golf club.

S. amateur championship battle beginning at Merion Monday, had been followed by a large gallery in his tuning up play at Merion, and slipped away to Pine Valley to escape the crowds. He was accompanied by his close friend and fellow Atlantan, Thomas B. Paine, and the British star, Dale Bourn.

THAT'S WHO HE WAS

He was a guardian of the law in a nearby town and he was mighty proud of it and his town was mighty proud of him. There was no better member of the constabulary than he. Not only did he take pride in his office but he was devoted to his home, his family and his pets. One of his especial favorities was a beautiful and affectionate cat. But this cat would persist in running out into the roadway in front of the house.

One day the cat ran into the street once too often. The young woman who was driving the car did all in her power to avoid hitting the animal but to no avail. The woman stopped her car just as the officer came out to recover what had once been his feline friend. It was almost second nature that the officer should make an investigation of the demise of the cat.

"What is your name, young lady?" he asked. The young woman told him.

"Let me see your license," he then ordered. He was shown the license. He scrutinized it for a minute. "Humm, it says this is for 1930. Why wasn't you driving a car in 1929?" he asked suddenly.

"Why, because I didn't have a car last year," answered the young woman.

About that time a young man who was in the car with the young woman leaned over and asked politely, "Who is this man that's doing all the questioning?" addressing his question to a man who was a neighbor of the officer. The neighbor shook his head and quietly said that he didn't know, he'd never seen him before.

"What, you don't know who I am?" barked out the officer, who was pretty well peeved because the neighbor had given him the go-by. "Well I'll show you who I am." And turning to his young son he said, "Go in the house and bring out my things."

The youngster did as his father bade him. Pretty soon out came the boy with his father's police hat, his night stick, his badge and his coat and passed them to his father.

With great ceremony the officer put on his cap. He adjusted his badge on his vest in just the right place and then picking up his club he patted himself on the badge, shook the club in the young man's face and shouted, "There, that's who I am."

"Oh, yes, so you are," meekly responded the man but there was a trace of suppressed laughter in his voice.

SHYMAS CLASH WITH H. N. S. TEAM TODAY

A game that will rival the Polish Citizens-New London Kaceys game Sunday will take place this afternoon at the Providence street grounds, Taftville, when two of the oldest rivals in this vicinity meet, namely, the Holy Name Society team of Jewett City and the Shyma club, representatives of Taftville. This game is bound to be a hummer for the same old rivalry that existed years back between the two villages has again broken out and both teams will have a large turnout to root for their respective village. The Holy Name boys come to the mill village full of confidence after having defeated Tony Bernard's Ideals in a game played last Sunday. The fans who saw this team perform against the Ideals know that they have one of the best amateur teams in this section of the state. They will be set to get revenge over the Shymas who have defeated them 3 games this season, while the Jewett City boys were winning one. They will take the field in the following order: Pizzo catch, Bernal, Wolkowski or Vachon will be on the mound, Perry will be at first, Bush second base, Solenski third base, with Kusek rounding out the infield, while the outfield will be taken care of by Slonski, A. Gilbert, Beaulieu or Liberty.

The Shymas, after losing their last two games have been practicing hard for this game and last night they declared that they were at the peak of condition and that the Jewett City boys were in for the surprise of their lives when they tackle the local boys this afternoon. The Shymas will again present their regular lineup which will include Burelle on the receiving end, with Sammy Raymond or Faucher doing the pitching, Wilke 1b, Bunk 2b, Tony Ulewicz 3b, N. Lemieux, ss, Pete Finn, the Raymond boy's, Benoit or Dudek outfield.

ASHLAND-H. N. S. SERIES STARTS ON SUNDAY

Sunday at Ashland Park the greatest attraction of the season will be staged when the H. N. S. meets the fast Ashland Accos. Plenty of rumors are going around the town on who is to draw first blood According to the exhibition the H. N. S. put up last Sunday when they defeated the Ideals it ought to prove to be a real baseball game.

Pizzo, the peppy catcher of the H. N. S., and Perry, the Babe Ruth first baseman are due to hit plenty. Mert Slonski and Jiggs Slonski are also doing their bit to pile up runs for the H. N. S.

Pete Sukela, manager of the Ashland Accos claims he will put the strongest team on the field this year. Buba, left fielder of the Accos who has been hitting real well, will no doubt give plenty of trouble to the H. N. S. Pete did not say who he was going to pitch but will either call on Derda or Deyong to perform in the box and Burno will catch. Vachon, who pitched masterful ball against the Ideals will toe the mound for the H. N. S. with Pizzo catching. This being the first game of the series it ought to be a real game. Coach Gilbert when seen Friday said that he felt sure that his team would cop the first game.

HICKS AND ORCUTT MEET IN CANADIAN GOLF FINALS

MONTREAL, Sept. 19.—(AP)—Helen Hicks of Hewlett, Long Island, and Maureen Orcutt of New York city, gained the final round of the Canadian women's open golf championship today.

Miss Hicks, the defending champion, shot the most phenomenal golf of her career to eliminate Ada MacKenzie, of Toronto, three times Canadian champion, in the semi-finals, 7 and 6. Miss Orcutt defeated the steady and consistent Detroit player, Mrs. Harlan Higbie, 5 and 3.

A crowd of 1,500 saw Miss Hicks shoot a sensational 35 on the first nine, one under men's par for the course of the Laval Sur-le-Lac club. The Hewlett youngster did not lose a hole on the first nine and turned seven up on her redoubtable opponent. She went eight up at the tenth and lost the 11th but halved the 12th to end the match.

When the fourth game of the inter-city series for the New London county championship is played Sunday afternoon at Mercer field, New London, between the Polish Citizens of Norwich and the Kaceys of New London it is expected that a crowd that will break all attendance records for a New London county baseball game will be broken. Interest in this series has risen to fever pitch and last Sunday the game was halted in the tenth inning by an excited crowd that swarmed onto the field when ar argument arose between Umpire Tellier and members of the New London team. Neither team had scored up to that time. Unable to clear the field Umpire Cranker through a misinterpretation of the rules forfeited the game to the New London team, which was the offender.

A conference was held between the managements of the two clubs, the New London team firmly maintaining that the game was theirs by right of decision of the umpire. It was not until the Citizens had walked out of the conference and made a claim to the county title that the New London team came around to see things in a clear light. The New London management then came to Norwich and agreed that the game should be called no contest and that the series should go on.

So on Sunday these teams clash again at Mercer field. This time the New London management agrees to have plenty of police protection and also to have neutral umpires, that is umpires that are residents of neither city. However there was some misunderstanding as to the umpires. Manager Bizinski of the Citizens was told to get two umpires and he secured Henry Devron and Jack Finnell of Providence to officiate. Upon informing Manager O'Connell of the Kaceys of what he had done the Kacey manager said that it was all wrong as he had secured two umpires from Hartford, denying that he had told Bizinski to hire the umpires. But it is certain that the game will be umpired by neutral arbitrators, either from Hartford or Providence.

Johnny Greene will be on the mound for the Citizens while it is reported that Tillie Daniels will do the hurling for the Kaceys. From all appearances it is certain that another close contest can be anticipated on Sunday. Daniels in the third game of the series held the Citizens to three hits and no runs but the locals are certain that he cannot do it again.

YANKEES TAKE WILD SLUGFEST FROM WHITE SOX

CHICAGO, Sept. 19—(AP)—Driving Ted Lyons from the mound with six runs in the first inning, the New York Yankees won a wild slugging game from the White Sox today 18 to 9. Chapman, Gehrig and Reynolds hit home runs and there were numerous other extra-base blows among the 21 collected by the Yanks and 13 by Chicago.

Braxton, who followed Lyons, was hit even harder but lasted until the eighth, when young Wilbur Wehde took his place. Roy Sherid made a great start, giving the Sox only three hits in the first six innings, but he weakened in the seventh and gave four runs, and finally retired in favor of Holloway in the ninth when Chicago scored five more times.

Gehrig's homer was his 40th of the season and was made off Wehde in the last inning.

CARDS BEAT PHILLIES TO LEAD PACK BY 2 1-2 GAMES

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 19—(AP)—Taking advantage of a day of idleness on the part of their rival Brooklyn Robins, the St. Louis Cardinals increased their lead over the field in the race for the National league pennant to 2 1-2 games by defeating the Phillies today, 7 to 3.

Trailing 3-2 at the start of the seventh inning, due to Chuck Klein's two home runs, the high-flying Red Birds put on a five run rally at the expense of Phil Collins, ace of the Philly hurling staff, and clinched the victory.

George Fisher, batting for Pitcher Jess Haines, pried open the rally with a scratch single. Collins hit Douthit with a pitched ball He nearly escaped trouble when Adams, attempting to sacrifice forced Fisher at third and Frisch flied out to Brickell. Collins, however, hit another batsman, Bottomley, to fill the bases and Chick Hafey put the Cards in the lead with a double. Pinkey Whitney, Philly third sacker, got his hand on the ball but it tore on through.

Watkins followed with a single off Thompson's shins, which scored Bottomley and Mancuso sent Hafey and Watkins across the plate with the fourth and fifth runs of the inning with a booming double to the center field wall.

Klein's two homers, his 37th and 38th of the season were responsible for all the runs made by the Phillies and caused a few anxious moments for the league leaders by starting Philadelphia off in the lead. The slugging right fielder hammered out his first four bagger in the first inning with Friberg on base. His second round trip was made in the fourth with the bases empty and gave the Phils a 3-1 lead.

The Cards got their first run in the fourth on Watkins triple and Mancuso's sacrifice fly and their second in the sixth when Bottomley and Watkins hit doubles.

The Cardnals played brilliantly in the field, turning in four effective double plays. Watkins led the sluggers, driving out two singles, a double and a triple, scored two runs and batted in two more.

GIANTS LAND ON KOLP AND RIXEY TO BLANK REDS

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—(AP)—The Giants walloped Ray Kolp and Eppa Rixey today while Bill Walker pitched a two-hit shutout and won the first game of their final series with the Cincinnati Reds, 7 to 0.

Walker had an easy time, allowing only a single by Swanson and a double by Cucinnello, while the Giants piled up ten blows, five of them coming in the fourth inning for as many runs. Six walks caused the only trouble for the Giant pitcher. He fanned three.

The victory gained no ground for the Giants as St. Louis and Chicago also were winning. They remained 5 1-2 games behind the league-leading Cards with only seven games to play.

"She says to me," chirped Mrs. Jones,
"That her and you fell out
Because your boy he threw some stones
And smashed their water spout.
She says to me your oldest lad
Was full of tricks and sly.
'I guess your kids is jest as bad,'
I says to her, says I.

"I jest can't see why folks speak ill,
Instead of speaking good.
If I talked mean of folks I seen,
I'd jest stay home, I would!
She needn't think I'm going to wink
And let them slurs go by.
'My friends is mine in rain or shine,'
I says to her, says I.

"I s'pose some folks is built that way
And keeps on thinking ill;
When I can't find no good to say,
You know that I keep still.
The only way to live each day
Is not to tell no lie.
And jest speak good or else saw wood,
I says to her, says I."

BETTER CORNER AND KEEP IT

Dear Social Corner Folks: At this time we find the earth leaving sign Virgo and entering sign Libia (The Balance) which ushers in our autumn season. All persons born between September 20th and October 20th come under the Libia vibration: that is if your birth place lies north of the Equator.

Libia is our air sign ruled by Venus which governs the loins back and kidneys of the human body and promotes wealth and fortune.

Sign Libia represents the tribe Reuben, meaning "perception and foresight." The colors are crimson, black and light blue. The gems are opals. Its profession is law, oratory, commercial organizer or military commander. The favorable time of year is August and December. Best day of week is Friday. Fortunate weeks are those beginning April 13th and December 6th. The flower is the violet. While looking through some old papers I found some Social Corner pages printed in 1916. And I think our page of 1930 is far superior, in interest and in every way, to those printed in 1916. I think it is wonderful to see the writers keep interest in the page and contribute for years and years. Am hoping the older members will favor us with their letters from time to time and we delight to read the letters from new members also. Let each and every member try to write once a month, at least, during the fall and winter months, so the page may flourish and be a blessing to many who read it. Please don't forget to report deaths of members. We like also to read of the good times enjoyed at the club meeting.

As we shall soon be compelled to say "farewell" to our gardens, we can tell of travels or how to make Christmas gifts or what books to read, not forgetting to send choice poems or amusing jokes and household helps. Just make a note on your calendar or engagement book and say: "This date for writing letter to the Social Corner page." Get the habit and letters will be a pleasure to write. Let's keep our club meetings "homey" and informal affairs where all may feel at ease and happy.

Just a hint or two: Fuller's earth mixed to a paste with some milk will remove ink stains from colored materials, without injury to fabric. Fuller's earth mixed to a thin paste with cold water will clean plaster statuettes. Apply with soft brush then wash off in warm soapy water and dry at once. Moisten cold or fever sores with spirits of niter and see them vanish.

For high blood pressure, make a tea of watermelon seeds and drink it several times during the day. For neuralgia make a tea of burdock seeds and take small cupful three times a day.

For weak limbs or back bathe in warm water drained from boiled potatoes. Scraped raw potatoes laid on the eyes will absorb and relieve inflammation. The juice of the root of garden rhubarb applied to the eyes has cured many.

For tired or aching feet bind on plantin leaves. For a pain in the side bind on a warmed cabbage leaf at night.

For a cold in the head apply camphor to nose and behind the ears; also take half teaspoon baking soda in half glass of water at intervals of four hours (every four hours) until cold is broken up.

Best wishes to all.

ALMOST LIKE A VACATION

Dear Editor and Social Corner Friends: How I wish it were possible to have you all with us this glorious day. It is more like summer than fall for the thermometer stands at 88 here on our screen porch.

All around us are beautiful hills; some of the foliage is already turning to its autumn tints and we can hear Little Suncook babbling over the stones. It truly seems more like a wonderful vacation to us than the place in which we are working.

Last Sunday afternoon the churches of Suncook valley united in a big outdoor service on one of the hills. Between 500 and 600 people attended and received inspiration for the many tasks set for us.

The fall meetings have begun again. I shall miss seeing you and talking with so many whom I have grown to love and respect. Several have passed through great sorrow since last we met and to you I extend my heartfelt sympathy, but through it all take courage and let the One who is a very present help in time of trouble ease the burden.

Our best wishes to you all.

MAWB.

SEEING THE WHITE MOUNTAINS

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: It is a long while since I have written you a letter and I hope my name has not been crossed out. It has been my hope for many years to visit northern New England and especially the White mountains, but have never had that privilege until this summer. In July, in company with my husband, we left Norwich going via Willimantic, Stafford Springs, to and through Springfield, Mass., Holyoke to Northampton, where we stopped for the night at Plymouth Inn. We visited the Smith college grounds, which are really beautiful, so magnificently situated in the lovely city not only laid out in artistic beauty, but kept so by systematic care making it so attractive. We also visited Ex-President Calvin Coolidge's new home, peculiarly situated at the end of a street, densely shaded by trees. The large and well appointed grounds afford to him and his family just the place for quiet meditation and rest, after a period in Washington, D. C. Leaving here and passing through historic Deerfield and Greenfield, Mass., we reached Brattleboro, Vt., where we stopped for dinner at the Brooks House, upon inquiry we were advised that dinner was served at 12.30 standard time, all of the states north of Massachusetts using standard time and all south including Massachusetts using daylight time. How long that hour seemed, but having stopped at this hotel before and having had special courtesy and favor shown, they were again equal to the situation and they furnished us with a card, which, when presented to the dining room chief, entitled us to service in advance of the regular time, which favor we appreciated. Then following the Connecticut valley through pretty Westminster and Windsor to Hartland where we were obliged to make a detour, which sent us through towns named Taftsville and Hartford, but they did not look as our Taftville and Hartford look, on through to White River Junction and still on to Hanover, N. H. Here at the home of Dartmouth college is the well-known "Hanover inn," owned and operated by Dartmouth college. We were informed that this hotel is to be removed within a year, so that another college building can be erected on this southerly side of the park, which is now banked on the other three sides by such college buildings as are necessary and are doing so much towards educating young men.

Leaving here passing over a rolling country high above the Connecticut river, a distance of about 65 miles, through Lyme, Bath, Lisbon and Littleton, you reach Bethlehem, N. H., a matchless village, 1470 feet elevation, the second highest village in New England, Dublin, N. H., being a very few feet higher. This lovely village is practically one straight street in which there are about 30 hotels, four churches, stores, etc. It has an all the year population of about 200 and a summer population of nearly 5,000. Bethlehem is a gem and because of its elevation, has pure air and always a breeze. No flies, no mosquitoes and pure water, which makes it an ideal place to locate and from there radiate out to the various places of scenic beauty. How often you hear one say they have been to the White mountains, when they have only gone to some point where they could see the blue outline of the mountains. Here at this place you get the New York papers as early as you get them in Norwich, they being brought to Whitefield by airplane and from there to Bethlehem, eight miles, by auto. To the southwest of Bethlehem, some 20 miles, is Lost river. This weird romantic, wild and intensely interesting peace is well worth an afternoon's visit. It consists of an underground passage of some half a mile and beneath where you are walking flows a small river, which at the end comes out into view. In the Franconia Notch are the Flume and the Old May of the Mountain, each of which is a rare specimen of the wonders of nature and worth going miles to see. The old Man of the Mountains can only be seen by getting in a certain range, as it is produced by a number of panels of rock projecting out in such form as to produce a face when in this range. The Flume is a remarkable freak of nature, extending for nearly half a mile, flanked on either side by high rocks which look as if they were carved out and between which is a large flow of water over a solid rock bed. At the upper end of this flume is a pretty falls. On this same ride is Echo lake, a beautiful sheet of water, surrounded by high mountains so that when one utters a loud voice it strikes one mountain, then another, then another, until there have been five echoes. My husband was able to produce three echoes. Another beautiful ride is to Sugor hill which is just outside of Franconia village, which is six miles south of Bethlehem from the Sunset House. About three fourths of the way up one of the very finest views of the whole country is obtained. Looking eastward you see Mount Lafayette, the highest of the Franconia range upon which is the reservoir which contains the water which supplies Bethlehem. I doubt if any view anywhere surpasses this, not only are the Franconia range in plain sight, but lower down in the valley the immense pine woods iterspersed now and then with a dwelling and a little fertile land. Off in the distance is Forest Hills hotel and away to the northeast is the Presidential range.

But to the east of Bethlehem are trips that equal or surpass those of the south. Six miles from Bethlehem are the famous Quin mountains and six miles further on is Fabian hotel, holding a commanding view and it is from here that the short train starts that takes you to the base of Mt. Washington where you board a train of peculiar construction which is pushed up and not pulled up Mt. Washington. Just beyond, at Bretton Woods is Mt Washington hotel, and it can be truly said that there is nothing finer in the hotel line in this whole country it contains not only a regular hotel but you can buy almost anything you want in its various stores. Its piazzas are 30 feet wide around three sides of the building. Passing on you come in about two miles to the famous Crawford house and nearby is a pool which is the head water of the Saco river. At this point you enter Crawford Notch, the only eastward outlet to the outside world. You soon come to Silver Cascade which is a beautiful sheet of water, coming down in various shapes at least 500 feet from the mountain side, then passing through the notch several miles you reach the old Willey house, the scene of a great landslide. A peculiar experience comes to some auroists in driving up Crawford Notch or Lost river. What is known as air pockets are experienced. All at once when the wind is just right, your car refuses to go just as you would expect when your tank was empty of gas. Sometimes it is necessary to get out and all hands push the car either forward or back, which ever is the easiest and get a new start and rush through this spot, but the first experience of this situation is quite enough. But there remains another trip to the north of Bethlehem that one should take in order to appreciate this country, going from Bethlehem to Qwin mountains, thence northerly over Cherry mountain through the meadows past Waumbek hotel, which excels in landscape gardening and flowers, through Jefferson, Gorhany and Berlin, a city of about 12,000. Here you will see more wood piled up than you probably ever saw in your life at one time and not only that, but the Androscoggin river is filled with wood for miles. This wood is cut in the winter away back on the mountains and floated down in the summer, from which in the pulp mills of Berlin, paper in large quantities is made. Then going on through Milan, eleven miles woods, and Erroe, you come to the opening of Dixville Notch and as you pass through and out of it, you see as pretty a sight as you ever saw. Lake Glorietta is nestled down before you like a gem that it is. Here you will find The Balsoms, a hotel of unique appointment, a golf course and club house and its hard to find its equal anywhere. From here, going west, ten miles, you come to Colebrook right on the Connecticut river which at this point does not resemble the beautiful Connecticut as it flows through Massachusetts and Connecticut. Thence southerly following the Connecticut we passed through North Stratford, Groveton, Lancaster and Whitefield and again reached Bethlehem. This last trip covers about 150 miles. You must not expect to see this White mountain country in a week or less. See it thoroughly as you go and repeat your trip next year and the year after until you have seen it all, for it is well worth your trouble and expense, but no one should leave Bethlehem without going up Mt. Agassiz, which can be walked or you can ride up in an auto. The elevation is about 2500 feet, but from here is a wonderful sight. In a clear day you can see about 90 miles, in a cloudy day, when the clouds hang low, you feel them strike your face, but what an experience to be above the clouds where all is sunshine and beneath you all clouds. We left Bethlehem via Franconia Notch and arrived in Plymouth, where we stopped for dinner at the Pemigewasset hotel and then in the afternoon passing by New Found lake, Bristol and Franklin. We spent the night at the Ben-Mere hotel at Sunapee lake, N. H., the next day going via Claremont, a thriving town of 14,000 people, Newport, N. H., on to Northfield, stopping at the Northfield hotel, the place made famous by Rev. Dwight L. Moody and now continued by his son, W. R. Moody, an intensely interesting place, because of its religious atmosphere and its scenic beauty. It is a place of great value because of its fine schools both for young men and young ladies, the school for young men being at Mt. Hermon some four miles distant and together they give not only education, but a great moral and religious uplift to about 1100 pupils, many of whom could not get an education otherwise. Passing on through Greenfield, Mass., we started our trip over the Mohawk trail, a distance of 24 miles. No one could say but what at two or three points the scenic beauty was rich, but after seeing the wonderful sights at so many places in the White mountain section even the hair pin curve failed to impress to a great degree. Passing on to Williamstown, Mass., we passed the night at Williams inn. Here is a town of unusual beauty and adorned with a college of exceptional quality. With its many buildings of splendid architecture and well kept grounds, they present to a student a great inducement. Thence passing through the whole Berkshire section including Pittsfield, Lenox, Stockbridge, we stopped for lunch at Great Barrington another one of those fine Massachusetts towns and thence on through Canaan, Winsted over Avon mountain to and through Hartford, via Colchester to our home city, and after seeing all of the above named handsome sights, what was there more beautiful than our own beautiful city of Norwich.

Where can you match Williams park? Down Broadway where the residences are so free from fences and walls representing cordiality, friendship and neighborliness, whether real or not, and you will have to travel many a mile to beat Norwich as a home city, whether you realize it or not. We covered this trip of about 1,000 miles free from any disturbing element and richly enjoyed the trip. Excellent roads everywhere.

Hello everybody of the Social Corner.

LIKES CURIOS BEST

Dear Social Corner:

Home again, Home again
From a foreign shore.
But O, it fills my heart with grief
To go to work once more.

The above is true. I was glad to see a full Corner and I enjoyed every letter. Some time ago a letter from Eveline Burr asked about antiques. No one has answered. I have quite a number but I like my curios (as I call them) best.

I have a paper ticket of the presidential election of Lincoln and Johnson with spread eagle and flag with "union ticket" over the top and names John Walt, John Eton, James Batterson, Samuel Hubbard, Sabin Sayles and Frederick Benjamin. It was printed at Stafford. The ticket is very nice and white. I have it in a small frame to keep it clean. Then there is a pint bottle, with clasped hands, 13 stars, the word "union" and eagle on opposite sides. A person told me it was worth $15 but he wasn't buying. A wooden spitoon, square with slanting sides, that is perfectly waterproof, is painted blue. This was my grandfather's and is over 100 years old.

When we were in Norway we saw many like it at the places in the mountains where we had lunch or dinner.

A hurricane light has a candle and glass chimney that seems impossible to break, as we have dropped it and it's not even nicked Also have silhouettes. It's a study to see the different expressions with just black and white to make them. A tuneing fork was made and used by Prof. Whittlesy of the first normal school of music in the United States at Salem, Conn. His daughter, Mrs. Maginis, gave it to me when I aspired to play the violin. It's a short piece of wood with wire strings. She told us her father always used it to tune his pianos.

A book, New England Memorial, has a special reference to the first colony called New Plimouth. It was first printed in 1669, reprinted in 1855 and is very interesting. I have 18 old trays, big pewter platter and an attic and I like to go up there and look at things I had forgotten I had. Would like to read "Next to Nothing House," and will try to get it.

Well, Wheeler had a picnic, and I was not there. Did not even know about it until it was too late. If I had, I think I would have walked all the way rather than not go. It makes me sad every time I think of a picnic at Wheeler's and I not there. I'd love to have gone with Tish even if I got my feet wet but I don't like to get bumps.

Sister Ivy: I like hard work and wish I could see your rugs. I am trying some Swedish weaving. It's like drawn work, not so much work as crochet and very effective. I read of some one who made a quilt of over 20,000 pieces, not one larger than a postage stamp. I don't see how it would repay one for the work, or even be pretty as it must be mostly seams, but I have not seen it. I like things that show a lot for the time spent.

Ravena: Your letter was very nice. I visited the inn at Sudbury and we had a fine dinner there. Reading your letter was like seeing it all over again.

Sumac: Who is Zulleka? I like to write to everybody who is sick.

GREETINGS FORM LEGION

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: Just a word of cheer. I haven't been able to walk for five months, but I still enjoy reading Corner letters. Best wishes to all.

LEGION. (Club 4.)

THE STORY OF TODAY

Dear Social Corner Editor and Readers: It is springtime. After an absence of many years from the old farm and neighborhood, the farmer's boy stepped off of a train in a nearby city. He had gone but a short distance when he saw someone who in some way looked familiar to him. Getting a second look he says: "Why, as I live, it is Tom, my old farmer boy friend and schoolmate! How has the world used you? I hope prosperity has been a constant companion; you look as if thrift had placed its seal upon you, for I see pictured in your face health and happiness."

Holding hands, inquiring after each other's families, it was agreed that the farmer's boy should be the guest of his old-time friend during his several months' stay, while he visits the pleasure spots of his young manhood days.

Age had come on apace, but the doings of the farmer's boy in his younger life on the farm and in the neighborhood surroundings was pictured in his mind the same as he saw them when he bid goodby to father, mother and his neighbor friends.

He knew that father and mother and his older friends had passed into spirit land, but there was no doubt but what some of their children or their grandchildren were occupants and tillers of the old farms that were the pride of their fathers and that the conditions were kept up the same as he knew them—the well-kept-in-repair buildings, the surrounding grounds, with the beautiful old fashioned flower gardens, the pride of mothers, and admired by all passers-by. To the humming birds and bees they were a lovely spot. The well-tilled and productive farm, the bountiful crops beckoning for the harvester; the cattle and sheep on the hundred hills; the walls and fences in perfect line and repair, with no growth of bush or bramble to mar the beauty of the well-tilled fields that they enclosed.

The barns and grainaries filled with hay and grain, garnered from meadow and upland, the pen of five or six fat shoats and a fat steer or two for the market man, and to fill the home meat barrels; hams, bacon, sausage, and lockers of beef that are tempting to taste and smell. The old maple tree by the gate; bearing for its fruit, 50 or more turkeys that are a source of revenue for the farmer at marketing; geese, ducks and chickens scattered over the nearby grounds. The farmer's boy saw all of these gems pictured in a vision as he slept the night of his arrival at the home of his old-time friends.

Did he see this picture as he made his rounds through the neighborhood and town; and was it the same as when he, with his father, so proudly and interestingly visited in 1858? We will see!

The auto is at the door; the chauffeur sounds the horn, and away they go. "The farmers must be plowing by now, for it is the last of April. It will seem good to me to catch a smell of fresh turned ground. Some must be sowing their oats and rushing along the spring work. Father often sowed oats by the middle of April," said the farmer's boy.

"I don't think you will find them rushing along their spring work; they are not like our fathers; haven't got the hustle to them," says Tom.

They pass by where once stood several houses, but trees and bushes are growing where they once stood.

"Was there once a village here? There must have been a mill of some kind here, too, for there is a dam and the old flume. There is something about here that looks familiar. Was this Ford Ned?" Tom asked.

"Yes," says Tom, "it was a prosperous little village where lived several families of mill operatives; happy and industrious people, but the firey hand visited it, the mill was burned down and it soon became a deserted village; the houses soon became targets for vandals, pillage and decay."

"Why, what a terrible road! Yes, this is in the town of Canterbury. Can you drive the car over those boulders and shun those deep ruts and bushes that overhang the road? What a hill, steep and rough. Ah, this house that now comes in view is an old familiar landmark; built 130 years ago; it is well preserved."

The farm was once a nice farm, well tilled and productive. There isn't much farming done here now. A great part of the meadows and upland have grown up to wood and bushes.

The farmer's boy looks this way and that. He says: "O, no, the old home isn't what it used to be, the change makes me sad and forlorn." He wipes tear drops from his eyes and with a choked voice says: "We must drive on."

Through the months of his stay, the farmer's boy made tours alone through the farming sections that were the homes of prosperous and thrifty farmers when he was the farmer's boy. He found a few that were real farmers, prosperous, happy and industrious. As he alone takes his strolls, he often stops to rest, quench his thirst, and ask questions. Among one of the remnants of the old original American families and owners. They were the fourth generation of a well known violin player. Everybody knew him as "Uncle Zeph." The farmer's boy can see him now as he sat in the side door after a hard day's work, tuning his fiddle; then with a few draws of the bow strike off with one of his favorites: "Boneparte Crossing the Rhine," followed by others of like melody and rhythm. Many, where he called and asked questions, shrugged their shoulders and said: "Me no understand."

Deserted homes where the buildings had fallen into decay; wooded growth covered the once productive fields and the now tumbled down walls and fences. A tinkle of a bell is heard; peering through a brush tangle he sees a lone cow fighting flies and browsing on limber twigs, in the absence of grass. She is the only head of stock that this once productive farm cap support, which in 1858 boasted of a herd of nearly a score. Her only companions that we now see are a startled rabbit and a woodchuck.

Did the farmer's boy see the shelvess in the dairy room filled with cheese of generous proportions, or balls of golden butter ready for the market or well filled barrels of beef and pork side by side in the cellar or the tasty smelling hams, shoulders and bacon in the smoke house? Did his mouth water for a taste of that good cider apple sauce that stood near the foot of the cellar stairs?

Yes he did in his dream, but not in the houses where he called.

No sheep were seen with their lambkins gamboling by their sides. The farmer's boy journeys along; he stops to rest. Seated on a stone by the river bank, he makes a survey of the surroundings; he sees a familiar mark; and right out loud he says: "Why the fun I have had in this very pool, washing sheep, before the June shearing." The boy of today cannot imagine what fun there is in washing sheep.

As he passed the season of seed time and harvest, he saw few fields of the various grains that filled the barns and grainaries of the farmers in 1858.

He meets a team loaded down with grain to be delivered to the several small farmers, who now possess many acres of non-productive land, that was once prized for the bounty it returned to the diligent American farmer who never helped to fat the pocket book of either the elevator owner of the railroad company.

Occasionally he sees a small field of rye; he looks in vain for the many acres of ripe grain that once covered the hillsides and plains in the valley of the Quinebaug, beckoning for the thrust of the sickle in the hands of the jolly reapers, who at dinner feast on the old highly-fatted rooster, saved to be slaughtered for the occasion.

The busy bee flies homeward ladened with sweets; not from the blossoming acres of buckwheat, but from the wild flowers that overrun the once cultivated plain.

Neither does he fly to the old box like hive that stood on the sunny side of the garden wall, but to a more aristocratic home, painted white, near the apiary of a bee fancier. To supply the busy workers, the owner of the numerous colonies has planted a great variety of choice and sweet flowers to take the place of the buckwheat, once the source of supply of honey.

Apple orchards where the farmer's boy once gathered the luscious golden sweeting, jilly flower, baldwin and early harvest are now scraggy, untrimmed and smothered in a growth of alder, birch and maple. No good times butchering today for the boys. No strife to see who will get the first pig's bladder to roll on a board and then blow it up and roll it again to increase the size as he again blows it almost to busting point.

Occasionally the farmer's boy sees one lone pig occupying the pen where once was seen five or six, of large size, being fatted on the grain grown on the arm.

The farmer's boy didn't see the 50 or more turkeys as of yesterday. Not because the old maple tree, the roosting place had fallen before the icy blast of winter, but because the farmers' and city epicures' Thanksgiving native Connecticut frozen bird is a native of the pampas of Texas, or the stock yards of Kansas City. The far away refrigerator has transformed the proud gobbler into a frozen and doubled up mass of flesh that must be simmered for several hours in water; then submitted to osteopathic treatment, pulled, starched and squeezed until he becomes a milk fed (on broom corn seed) native turkey of Connecticut, or of the hill side farms of Vermont, with all his appendages, head, neck, heels, etc.

The farmer's boy has made his rounds. For months he has traveled the old familiar roads and fields. In the silence of his room, after his return (it being his last day's sojourn) he asks this question: "Why do many of the farmers leave their farming tools scattered here and there? Mowing machines, horse rakes and plows, sheltered from the winter's blast and storms under trees in the field where last used? I saw such neglect. Why the untidy and neglected farms, tumbled down buildings, small fields of growing crops, scant harvests, scarcity of cattle and sheep. No more we see the lowing herds wind slowly o'er the lea."

The answer is this:

The rude forefathers of the hamlet sleep in yonder church yard. The sons left home at their majority to learn some trade; to enter some business: to study for some profession. Others went down before the legions of Lee, on the battlefields of the south. The grandchildren met death in an infantry charge up San Juan hill and the bloody field of El Caney. Others, overseas, on the machine gun swept field in the Argonne. They sleep today in Flanders field where the poppies grow.

QUID NUNC

PILLOW OF MILKWEED DOWN

Social Corner Friends: Weeks ago I started a letter for the Corner but it was never finished so will try again.

If we could only have some rain what a blessing it would be. The garden is like an ash heap scattered over with ripe and green tomatoes, melons, big ripe cucumbers and pumpkins. It has been a wonderful growing season.

The apple trees are loaded and breaking down. I never saw so much fruit on this place before. Half of one plum tree broke down, another tree had to have a large limb taken off, but we saved it until the plums ripened. We sold over five bushels and gave away lots to the children. Pernickety isn't the only one who has flower garden problems. My little garden is a sight, it's so dry and yet there is quite a variety of colors. If it wasn't for the petunias it would look barren enough.

Canterbury Bell: The dusty miller you gave is growing fine.

E. L. M.: Don't forget you are going to hunt me up some day.

Nema: Thought I would find you at camp meeting but failed to do so. A friend and I were there for the afternoon.

If any one would like to make a pillow of milk-weed down, now is the time to gather the pods before they begin to burst open. I made one last year and if I can spare the time am going to make one this year. I gathered a peach basket full of pods and one night after supper I made the pillow. It wasn't very large, about 12x18 inches, but I had a lot of comfort with it. I took it to bed every night. It seems to fit in when your back is tired and the bed seems hard. Make the bag of any firm light material. Leave an opening of about six inches, put the pods in a pan or tray on your lap; hold the pod in your left hand and remove the roll of down very carefully with your right hand. With one move of my left hand I remove most of the brown seeds, which fall into the pan and slip the down into the bag, being careful not to let the down fly. You don't bother to remove the little core as that shrivels up and a few seeds won't do any harm either. When the bag is a little more than half full pin or sew it shut and hang over the store, where the down fluffs out and fills the bag. Make a cover of any pretty material.

I have been to two picnics this summer, to Canterbury Bell's and Alfara's. A good time was given at each home and enjoyed.

Peaches are very plentiful and cheap. I got two baskets for a dollar so will have them to can and will make some marmalade. I have a fine recipe for marmalade that can be made any time during the winter. Will send it later. Best wishes to all.

WILTWYCK.

John and William Cooper, of the village of Haxey, claim the distinction of being the oldest twins in England and are still at work on their farm at the age of ninety.

KEEPING THE FLOWERS BLOOMING.

Dear Social Corner Members: Sister Rhody says I must have a magical garden; first the dry weather, chickens and animals ruin it, then I throw things over the wall and then I am picking lovely bouquets. Inconsistent, yes? But she walked through it this afternoon and I think that she will admit that the garden as a whole is a wreck but that there are a few flowers here and there which can be used for bouquets. What is more, it doesn't take much more than a handful of carrot tops and a bloon or two to make a lovely bouquet.

It has puzzled me to think of a white flower to use in bouquets at this time of year. Now the boltonia is in bloom it works in very nicely with the other flowers, but what is good to use just before it blooms? Phlox is good but it takes up such a lot of room for just a few sprays of bloom. I wish you could suggest something. Of course we always have alyssum but that doesn't look well with all flowers and it isn't tall enough to put with the taller growing things.

The lantana plants are huge but they have bloomed very little this year. I think perhaps the soil was too rich. They certainly are much too large to take up and bring into the house as I saw suggested in an article not long ago. And the heliotrope is too big too. That hasn't bloomed very well—I am going to take some slips and see if we can get some of them to grow. Heliotropes are temperamental — sometimes the slips grow readily and at other times they just refuse to send out roots.

Maude took geranium and other slips some time ago and the other day we brought the plants into the house for fear they might be frosted. Most all of them seem to be growing and the three south windows in the dining room are filled with them.

The five wild asters I took up just didn't live so I have been discouraged about getting any more. Perhaps if we had had a rain or two they might have lived but the garden is as dry as ever again and no sign of any showers. I don't think they are as pretty this year along the roadsides but the goldenrod is gayer than ever.

Bouncing Bet broke her chain the other day and she came clear up up from the brook to my garden although she had never been in it before and Commander followed her right up. They were eating pinks when I found them and they didn't stay in long, I can tell you. I think that if I were a calf I'd prefer to eat grass down in the swamp rather than brittle, hard stemmed pinks in the dust.

Have you been to any fair this year? What were the flower exhibits? Sister Rhody and I like to see them and maybe we'll tell you about what we see when we go. Turn about you know.

PERNICKETY.

STOPPING A LEAK.

Dear Social Cornerites: There have been many nice letters in the Social Corner and I have read them with much interest so now I will take my turn as I believe all members should write once a year at least.

Some of the sisters have had some fine trips which I have enjoyed through their descriptions. I have only been on one long trip this year. That was to Barkhampstead in June when the D. A. R. of the state met there to dedicate a tablet on their part of the forest. We all carried a lunch and ate it under the trees. I had never been in that part of Connecticut before. The scenery is a little more rugged than in this part of the state. Last Sunday I went to Mystic to spend the day. And I enjoyed every minute of the ride over and back. I wondered if the sisters had seen anything any prettier on their distant travels than I saw in the short nine miles. All the way at nearly every house there were bright flowers in bloom and in the short stretches through the woods the ferns and shrubbery and wild flowers were growing in wild profusion. Nature had n't left any bare spots. Coming home in the late afternoon there was a soft purple haze in the air and at the top of a high hill the scene was beautiful, water on one side and long ranges of hills in the distance.

Well, to be practical. I know many of the sisters have the water brought into their homes from cisterns and wells, by lead pipe to a pump. That is the way it was at my old home. So I thought I would tell them how they could save a plumber's bill if a small leak came in the pipe. Such a leak came in the pipe that carries water to a pump upstairs. My father said he was going to stop it up with putty until he could get it fixed, so he put some putty over the place and wound a cloth tightly around it and it stopped the leak so well he didn't have anything done to it. That was in 1915 and it was still on when I came away in 1926. After he died I stopped a small leak in a pipe under the sink the same way and that worked just as well. They were both out of sight so the cloth didn't show wrapped around the pipe. They say a penny saved is a penny earned, so if you have any small leaks try this and you will save more than a penny.

I was greatly interested in the potato experiment. I once planted cucumbers in a tub with great expectations of a prolific and large sized crop, but my hopes were dashed. I didn't get any from the vines which were sickly and finally died.

Best wishes to all,

ZERO RESPONDS.

Dear Editor Social Corner: I was surprised to have a member inquire for me. Had no idea any one would consider my letters interesting. Thank you, dear lady. Will write this time about an item I have before me. Foster Harris tells us about oil test wells, sinking their drills deep into the earth, have disclosed many curious and interesting things. A test well drilling near Broadwater, Nebraska, at the depth of 542 feet, suddenly struck a tremendous flow of under-ground water which came rushing up to the surface, carrying with it a tarnished metal plate. On one side was inscribed "Our Darling" and on the other side "1012." From its appearance, some people thought it came from a tombstone. But where did it come from and how did it reach such a great depth is the problem for us to ponder.

Aries: Here is a limerick for your collection:

"There was a young man in a flivver,
Who started one evening to shiver,
But this blew up the motor
And where he did go-ter.
No person could even discover.

(Truly there are some things worse than war.)

I'd like to ask—When a razor-back hog rubs himself against a fence post, is he stropping himself?

When a man typist marries a girl typist, would you say something about two hearts that space as one?

Why is it that most tom cats sing soprano?

Was it the designers of evening gowns who invented Thrift week?

What happened to the husband who told his wife that both of her chins were pretty?

When are they going to put a luxury tax on our memory?

What is more unusual than a wedding at which the mother of the bride and the mother of the groom are close friends?

When a woman wants to regain her sense of proportion, why doesn she diet?

Why can't we heat the house with the language pa applies to the furnace?

Summer never lasts long enough for a man to become truly efficient with one of those folding lawn chairs.

The advantage of a hurdy-gurdy over a piano is that it keeps moving.

A LITTLE STORY OF THE PAST.

Dear Editor and Corner Sisters: It will soon be the 25th of September. That was the date when my parents began to keep evenings. Before that, after April, we all went to bed as soon as it was dark, or a little before, but we were up early in the morning. Well the 20th of September the folks began to dry apples. Father had a paring machine and he always pared a bushel. Mother quartered them and sister and I strung them on a double string and they were tied on to a frame with nails on each side and put out in the sun to dry. They had two frames, so dried two bushels a week til the wind-falls were used up. Then they were packed away and sold to the grocer for family necessaries or to the tin peddler if there were any left after spring.

I have read with much interest of the trips the sisters have taken, and Ravena while you were at the Wayside Inn did you experience a feeling of gratitude to Mr. Ford for inventing and manufacturing the automobile? For without it people could not have the rides and see the country as they do.

I have also been interested in the sisters' flower gardens, though I never had one. When I was in the high school I wrote an essay and called my class a flower garden and named them all a flower. One classmate who had just learned and recited Patrick Henry's speech wrote in my autograph album soon after, "Give me geraniums or give me death." I had called him a geranium.

I met Twice Twenty on the street Wednesday. She said Zany was some lame still.

Ann Tenna is still quite ill so I hear. I don't know whether they have hopes of her recovery or not.

Pisces has come to Danielson to live with some of her people. I called to see her a little while ago, but found no one at home (Main street, corner of Stearns). I spent one afternoon last week with 1926.

Yes, Foxglove, we have much to be thankful for if we are fairly well.

CAPRICORN (Club 4)

THE FIRST SCHOOL DAYS

Dear Sisters of The Social Corner: As the wheels of time roll onward each day, and we are busy with duties of the present, yet as the seasons come, we are reminded of certain things in our past lives that cannot be erased from our memory. Just now, in this beautiful month of September, as the schools are opened for another year of work and study, we look back to that first day when we crossed the threshold and into a school room where we were to begin the elementary grade of our education. Those first impressions that filled our mind, of the teacher, the strange faces of boys and girls, and wondering what we would be required to do, and really what was the meaning of school anyway! Yes, we look back now, as we see little tots starting these days their little journey on the pathway of their early education. How well we realize, they will have their lessons to learn, the same as we did; they will have their little troubles, their feelings are going to be hurt, but aside from all that, there are many happy days in school life. I believe there is nothing greater we cherish in the ties of friendship than when we refer to those as our first school mates, and who still remain as close friends. We find it a pleasure to think of the little songs we learned to sing, the poems of only a few lines that we memorized, and the simple little stories we learned to read. We would not see then the true lesson or the point of the moral that was intended for us, but gradually, later on, it was revealed. How well I remember the first morning my oldest boy started for school. He was five years on Dec. 31st, and he began his school period the next day, which was a New Year's day. The teacher, who lived in the house with us, took him along with her, so it was not necessary for me to go. That picture will never fade from my mental vizon as I saw my little boy go out the door, through the gate and down the street. A lump came in my throat and moisture filled my eyes, as I watched him, and I realized in thought "it is his beginning." Thus the wheels of time are repeating. To us, who have seen our children receive a high school diploma, can realize a different thrill than that which occurred on their first entry of educational career.

I think parents should cooperate with teachers all that is possible; it means much to the pupils.

My sympathy to all ill and shut-in and best wishes to every one.

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Fifty years ago this week the Garfield Co., at Greeneville voted to be known as the Fire Zouaves. The same week James Farrell drilled the Boswellville company of Garfield Zouaves with 45 men in line. A bicycle school was opened by J. C. Thompson of New Haven in a factory near the corner of Franklin and Otis streets. Interesting extracts taken from the files of The Norwich Bulletin of September, 1880, are as follows:

The Rev. Storrs O. Seymour, of Litchfield, received a hearty welcome from his old parishioners at Trinity church, yesterday, where he officiated ably.

The seiners, for the novelty of the thing, swept the Shetucket river with their net Saturday evening. There was a good deal of a surprise party when it came to the shore with over 100 handsome fresh water perch in it.

There is to be a race at the Norwich trotting park for a purse of $200 next Saturday.

The Garfield and Arthur Artillery, of Greeneville, will meet this evening for drill. The company expects to be uniformed for the next parade.

Tuesday, Sept. 14, 1880—The builders have commenced the erection of the Broadway school house addition. The walls are expected to be up and covered in by November.

A Stonington dispatch says the steamer "Stonington" was attached at her dock yesterday in two suits for $5,000 each, for loss of life by the Steamer Narragansett. The suits are brought by Boston parties through the Hon. Augustus Brandagee of New London.

Larkin and Potter give another clambake at Watch Hill tomorrow and the steamer Ella will make an excursion to that point in order to accommodate the many who wish to attend.

The Shetucket river still continues to yield a harvest to the seiners. Yesterday a three pound shad, several striped bass, and a number of hundreds of pounds of fresh water perch were hauled by the fishermen.

John F. Byrnes of this city was married in Leadville, last week, to Grace Belmore, a serop-comic singer.

Wednesday, Sept. 15, 1880—The Pequot house at Block Island was burned at 2 a. m. Tuesday. The inmates barely saved their clothing. The house and everything in it was destroyed. It was owned by Lorenzo Mott; loss $3,000; insured for $1,000. The house accommodated between 50 and 75 guests.

WESTERLY

NEWPORT DRIVER IN COURT ON MANSLAUGHTER CHARGE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Sept. 19.—Short session was held Friday morning of the third district court when Judge Oliver H. Williams disposed of court matters as follows:

New writ entered before the calling of the docket— Julia Mann vs. Howard King. If unanswered, continued one week.

James A. Stone, of Newport, was charged with the operation of an automobile on the Boston Post road on Sept. 15th, recklessly so as to cause the death of Miss Bessie Goldsmith of 906 South 58th street, Philadelphia. Last Monday afternoon the automobile driven by Miss Emmie Pape, of Germantown, Pa., was proceeding up the post road to Westerly from Wakefield when a taxi, filled with sailors from the New London base on their way to Newport, R. I., were in collision with the result that Miss Goldsmith received injuries from which she died that night in the Westerly hospital. The defendant pleaded not guilty, saying that he was not represented by an attorney at this time. He asked for a two weeks' continuance which was granted by Judge Williams. Bond was made $2500.

Joseph Tavernesto, quarryman, of 46 Pierce street, was presented on a charge of violent assault upon his wife, Domenico, on Sept. 15th, whom he was alleged to have beaten, wounded and ill treated. He pleaded not guilty to the charge and the case was continued one week for trial. Bond was made $1,000.

Upon recommendation of Sergt. Ernest F. Stenhouse of the Hope Valley barracks of Rhode Island, the state police probation cases of Trooper Robert P. Butler vs. Tracy W. Kenyon, and Trooper Florence A. Harvey vs. George W. Thayer, were each continued 3 months, when they were reported as behaving very well.

Cranson Bros. Inc., vs. Reuben T. Holland. Continued one week.

Trial calendar—John O. Mills, Inc., vs. Angelo Pucci. Attorney John J. Dunn, for defendant, submitted to a decision for the plaintiff to recover on book account the sum of $409.47. Bookkeeper Katherine L. Keane of the Mills Co. took the witness stand and claim was proven.

Boston Lightning Rod company, Horace E. Litchfield, agent, vs. Westerly Ice company, Nathan Wein, manager, was an action in book account in which the plaintiff sought to recover for lightning rods placed on the buildings of the Westerly Ice Co., in the summer of 1928. The amount of the bill as testified to by Mr. Littlefield was $350 and interest charge dating from Jan. 1, 1929. He testified that in his 20 years with the company he had never told prospective purchasers how much the installation of lightning rods would deduct from insurance policies and had never stated there would be a 12 per cent saving.

For the respondent, Nathan Wein, one witness stand stated that while he was contemplating the placing of lightning rods upon the ice plant buildings he was told the saving would be 12 per cent and when his insurance policies were received it amounted to less than 6 per cent. His further testimony was to the effect that some of the storage barns had been taken down because of the upkeep expense.

Judge Williams gave decision for the plaintiff to recover the full amount of bill and interest, amounting to $363.75.

90 LEADING SHARES SHOW THE LARGEST BREAK IN STOCK MARKET SINCE AUG 12

NEW YORK, Sept. 19—(AP)—The stock market broke through the traces today under the pressure of the heaviest selling since around the middle of August, when nervousness over the drought was at its height.

At the close the price index of 90 leading issues was off 3 points, the largest break since August 12. Sales totaled 2,947,000 shares, more than double yesterday's volume and the most substantial turnover since early last month.

The shorts, who were active at the opening and through the early dealings, derived unexpected support from an unfounded rumor to the effect that serious political disturbances either had started or were about to start in Germany, threatening the present government. This report, denied as quickly as the cables could carry a denial, spread rapidly throughout the financial district and offerings both from the bears and from alarmed holders who had purchased at higher levels increased rapidly, with the result that turnover in the first two hours exceeded that for any full day this week with the exception of Monday.

When concern over the German situation had been quieted trading slackened but the bear drive had gathered such momentum that prices continued to slip lower. The market turned dull on intermittent attempts at a rally. Sporadic covering at the close reduced some of the extreme losses of 3 to 9 points, but net decline of 3 to 5 were numerous.

The break, which punctured by a considerable margin the so-called resistance points at which stocks had been meeting support, gave evidence of the unsettled state of speculative sentiment, of the concern in some quarters over the failure of business to revive appreciably, and of the market's recent inability to carry through on the rallies. Selling was especially active in the steel and utility shares, although large blocks, ranging from 5,000 to 8,000 shares, of a miscellaneous assortment were offered. U. S. Steel slumped to 162 3-4 and closed at 163 1-8, off 3 7-8. Youngstown Sheet and Tube, Michigan Steel, American Rolling Mill, and Republic Steel all touched new lows for the year.

The day's business news was largely negative. Copper producers finally cut to 10 1-2 cents and the exporters did likewise. There were some unfavorable dividend actions notably by Magma Copper, Park and Tilford, and Dunhill International, although one extra and one increased disbursement were announced.

Summaries of the week in trade varied little from recent statements. Dun's said "the recent slow and highly uneven advance closely conforms with conservative expectations," but added there was ground for the statement that "some progress in the right direction has been achieved since the recent turn in sessions," Bradstreet's reported that trade news this week was a repetition of recent advices of "a continued moderate increase in fall purchasing," although warm weather in some sections had retarded buying.

Conditions in the money market remained extremely comfortable and there was no change from recent rates. Bonds, with the exception of foreign issues, were steady.

Grain prices weakened and although the declines were doubtless accelerated by the stock market's action, quotations tended to ease before the decline in shares became broad. Wheat lost 1 3-8 to 1 5-8 cents and corn 1 1-8 to 1 1-2. Cotton closed 7 to 11 points net lower.

Net losses on the stock exchange ranged from 5 to 8 points in Western Union, Columbian Carbon, Case, American Power and Light, Allied Chemical, Underwood-Elliott-Fisher, Worthington Pump, and Westinghouse Electric. In the 3 to 4 point slump were American Can, Eastman Kodak, Stone and Webster, Loew's, DuPont, Electric Power and Light, and Lambert. Sears Roebuck, Bethlehem Steel, American Telephone, Johns Manville, American Water Works, and Standard Gas, lost 2 or more. General Electric, General Motors, and Standard Oil of New Jersey, were steadier, yielding only about a point on the day. Weakness of Republic Steel, which lost 3 net, was accompanied by reports that the common dividend would be omitted.

Foreign exchanges were slightly irregular. The German mark held firm and the French franc made another small gain.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 19—(AP)—Uncertainty over the political situation in Germany brought a fresh wave of liquidation of foreign obligations in the listed bond market today, and raised the level of activity to the highest point in two months. Sales totaled $10,453,000, the best since July 11.

In large turnovers, German issues declined sharply, some to new lows for the year, and the reactionary trend unsettled the whole list of foreign bonds. The immediate cause of the selling was a wild rumor that fascists contemplated seizing the German government and while Berlin reported that the rumor had no foundation in fact, the liquidation showed no diminution.

More than a dozen German issues lost a point or more, and other European issues reacted in sympathy, to a lesser degree. German International 5 1-2s, offered last spring, became the most active bond on the exchange, dropping nearly 3 points, and closing 2 1-4 net lower, a new bottom for the year. Kreuger and Toll warrant 5s, the obligation of the Swedish match trust which has extensive interests in Germany, reacted a point on a large turnover and regained a small fraction. Karstadt Rudolph 6s, sold off 4, and Nuremberg 6s, sank 6 to a new year's low. The German 7s, so called Dawes issue, lost only 5-8. South American issues were fairly steady and good buying developed for Argentine 6s of October 1959.

Some of the stock privilege bonds of domestic corporations were sold in sympathy with the trend of equity issues but investment issues held on an even keel, some of the high grade railroad and utility issues profiting from a good demand.

Utilities established a new high for the year in the averages. American Telephone debenture 5s repeated its previous high of the year. American and Foreign Power 5s, were in demand. Columbia Gas and Electric 5s climbed to a new 1930 high. New peaks were also reached by Baltimore and Ohio Toledo 4s, Boston and Maine 5s of 1967, Cotton Belt first 4s, Oregon Short Line 5s and Coast Line 4s.

U. S. governments were steady. Liberty 3 1-2s the most active bond, was firm.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Sept. 19—(AP)—Big offerings of Russian wheat at cut rate prices brought about decided setbacks in wheat and corn values, here. Prospective large arrivals of Russian wheat at Liverpool were given as the reason for a sudden break in Liverpool quotations, with export purchases of North American wheat today almost zero. Russia was reported to have chartered freight room for shipments of 600,000 tons of wheat.

Closing prices on wheat in Chicago, were nervous at but little above the day's bottom level, 1 1-4a1 3-4c lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 7-8a1 3-4c down, oats 5-8a1 1-4c off, and provisions showing 5ca22c decline.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19—(AP)—Commercial failures increased this week to 497, R. G. Dunn and company reports, 34 more than last week's 463 insolvencies and considerably higher than the average for this period. For the corresponding week last year, 360 defaults were reported. Failures with more than $5,000 liabilities rose to 311 this week as compared with 294 last week and 195 in the like week of 1929.

The daily gold statement of the New York Federal Reserve bank today, showed exports of $3,000,000 of the metal to Italy. There were no imports.

Arrangements have been made for the sale of a New York Stock exchange membership at $301,000. The price is a decline of $24,000 from the $325,000 at which sale of a seat was arranged yesterday. During the last two weeks the price for stock exchange memberships has declined $99,000. Late in July, a membership sold for $400,000. A week ago a sale was announced at $350,000.

The American Telephone and Telegraph company today applied to the New York Stock exchange for permission to list 150,000 additional common shares, and an application was filed by the United States Steel corporation for the listing of an additional 225,790 common shares. It was believed the additional telephone company stock was to be used in connection with acquisition of Teletype corporation which is to be taken over October 1, while the additional steel stock was presumed to be partly for use in connection with the proposed absorption of Oil Well Supply company.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—(AP)—Treasury receipts for September 17 were $300,018,582.92; expenditures $282,154,381.32; balance $289,658,364.64.

COTTON

NEW YORK, Sept. 19—(AP)—Futures closed barely steady, 7 to 11 points lower. Spot quiet; middling 10.90.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 19—(AP)—Prices in the curb market turned sharply downward today, losses of many active issues ranging from 1 to 3 points in the busiest session in nearly a fortnight.

Utilities bore the brunt of the attack but the entire list was unsettled. That a pessimistic view toward immediate outlook for stocks had gained the ascendancy was indicated by the briskness of activity on recessions which was in sharp contrast with the dullness of feeble rallies. The day's sales totaled 535,800 shares.

The lowest point in the decline was reached about mid-afternoon. Some ground was recovered in the final hour when the best buying of the day developed but most gains were comparatively small.

A long list of utility stocks finished well below the previous close, after breaking through previous support levels. At one time Electrict Bond and Share was down 3 3-4 points but rallied a point before the close. Losing 1 to 2 points were American and Foreign Power warrants, American Gas and Electric, International Utilities A, Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line, Middle-west Utilities, United Light and Power A, and Utilities Power and Light.

Oils were late in participating very extensively in the activity. Gulf Oil, Imperial of Canada, and Humble yielded a point. Standard Oil company issues, Cities Service and Vacuum, moved narrowly.

Dixie Gas and Utilities gave an exhibition of strength, rising nearly 2 points to a new high for the year. Other natural gas stocks were steady with the exception of Southwest Utilities which sagged 1 3-4. Weakest spots in the industrial list included Driver Harris, off 4, Dresser Manufacturing B, Deere, Mead Johnson, and Technicolor, off 1 to 2. A. O. Smith sagged 5 points. Austin Motors showed strength, rising 2 points but motor and aviation stocks generally were lower. Goldman Sachs trading and Insull Utility Investment lost about a point each.

Pots-and-Pans Patty

By
SARA J. WARDEL

WHEREIN A YOUNG MAN WALKS INTO PATTY'S EMPLOYMENT BUREAU AND ASKS TO RENT A "WIFE-BY-THE-DAY"

PATTY sat at her desk in the orderly little office and gloated over the white card in her hand. Park avenue trade at last. Something worthy of Homemaking, Inc. She'd take on this job, whatever it proved to be, herself. No sense running a risk with her newly trained staff of workers.

She pushed the buzzer for her secretary with an efficient jab of one rosy-topped but not too redly manicured finger.

"Show Mr. Bruce in, Miss Thomas," she ordered in the crisp manner of a high-powered executive.

R. Livingston Bruce proved to be young, blond and good looking. But at the moment he was distinctly worried about something. Upon his square, well-tailored shoulders he carried the weight of the world.

"I have a peculiar problem for you, Miss Austin. I don't suppose it's exactly ethical, but that hardly matters in the present emergency. I've come—" he paused distressfully—"to rent a wife!"

It was proof of Patty's efficiency that she did not bat an eyelash. She merely drew squares and circles on the sheet of paper in front of her instead.

"Suppose you explain yourself more explicitly," she suggested. "This isn't a matrimonial bureau, you know."

"Heaven forbid!" gasped Mr. Bruce. "The last thing I want is a wife. A permanent one, I mean. Just a sort of by-the-day one, if you get me. You see, it's this way—"

He lit a cigarette and settled back in the straight mahogany chair until he managed to make it look comfortable.

"My mother's coming from the West to visit me. I don't know how much you understand psychology. They can talk all they like about mother complexes, but believe me, the thing can't be compared with son complexes. I'm an only child, Miss Austin, and I assure you that my mother has done her best not to let me forget it."

"I literally had to run away from Kansas City six months ago. Since then she has besieged me with letters and long-distance telephone calls. Now she is coming on to take me home. I know it sounds ridiculous—a grown man acting as if he were a scared little kid. But that's the way she makes me feel. Mother has a bad heart, you see. She's perfectly capable of throwing a fit and frightening me into doing what she wants. It isn't as if she didn't have dad at home. She's not lonely. She just wants to tie me to her apron strings to satisfy her vanity. It's not fair to me. And it's not good for her. I won't have it, I tell you."

PATTY felt sorry for him. He was so young and so obviously troubled.

"So I've thought of this way out. If she thinks I'm married it may cure her. I know it sounds brutal, but it's honestly the kindest way out for all of us. Then I saw your ad—Homemaking, Inc. You said that you specialized in supplying efficient homemakers for bachelors, widowers and motherless homes. So I thought that maybe you could help me. Naturally I'd want a thoroughly nice girl, some one whom I could be proud to introduce as my wife. Like yourself, for instance. Oh, Miss Austin, will you do it?"

Patty meant to keep her dimple firmly in check, but it got away from her. She pulled it in instantly, however.

"Frankly, Mr. Bruce, my advice would be to pick out some attractive girl whom you really like and take a little jaunt down to City hall with her. It would solve the whole problem for you permanently."

She thought, but did not add, that he was apparently in need of some one to look after him. Why, he might be arrested for going around and proposing crazy schemes like this!

"I'll tell you what I'll do," she said impulsively. "I'll take on the job of putting the place in shape. It's bound to need little feminine touches. A man's apartment always looks like the frigid wastes of the Antarctic. How much time have we?"

"A week."

The frown between his eyes had vanished, but it reappeared at her next sentence.

"In the meantime you'd better get busy and scare up some one else for the wife act. This is a reputable business house, Mr. Bruce. We do not engage in unethical transactions. And now, if you will let me make an appointment to look over the premises—tomorrow morning at 10 would do very nicely for me."

"If it's the best you can do," he was saying unhappily, twisting his hat. "But perhaps you will change your mind. Really, I'm not so bad, Miss Austin. But I'm desperate. I'm just getting ahead with my work and I won't be dragged away from it."

"Tomorrow at 10, then."

Patty's cool voice ended the interview.

"I think we can make the background sufficiently homelike to satisfy the most old-fashioned mother. The rest of it, I'm afraid, is up to you."

She rang the buzzer again and nodded formally. R. Livingston Bruce found himself outside the door marked "Private." He whistled softly under his breath. Far from being a mournful sound, it was astonishingly cheerful. R. Livingston Bruce had great faith in his own powers of persuasion. Extreme youth and blond good looks are apt to make an optimist of any man.

He would have been interested, but not surprised, to know that behind the closed white door Patty was not tending immediately to the reams of business her manner had suggested. For the moment she was still inscribing geometric figures on an already overcrowded paper. Then she fished out a compact and studied her face in the small mirror anxiously. Why did she, oh, why did she persist in reminding men of a wife? It was the last thing she wanted to be!

Patty had learned her lesson well. Having spent her first ten years listening to her parents quarrel themselves into untimely graves and her second ten years over a pile of greasy dishes in her sister's overrun-with-children and poverty-stricken household, she had her opinion of matrimony. Wives were just unpaid servants. Patty preferred her wages, not to mention her peace of mind.

HER mother and father had never agreed on any conceivable topic. As a girl her mother had earned $30 a week as an expert typist—good wages in those days. She could never get used to asking her husband for every penny that he doled out so begrudgingly with the invariable and gloomy "What for?" Yet she made a good home for him. Baked and swept and laundered the curtains; washed windows and polished brass; tended the children and made little dresses for them; sewed buttons on her husband's shirts, mended his socks, set her alarm clock faithfully for 5.30 every morning. An unpaid servant, thought Patty grimly. No pretty clothes, no good times. It was all very dim and long ago to her now, but she still bitterly resented the way life had cheated her mother.

Patty's share of Norma's domesticity was recent and more vivid. Only in the last year had she brought herself to break away from the shabby little two-family house in the Bronx. The check she was able to send Norma and Harry every month more than compensated for losing her. She had been merely another mouth to feed. Harry made only $35 a week and there were three babies. If one of them waas not crying, invariably the other two were. Harry and Norma loved each other — once. Perhaps they still did. But poverty is a poor tonic for romance.

NOT for her, reflected Patty grimly. From the altar to the dishpan was the way it usually worked out. Unfortunately, or so it seemed at first, she had only one talent, a positive genius for homemaking. Laughingly, the family called her "Pots-and-Pans Patty." What she could do with a big spoon, a dab of flour, a drop of milk, a sprinkle of cinnamon and butter was the eighth wonder of the world. She had been able to work miracles of love and beauty in even Norma's bare little home. Cheesecloth curtains, dyed a soul-satisfying shade of orange; wholesome meals on next to nothing; the flick of a paint brush, transforming a sacred old bureau or an ugly chair.

But she refused to sell her gift for a wedding ring. There had been plenty of chances. Not for nothing a blue-black mop of hair and matching eyes, three kissable dimples, a pair of dancing heels. A little girl was Patty and men are moved to tuck such women under their arm for keeps.

But Patty was modern. Patty had brains. Patty was hard-boiled. In the end she solved the problem by capitalizing her gift. Ironically she determined to make the world pay for it. Instead of putting it in sock for orange blossoms, she put it on sale for cash.

"Homemaking, Inc.," read the sign on her office door and already she and her staff of workers had brought sunshine, paid for weekly in advance, to a score of distraught masculine households. Professional men who hated to eat in restaurants, actors who slept all morning but wanted some one to launder their silk socks and put their apartments in order for after-theatre festivities, motherless homes where harassed fathers enjoyed coming in from the office to a good dinner and a family of well-behaved children. Oh, it was fun being wife to all the world and actually getting paid for it!

And here was a young man anxious to pay for a wife on a slightly more personal footing! Patty frowned and snapped her compact shut.

"Don't let your sympathies run away with you," she advised herself sternly. "He's just one more good-looking, over-grown, thoroughly spoiled child. The kind you'd better avoid. Best to send Miss Stevens out on that job—"

Miss Stevens was 40 and immune. But Patty did not send her to the Park avenue address the next morning. She went herself, looking ridiculously young in the trim blue suit which was horribly expensive and represented one of the reasons for being a paid rather than an unpaid servant to mankind.

Mr. Bruce's apartment was gorgeous but, as she had suspected, totally lacking in the sort of thing a home-loving old-fashioned woman would expect from her son's wife. It had been interior-decorated. Patty learned with upraised eyebrows, by a 5th avenue firm noted chiefly for its high prices. She could charge him well for her services then. Apparently the boy had money. But how? She asked him frankly what he did for a living. His answer was embarrassed.

"I, oh, I write—" he stammered.

Poor kid! Another would-be literary star in an already overcrowded firmament! The money must belong to his folks then. Again she felt a sinking of shame. Hateful to rob them. She had a notion to throw over the job before it was too late. He must have read her mind.

"Of course I'm not selling much yet. But my uncle left me some money last year. That's what gave me courage to break away from home. I'm investing it in getting a start. You can go ahead and spend all you need to fix the place up right."

HIS gesture took in the elaborately modernistic living room with its ivory-upholstered chairs and silver rugs. The only discordant note was the portable typewriter by the window, a paper weight holding down a collection of crumpled yellow sheets of paper while an ashtray staggered under its load of half-burned cigarettes.

"I'm afraid we shall have to dispose of most of this," said Patty. "Is there any place you can store it? Your mother would hardly take to modernism."

R. Livingston Bruce pulled a bell cord on the wall. A Jap servant materialized as suddenly and silently as the famous genii of the lamp.

"Investing it in getting a start," he had said. She supposed this was only a part of the trappings. Silly kid! He was spending a small fortune to play the game right, probably giving elaborate parties for literary hangers-on. In a year's time he would be broke and badly in need of the mother he was now trying to get rid of. She did not venture an opinion as to what she thought of him, but it was not complimentary.

"I know a place where I think we can rent what you need," said Patty on the way down in the gilded cage that is a Park Avenue elevator. "Of course they'll charge a juicy price for it, but it's less wasteful than buying everything new."

THE rest of the day he tagged along like a faithful puppy, resting on his walking stick and frowning over such momentous decisions as whether his mother would prefer her son's wife to choose pink as a color scheme for the bedroom or blue. Naturally the narrow cot had to go. Patty had forgotten to measure the wall and was worried whether twin beds would fit into the space.

"Mother's sort of old-fashioned," stammered R. Livingston Bruce. "She has a double bed at home. Wouldn't that be better?"

"Perhaps," said Patty, furious at herself for blushing. "After all, it's your mother and your bride!"

Having selected a "God Bless Our Home" motto, elaborately wreathed with young angels, a set of wicker furniture for the living room and a housewifely collection of pots and pans, they decided to call it a day and stop for lunch. The gentleman in the case suggested an expensive restaurant and the lady, who passionately adored the little niceties of life, was about to agree with him when she redecided in favor of a more modest place. Patty never knew exactly why, but it had something to do with spending sums of money foolishly and a certain pig-headed, overgrown kid who needed mothering even if he was trying to escape the person best qualified to do it.

Later they staggered back to the apartment, R. Livingston Bruce lugging a wrought-iron fern stand and Patty nursing along a canary cage. It seemed that Mr. Bruce's mother adored flowers and birds. The perfect wife must show similar weaknesses. Patty began to like the woman whom her client was still urging her to adopt as an in-law.

Patty held out for a week. In the end she gave in for purely esthetic reasons. Patty was something of an artist. Having set the scene perfectly it was impossible to think of having some one else bungle things. Even the money had become relatively unimportant. It was the smiling little apartment that won her.

It said, so unmistakably, "Step in here if you no longer believe in happy homes. See, I am old-fashioned enough to boast a morris chair and a cut-glass vase full of real daisies. My little clock secretes a cheerful cuckoo bird. There are lace tidies on the backs of all my chairs and little marble statuettes on my mantelpiece. But a pair of manly slippers is toasting before my hearth and the velvet hassock makes it easy for a little wife to rest her head upon a rough tweed knee. The good smells drifting from my oven are pot roast and spicy brown gingerbread. Come in, I pray you, and rest a while!"

R. Livingston Bruce had been able to get hold of only such imperfect substitutes for the role. He brought them in at various times for her inspection. Cheap, tawdry little girls with too red lips and too tired eyes. Thin, hungry girls whom he afterward fed and dismissed. Girls who murdered the English language and talked unrecognizable slang. No, since he was determined to go through with it, Patty could not let the little apartment be desecrated, could not break the heart of a woman whom she had come to like and respect. Wearily and with a sad little wrench at her heart, she agreed to play the part whose lines she knew so well.

BUT it was even harder than she had imagined. R. Livingston Bruce's mother was such a duck! She had apple-red cheeks and the bright, inquisitive eyes of a wren-bird. She wore a funny little knob of a hat on top of her head, and she carried a black cotton umbrella. At the station she kissed her son until Patty expected to see nothing whatever of him left. Then R. Livingston Bruce presented "the wife." There was just the right shade of combined shyness and pleading in Patty's warm little kiss. Mrs. Bruce Senior nobly restrained her tendency to hysterics all the way home in the taxicab. Patty mixing her a dose of aromatic spirits of ammonia from the newly purchased bottle in the medicine cabinet, felt like a brute.

"No!" Patty wanted to scream. "It's a lie! I wouldn't have him on a sterling silver platter even if he had two gold spoons in his mouth. And if he doesn't deserve me, he certainly doesn't deserve you!"

But she kept her mouth shut and merely made soothing noises over the woman who was too good to be R. Livingston Bruce's mother.

"I know it seems sudden," said that young gentleman. "But it was terribly sudden for us, too, wasn't it, Patty?"

He came over and threw a protecting arm around her shoulder, tipping her chin back deliberately until his firm, rather too-nice lips met hers. She hadn't counted on that part of it. She shook inside somewhere and felt suddenly as if she were going to cry. Rage, maybe, and yet not rage either. When Patty was mad everything went around in giddy red circles. This was different. Even worse in a way, because it was new and she could not place the emotion.

She slipped away from the circle of his arms, unable to bear that queer trembling in her knees any longer. This wasn't mentioned in the bargain. It was—well, something that could not be paid for with his money. She straightened her hair and fled to the kitchenette, making some hurried excuse about things they'd want to talk over alone." R. Livingston Bruce looked over his shoulder at her queerly.

The dinner was perfect. Even Mrs. Bruce said so and that is a rare tribute between in-laws. The dumplings were plump but not soggy. The chicken gravy was minus a single lump. The biscuits were delicately brown. The pie crust was crisp, its meringue still warm and fluffy. Patty had consulted Mrs. Bruce's every taste. She knew that she thought coffee poisonous and preferred tea; that she loathed fresh bread and drank three glasses of cold, but not iced, water with every meal.

"Where," inquired her fictitious mother-in-law when the equally fictitious but helpful young husband was in the kitchenette scraping the plates after the first course, "did you spend your honeymoon?"

"Er—er—Point Pleasant," said Patty, thinking quickly.

"Did you enjoy Point Pleasant?" continued his mother when R. Livingston Bruce reappeared bearing a bowl of pale green lettuce and a dish of cheese straws.

"Never been there," blundered the man of the house.

"Stupid!" laughed Patty blithely. "Isn't it just like a man to forget his own honeymoon! But then, you know, Livingston always has his head in the clouds, thinking about his next story."

"Oh, you call him Livingston, do you? Of course, to us he is still Bob."

THERE was the faintest touch of sorrow in her voice. The old order changeth and all that sort of thing. Break number two! So the R stood for Robert.

"He just never could bear to have me call him that. Said it was your name for him. It reminds him so much of the dear old days when he was still a boy at home. I have so much to live up to, Mother Bruce. I guess I never can make up for all you've meant to him."

Patty salved the error smoothly and loothed the triumphant smile of pride with which the worried Mr. Bruce rewarded her. She changed the subject quickly.

"How do you like our little apartment?"

"It's very sweet and pretty, but I'm surprised that a modern girl sticks to the old-fashioned way of doing things. Of course, I'm too old to change. But I'm a great believer in living right up to the minute when you're young. Why, I had the very first plush parlor set in Kansas City!"

Patty flashed a suspicious glance at R. Livingston Bruce, but he was regarding his maternal parent with a shocked expression. Can son ever know mother? Obviously not. She was going on.

"Take those lace tidies now. They're way out of date. I've discarded mine. And those marble statues are just dust-catchers. I heard a lecturer at our women's club say so. Simplicity—that's the modern keynote. There's some mighty nice things about this futuristic furniture. I see pictures of it in all the magazines. Now if I was starting all over again, that's what I'd have."

Why, the old lady was a good sport, if she had ever seen one. Mrs. R. Livingston Bruce, adequately paid wife-by-the-day, hoped that she would grow into precisely such a young old-lady herself some day.

"But Patty isn't a modern woman, mother," praised the boy. "She's just an old-fashioned girl like you."

"I'm sorry," said the older woman simply. "You'll both miss such a lot of fun. There's so many things twentieth-century women can do. We lived for our children. It leaves us empty handed. I've just found it out. I don't say refuse to have children. No real woman ever answers the problem that way. But she does other things besides. She works. She has a good time. Yes, I'm a little sorry that Patty is an old-fashioned girl. Because, you see, I like her—"

The things that had been seething all day inside her suddenly boiled over, precipitated by the twisted smile of a woman who trusted her. Patty flung herself out of the chair. Her eyes were hot and shamed. Her voice shook.

"You wouldn't," she said, "like me a bit if you knew. You tell her, Bob. I can't. But I'll—I'll boil you in oil if you leave out a single thing!"

And she rushed from the room to the comforting security of the shiny brass bedstead, obviously new and regally bridal.

Later R. Livingston Bruce came to her and his blond young face worked oddly. He tried to take her in his arms but domesticating a young tiger cub had no risks compared with cuddling Patty.

"Get away," she cried. "I hate you!"

"And I," he breathed softly, "love you!"

"How can you joke about it?" she stormed. "Haven't you a single spark of decency, a spark of honor? After getting me to deceive your mother that way, actually goading me on and cheering from the sidelines, how can you expect me to feel about you? Do you think I like even myself very much? Why, she's the finest, sweetest, most courageous thing I ever saw!"

"She is," said R. Livingston Bruce more calmly than he felt, "the best mother-type actress on the present day stage."

"She is—what?" whispered Patty through tears.

"Listen, Patty, I'm a skunk. I acknowledge it. But I didn't know how this thing would break and you've got to hear me out."

He was holding her hands together firmly. His face was no longer boyish. It was tired and lined. But the eyes gripped her. She did not move from their circle of asking hope and despair.

"I used you as a sort of laboratory experiment, Patty. I'm a playwright. Of course my real name isn't R. Livington Bruce It's Stuart Knight. You're a character in my plot. But I wasn't sure how you would work out in real life, I mean. I had to know. Imagination is all right up to a certain point, but it's a risky guide. A play must ring true. It has to hold water."

PATTY held her breath. She was remembering the frightfully successful play which last year's critics had hailed as Stuart Knight's most outstanding triumph. They were all predicting great things for him.

"I wanted to test out the theory of propinquity. Put two real people into the situation of pretending a marriage that doesn't exist, give them the mutual interest of furnishing a home for some entirely ulterior motive and what would actually happen. Tragedy, drama, romance or comedy? Can a girl and a man start out by pretending something and then make it come true? Is pretense, in other words, sometimes a practical foundation for truth? Well, I leave it to you, Patty. Is it? You've got to help me solve my plot."

She was watching him with wide, frightened eyes. It had all been exactly like a play. She was conscious of it now. Conscious, too, of the trembling under her knees again. And now the play was almost over. It was time for the final curtain. He had spoiled it all.

"I think," she said gravely, "that if I were you I'd make your play a comedy."

And she laughed until suddenly she was crying instead. This time he managed to scoop her into his arms.

"A tragedy, you mean," he was saying, "unless you discovered what I did when I kissed you. Oh, Patty, I love you!"

"I hate you!"

He laughed triumphantly.

"Oh, Patty, I may not know life or women. But I do know my psychology. You couldn't hate me so viciously if you didn't love me just as hard!"

"But I don't want to get married. I was never going to get married," she wailed.

"Neither was I," he answered simply. "But what else can we do about it?"

"A wife is just an unpaid servant," she still protested feebly in spite of the dear warmth of his arms around her.

"Silly girl, you've got so much to learn," he whispered.

With his lips on hers, she was at last persuaded to agree with him. Love, as R. Livingston Bruce's wife, would bear considerable investigating. In its saner moments it might have something to do with pots and pans, bumped babies and greasy sinks. But for the moment it was more intimately concerned with kisses. And those, as any unpaid servant could have told her, make such very nice pay!

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

"Last of the Duanes," Fox Movietone romantic and thrilling drama of the great southwest, adapted from Zane Grey's widely read novel, played against the picturesque and beautiful background of interior Arizona, will open its much heralded engagement at the Warner Broadway theatre today.

George O'Brien, popular leading man of the screen is the heroic Buck Duane and Lucile Browne, beautiful blonde fresh from Broadway stage triumphs is the lady of his heart.

An outstanding cast appears in support of the featured players, among the most notable members being Myrna Loy, Walter McGrail, James Bradbury, Jr., Nat Pendleton, Frank Campeau, Lloyd Ingraham and Willard Robertson.

The story concerns a handsome young outlaw of almost super-human power, so quick on the draw that all men fear him. He kills the man who murdered his father and is then committed to a life of outlawry, constantly on the dodge, alone and hunted by the thought that he is a marked man.

In the role of the youthful and daring outlaw, O'Brien is splendidly cast and according to previous notices he gives the best performance of his career. Miss Browne is expected to establish herself in immediate favor. She is already a stage favorite, having played ingenue roles in several successful Broadway productions.

Myrna Loy, exotic little screen artist, plays an important role and Walter McGrail, not so long ago a matinee idol, portrays the "heavy" lead.

Palace Theatre

Tomorrow there comes to the Palace theatre for a run of four days the screen dramatization of one of the mightiest of the war novels, "All Quiet on the Western Front."

It can honestly be said that this is easily the most stupendous spectacle ever prepared for the talking screen. With a magnificent cast and a vast setting, it plumbs to the depths the horrors, the majesties of war. The thunderous accompaniment, the fight, the desperate heroism combine to make this an unforgettable picture.

In Hartford the picture played for weeks at reserved seat prices, and then came back a second time to do another smashing record of business at popular prices. In other cities throughout the country the record has been the same. Everywhere, the American public, eager to get an authoritative picture of how the great war was fought, flocked to the showing of "All Quiet." Almost everyone who has seen it, has gone home oppressed with the feeling that he has witnessed the utmost in dread, desperation and loyalty.

It is an immense picture, this story of a German youth who puts aside his schoolbooks and joins the army in the defense of his Fatherland. We see him during the rough hard grind of training, thrown in with coarser men, learning new facts every day, hardening his muscles, steeling his nerves and developing his mind for the master conflict into which he knows he is going to be hurled probably to certain death.

Into the line he goes—he and the other boys who joined up with him. He is beaten down by the awful clamor of heavy artillery. The great waves of sound oppress and suffocate him. In a dugout he lies in misery, listening to the rain of shells over his head, waiting for them to stop and knowing that when they do stop that will be the signal for him and his half-crazed hungry comrades to grab up rifles and grenades and defend their trench against oncoming waves of French infantry. The whole story is one intense thrill shot through with minor interludes that are each an epic in themselves. Today for the last times the Palace presents "The Czar of Broadway," a thrilling drama of the metropolis and "Doughboys" starring the inimitable Buter Keaton.

Hillcrest Theatre.

The ball and chain, which is always symbolical of penitentiary life, is in reality as dead as the dodo bird. It hasn't been used in prisons for years, it is pointed out by Mervyn Le Roy, director of "Numbered Men," the First National and Vitaphone thriller now at the Hillcrest.

"Numbered Men" is the second talking picture to be played on our new Western Electric sound equipment, which, judging from the exceedingly favorable comment already voiced by our patrons, more than justifies our claim to "the house of perfect talkies."

Sunday's feature has one of the most comical trios ever seen in any picture. With Paul Hurst, Victor Potel and Will Stanton in the cast of "Paradise Island," this Tiffany musical comedy drama of love, adventure and intrigue in the South Seas, should be well provided with the stuff that makes the funny bone itch.

"Paradise Island" also includes in its cast Kenneth Harlan, Marceline Day, Tom Santschi, Betty Boyd and Gladden James. Don't forget, matinees both Saturday and Sunday at 2 o'clock.

Brynan Violin Recital

The violin recital to be given by Henry Brynan at Slater hall on Sept 30 should appeal to the community at large, both musical and public spirited. Mr. Brynan is a young violinist of unusual promise and, from the time of his first serious studying while at the Norwich Free Academy, through his recent years at the New York Institute of Musical Art, he has not wavered in his ambition to become the violinist predicted of him.

Under Frank Damrosch, his ability and diligence have won recognition and honors. His tone, always warm, has grown in breadth and finish which, coupled with his splendid musical equipment, makes Mr. Brynan's violin playing very much worth-while.

Norwich is very proud of this young artist and the opportunity of hearing and encouraging a really fine talent is at hand for us all.

The recital is to be given under the auspices of the Norwich Rotary club for the benefit of the John Blackmar fund for crippled children. Tickets can be secured from the club members or at Cranston's.

Harland Road Land Sold

James L. Case, realtor, has sold to Joseph P. Connor, Jr., for Lucius A. Fenton a building lot located on the northwesterly side of Harland road. Mr. Connor has started the construction of a modern residence on the site, which is about 90 by 180 feet in dimensions.

NOANK

The post office employes recently had an outing at Walnut Grove farm owned by Joseph Cheesbro. Supper was served and games were played during the evening. Present were: Postmaster and Mrs. Claud M. Chester, John K. Ashbey, Miss Mildred Cheesebro, Mr. and Mrs Lester L. Smith, Mrs. Gladys Doyle, Mrs. Althea Fish, Miss Irma Doughty, G. E. Andrews, Bertard and Elmer Davis.

Celebrated Birthday

FERRIN ESTATE COMMITTEE NAMED
NEW LONDON PHYSICIAN DIED 1929

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 19—In the probate court today Earle Williams Stamm, of Norwich, Orville G. Andrews and Waldo Miner were appointed by Judge S. Victor Prince to distribute personal property of the estate of Dr. Carlisle F. Ferrin, who died suddenly May 6, 1929, at his residence, 215 Glenwood avenue here, leaving an estate of about $118,834. According to the supplemental finding of the administration account, the personal property of the physician was ordered distributed among the following: Mrs. Winifred B. Ferrin, this city, widow of the physician; Caroline B. Ferrin, Burlington, Vt.; Lena E. Williams, Stamford; Marian Williams Baker, West Hartford; Carlisle F. Graves, Springdale, Conn.; Chester Graves, Stamford; Nellie Woodson, Farmville, Va.; Tillotson Daniels, New London; Congregational church, Essex Junction, Vt.; the children's ward of Lawrence Memorial Associated hospital; the University of Vermont and Delta Psi fraternity of the University of Vermont.

The will of Dr. Ferrin was drawn in Reno, Neb., February 20th, 1929. The appraisal of his estate in the returns filed by the appraisers, James H. May and Ira S. Avery, on June 14th, 1929, showed that the physician had left a total estate of $169,109.

Dr. Ferrin went to Reno in 1929, bringing suit there January 7th, 1929, for divorce from his wife, Blanche E. Ferrin, of New London. They were married in Stonington May 24, 1897. On Saturday, February 15, 1929, at Reno, Dr. Ferrin married Mrs. Winifred B. Douglass, widow of William Douglass, of New London, Rev. Brewster Adams performing the ceremony. The physician and Mrs. Douglass had been residing in Reno for several months.

Patrolman Henry Hick today reported at police headquarters the existence of a depression in the highway of North Bank street, about two hundred feet north of State street. The defective spot was reported to the city highway department.

The force of city employes who have been engaged in making repairs to the municipal pier have completed their labors, which consisted of replacing worn planking and under pinning. The work required labor covering a month.

City employes have been engaged the past week of cleansing the numerous catch basins on the principal streets, especially because of the approach of winter when cold weather will cause the clogging of the basins. In some instances the accumulation of dirt and refuse was of such a quantity as to fill a dump-cart.

But one prisoner is an occupant of a cell at police headquarters tonight. The offender was found intoxicated on Bank street by Patrolman Bratxon Hill and the accused will be presented in the police court tomorrow.

FUNERAL
Capt. Wm. M. Sistare

The funeral of Capt. William M. Sistare was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at his residence in Waterford and was attended by a large gathering of mourners. The services were conducted by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth, pastor of the First Church of Christ. Members of Brainard lodge of Masons acted as bearers and conducted the committal service in St. Mary's cemetery.

Alexander Slodden, a tailor, residing with his wife, Emily, and son, at 347 Huntington street, was arrested this morning by Patrolman Cornelius Moriarty on a warrant charging him with breach of the peace and intoxication. Because of the nature of Slodden's alleged brutal treatment of his wife, the accused was held in bail of $1,000 for his appearance in the police court tomorrow. Slodden was unable to obtain surety on his bond and was locked up.

PHEBUS OUT OF LOCAL JAIL BUT TAKEN TO NEW JERSEY

Ora M. Phebus, former United States navy sailor, who was arrested several months ago in New Jersey, charged with the theft of an automobile owned by Adrian Murray and who was sentenced to six months in jail, concluded his sentence at the county jail here today. He did not regain his liberty, for Phebus was rearrested by a United States marshal and taken to Jersey City, where he will be tried on the charge of taking a stolen auto from Connecticut and bringing it to New Jersey. Phebus and a companion stole Murray's auto from the street and several days later the pair were arrested in Jersey City with the auto in their possession. Phebus and his friend were returned to New London for trial, but not until after they had lost out in the court on extradition proceedings. When presented in the police court, Phebus assumed full guilt of stealing the auto and was sentenced, while his companion was given his liberty.

But four cases were called in the police court today and all were for violation of the city's traffic laws. George E. Teachard, Alamonte Springs, Fla., was charged with passing an automatic danger signal at the corner of Crystal avenue and Main street. He did not appear in court and his bond of $15 was forfeited.

Murray Zuckerman, 38 School street, was charged with parking his automobile in such a manner as to block a fire hydrant. Zuckerman also failed to present himself in court and forfeited his bond of $2.

Robert Drazen, 167 Vauxhall street, charged with parking his automobile in a manner such as to cause a blockade of traffic on State street, had the charge nolled. Drazen parked parallel with other autos while he was absent several minutes to purchase cigarettes. During the absence from his auto, cars were held up for two blocks. He was arrested by Patrolman Michael Dorsey.

Thomas A. Murphy, 20 Starr street, was charged with parking his automobile in restricted area. He did not appear in court so his bond of $2 was forfeited.

Frank Rogers, Uncasville, and Lawrence Maynard, Noank, patients at Home Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

Condition Unchanged

There was no change today in the condition of Mrs. Margaret King, Black Hall, who sustained first and second degree burns yesterday when the gasoline tank on the auto she was driving exploded in South Lyme. Mrs. King, who is a patient at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, suffered bad burns of the face, head and upper part of the body.

Meedy Sirois, Nashua, N. H., was arrested in Groton yesterday by Patrolman Edmund Griswold, charged with failure to grant right of way, and will be in Groton town court Monday next. Sirois was driving at the corner of Mitchell street and Poquonoc road when the auto collided with a truck owned by Groton borough.

Two employes of a fishing boat moored at the wharf of the Atlantic Coast Fisheries, Groton, were arrested last night by State Police Officer Arthur Whitmarsh, charged with breach of the peace and intoxication. They will be tried in Groton town court Monday next. The men, Timothy Finn and Edward Trescheely, engaged in a fight on the trawler Petrel.

Mrs. Helen Lorrimer has returned to Mount Pleasant, Pa., having visited her sister, Mrs. Courtland A. Palmer, of Mott avenue.

WALSH'S BOY CONDITION CRITICAL FRIDAY NIGHT

While returning to his home from school late yesterday afternoon, William Walsh, 8, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Walsh, of the Little Boston district, East Lyme, was seriously injured when hit by a truck owned by the State Farm for Women, East Lyme, and driven by Mrs. Isabelle Kayes, storekeeper at the institution. The boy was one of several children who alighted from a bus driven by Robert Clark which is used to convey the children to and from school, and near the residence of the Walsh boy. He suddenly left the other children and started to run across the highway when the truck traveling at a fast rate of speed struck him. The boy was knocked down and dragged about 15 feet before Mrs. Kayes brought the truck to a stop. The child was taken to the office of Dr. Edward Atkinson, in Niantic, where emergency treatment was administered, after which he was taken to Lawrence Memorial hospital and where this afternoon it was said that the patient's condition was critical.

Wedding Set For Oct. 4

Asa E. Barnes, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Asa E. Barnes, 208 Howard street, and Miss Eleanor K. Baxter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hartwell E. Baxter, of the Golden Spur, East Lyme, will be married Saturday, Oct. 4, in the chapel of the First Church of Christ, this city.

Mrs. Effie Douglas, Mrs. Jean Gildley, Mrs. Christina Greig, Mrs. Catherine MacArthur and Mrs. Edith Huntley returned home today, having attended the annual convention of the grand lodge of the Daughters of Scotia, at the Hotel Commodore, New York.

Motorcycle Officer Clarence Martin and Automobile Patrol Officer William Corcoran have started on their vacations of two weeks. Automobile Patrol Officer Elwood Bailey is also on vacation and is spending the time in Canada, with Prosecuting Attorney Max Boyer.

CHIEF TAFT GIVES TIMELY ADVICE AS SEASON FOR STARTING FIRES OPENS

Fire Chief Henry R. Taft had a few words of timely advice to impart to the public Friday evening along safety lines in view of the approach of the season when it will be necessary to have heat in houses.

Chief Taft's advice was given as follows:

"The time is drawing near when you will soon have to start your fires in the stoves and furnaces of your homes; also places of business.

"Question! Have you had your chimneys, stoves and heater cleaned out? If not you are making a terrible mistake by not doing so before it is time to start your fires in them.

"The soot in the chimney is apt to catch fire and not only destroy your home or places of business but it may be the means of loss of life of your entire family. Often you read in the papers of entire families being wiped out where that dirty chimney was the cause of it all, so why take that chance? Then again if you allow the soot to remain in your stove pipes, stoves and heaters it is going to take more coal to heat your homes, etc., also cause this fire department a great many useless runs.

"The fire insurance statistics show us that the greatest originating cause of all fires are chimney fires. Just stop and think that there are 10,000 lives lost annually by fire.

"It seems to me that it is the duty of the head of each household and landlord to protect the lives of those he rents his apartments to, or the head of the household to protect the lives of his family against the possibility of fire causing sorrow, injury, or even death in his or their homes.

"There are plenty of chimneys in the city of Norwich that need attention not only by cleaning but should be inspected for leaks from the cellar to the roof. A great many of them were built years ago and are only one brick thick and unlined, when they should have been either single brick thick with tile lining or double brick thick with no lining eight inch walls.

"Let your slogan be from now until it is time to start your fires in your stoves or heaters, 'Inspect and Clean All of Our Heating Units'."

ROSH HASHANAH OBSERVANCE BEGINS AT SUNSET MONDAY

At sunset next Monday will begin the observance of Rosh Hashanah, which marks the Hebrew calendar year of 5691, and will be solemnly observed for two days by the entire Hebrew community of this city. All places of business are closed, the synagogues will be filled and the worshipers will give free vent to their feelings by prayer and devotion, as this is considered the most significant festival of the Jewish year.

At this time, according to Rabbinic tradition, the deeds of all mankind are surveyed. All records are unfolded, and judgment is passed upon every one's fate and destiny. The chief motive of Jewish thought during these sacred days is a prayer for health and life. The Jew prays not merely for his own welfare and happiness, but also for the welfare of humanity. "Our God and God of our fathers, reign Thou in Thy glory over the whole universe, and shine forth in Thy splendor and might upon all the inhabitants of Thy world."

Rosh Hashanah, according to Jewish tradition, marks the day when the world was created, and thus commemorates the birth of humanity. It signifies God's power and universality and reminds the Jew of his moral obligations to the faith of his fathers.

The order of services at Community synagogue on Church street will be as follows: Sept. 22, 7 p. m.; Sept. 23, 8 a. m.; Blowing Shophar, 10 a. m; sermon in English by Rabbi Shabshelowitz; subject, "In the Atmosphere of Holiness". Musaph service, 11 a. m.; evening service, 7 p. m.

RUSSIA HAS BEEN SELLING WHEAT SHORT FOR MONTHS

Agricultural Department Investigation Covered Only the Last Two Weeks—The All-Russian Textile Syndicate Had Assured the Department That Their Sales Had Been Confined to That Period—While the Russian Syndicate Has Been Selling Short Vast Amounts of Wheat, Which It Could Never Deliver, No White Bread Has Been Available to Russians, Except to Children Under 10 Years of Age.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21.—(AP)— A more extended investigation of short selling of wheat by Russia in the Chicago pit was said today by Secretary Hyde to have become necessary through information from the president of the All-Russian Textile syndicate, which placed the orders, that operations had continued for several months.

As action by the Chicago grain exchange on the opportunity, the secretary said, was extended yesterday "to clear the deck by its own voluntary action," was awaited, Hyde expressed indebtedness to E. V. Belitzky, the syndicate official, for his statement last night that the operations "were carried on over a period of several months."

Hitherto, he added, the department's investigation had covered only the last two weeks.

In a formal statement the cabinet member quoted Belitzky as saying that "Mr. Hyde's estimate of five million bushels" as the amount of soviet Russia's short sales is "a little exaggerated."

"That estimate was obtained from Mr Belitzky's own company," Hyde continued. "It has proved to be, as he says, incorrect. Our investigations already show that, on four days, short sales by the soviet government, through three brokers amounted to over 7,500,000 bushels of wheat. Thus, actual sales already uncovered, overrun Mr. Belitzky's estimate by a little over 50 per cent.

"It is strange that the president of the All-Russian Textile syndicate does not know within two and one-half million bushels how much wheat he has actually sold."

The syndicate had assured the department previously, he added, that their sales were confined to the past two weeks and that the check-up had covered only that period.

Hyde denied Belitzky's statement that the sales could not have appreciably affected the trend of prices on the Chicago market due to the turnover of from 50,000,000 to 60,000,000 bushels a day.

"The answer is found in the course of prices during the four days covered by the sales so far identified." Hyde said. "Those four days are September 8, 9, 10, 11. On September 8 May wheat opened on Chicago at 99 1-8 or 1 1-2 cents above the previous close. The price dropped during the day and closed at 96 1-2, or on the bottom and down 2 7-8 cents. During the four days, the market on May wheat dropped from the opening of 99 1-8 to the close on September 11 at 94 1-8, a decline of 5 cents. Comparable declines weree registered in all the other wheat futures.

"The sales by soviet Russia were probably not responsible for all of this drop. I do say that such sales, added to the other bear factors, contributed greatly to a bear psychology which depressed the market. It is evident that something was depressing a market which was trying to rise.

"This whole matter presents several unusual aspects. Here is a foreign government selling wheat short in a market to which it can never, under any possibility, make delivery. Freight and tariff absolutely forbid delivery.

"This, their representatives say, is a legitimate hedging operation, but they do not seem to know by 50 per cent how many bushels they are hedging

"Not the least striking factor of these unique operations is the fact that, so far from having wheat to sell, and thus to hedge, the Russian government is rationing its people, and doling out food on food cars.

"No white bread is available to Russians except to children under ten years of age. Industrial workers may have from one-half to three-fourths pound of rye bread per day, their children only one-fourth pound each per day. No butter is available except to children, and only one-eighth of a pound per week to them.

"It is not my province to pass judgment upon policies of foreign governments. If they elect to sell wheat abroad at a time when they find it necessary to ration their own people, and to shoot men for forging food cards, that is their business. Nor is it within my power to discern their motives in bearing American markets.

"But it is my province and my duty to expose such transactions and to insist that American institutions be so regulated as to make such transactions impossible. I hope the futures exchanges of this country, on their own initiative, will have sufficient foresight and public spirit to make such changes in their rules as may be necessary.

The secretary may confer with officials of the Chicago board of trade some time this week. He left Washington this afternoon for Ann Arbor, Michigan, with his daughter, Caroline who will matriculate at the University of Michigan. He was considering making his return trip through Chicago.

UNDER WATER SYSTEM OF SMUGGLING LIQUOR

BASS RIVER. Mass., Sept. 21.—(AP)—Customs inspectors today discovered an under-water smuggling system, seized 269 cases of imported liquors and, aided by a coast guard airplane and patrol boats, continued a search for more liquor believed concealed in the ocean off Parker's River beach. The liquor seized was said to have a sales value of $15,000. Speedboats operating from a rum runner somewhere southeast of Cape Cod, according to Customs Inspectors Harold Young and Matthew Sheehan, of Boston, had deposited the liquor in the water, to be brought ashore later by a land crew. As a result of their investigation, which included surprising a group of men here yesterday, the customs inspectors said they would seek conspiracy indictments against eight men from the federal grand jury. Possibly 75 men, the officers said, were engaged in the smuggling operations.

The inspectors had to don swimming suits to find the hiding place of part of the liquor. They expressed the opinion that approximately 300 cases had been brought ashore and that about 200 cases remained in the ocean. The liquor seized today included 250 cases found under a short cottage and 19 brought up from the sea bottom.

BATTLE IN VESTIBULE OF CHURCH IN MERIDEN

MERIDEN, Sept. 21—(AP)—A two day religious festival begun Saturday by the Blessed Virgin society, a women's organization connected with the Church of Our Lady of Mt. Carmel an Italian parish, was interrupted today when a pitched battle broke out in the vestibule of the church over an attempt by the women to remove from the edifice a statue of the Virgin so that their male relatives might parade with it through the Italian section for the purpose of soliciting funds from those along the way.

Previously told by their pastor, the Rev. Domenico Ricci that they could not remove the statue, the women, joined by the men, protested vigorously this morning after mass as there was a band near the church ready for the procession. While a large gathering of men waited outside, some of the women seized the statue despite their pastor's protests and carried it to the vestibule, intending to hand it over to the paraders.

While two detectives and several policemen went into the vestibule to retrieve the statue and return it to the pastor, their effort to obtain possession of it precipitating a battle, in which fists flew freely while men and women screamed excitely in their native tongue. While two detectives and several uniformed officers fought back the infuriated Italians a call to police headquarters brought about a dozen other officers, led by Chief James H Burke.

By the time order had been restored, eight women had been taken to police headquarters, but only three were arrested, the charges being breach of the peace. Chief Burke immediately cancelled permits for an afternoon band concert and an evening program of fireworks, but later announced that those features of the celebration would be permitted, believing that the events might tend to take up the attention of the celebrators and their friends and lessen the inflamed condition of the section.

Meanwhile, three policemen were stationed for the rest of the day and night in front of the residence of the Rev. Ricci, for whose safety much concern was felt. Some years ago the pastor was slashed across the cheek, bearing a large scar to testify to past differences with some of his people.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Sept. 21.—(AP)—The crew of the Cythera, steam yacht owned by Edith Hale Harkness, of New York, rescued two coast guardsmen from drowning at the mouth of the Acushnet river today.

The coast guardsmen, John Whitford and Matthew Sadowski, attached to the Woods Hole station, were found clinging to an overturned skiff after their cries had attracted the attention of Augustus Benson and James Farrell, mate and steward of the Cythera. They had been in the water about an hour when picked up.

The Cythera continued its trip to New York from Maine after landing the two men.

ROSELAND, N. J., Sept. 21.—(AP)—An airplane crashed near the Public Service power station here today, killing its pilot who was identified by officials of the Curtiss-Wright flying field at Caldwell as Jack H. G. Mills, Jr., 38, of Englewood.

Witnesses said the plane careened to the ground in an inverted dive. The cause of the crash was not known, but the belief was expressed that the pilot had fainted.

Mills was a private student pilot and was expected to take his commercial license test next Thursday.

First reports that a passenger was in the plane with Mills later proved erroneous

Killed In Leap From Hudson River Bridge

Norman J. Terry, Professional High Diver and Parachute Jumper, Was the Victim.

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Norman J. Terry, 24, a professional high diver and parachute jumper of Kittanning, Pa., was killed today in a leap from the partially constructed Hudson river bridge to the water, 276 feet below. Police said the jump was made under the sponsorship of a daily newspaper and a motion picture concern.

Clad in a bathing suit, Terry gained entrance to the closely guarded approach to the bridge. Walking along a catwalk, he poised for a time on a cable in mid-air and leaped while thousands watched. Then for more than 200 feet his body held a vertical position, but then he lost his equilibrium, was snapped into a horizontal posture and struck the water flat on his back.

Two speedboats containing his manager and photographers and reporters raced to the scene and picked him up. Taken to a hospital, he was pronounced dead of a broken back. James J. Murray, 26, of Staten Island, described by police as his manager, was arrested on a technical charge of homicide.

The 213-foot jump was a far longer one than the famous leap by Steve Brodie from Brooklyn bridge. Brodie fell only 135 feet before hitting the water.

Leaping from high places was only one of many stunts in Terry's repertoire. He had disported himself on the wings of airplanes high in the air, hopped from one plane to another and walked a tight-rope from one skyscraper to another.

One of his most recent thrillers occurred in Chicago a few months ago when he landed without a parachute from an airplane going at a high rate. Terry hung by his hands from the plane's undercarriage, allowed it to swoop within ten feet of the ground, while he dropped off and landed successfully in base-sliding fashion. Also in Chicago a few weeks ago Terry walked a slack wire 500 feet in the air from the Carbon and Carbide building to the Mather tower.

Bishop William A. Leonard

GAMBIER, Ohio, Sept. 21. — (AP) — Bishop William A. Leonard, of the Episcopal church, died at his home here tonight. He was 82 years old.

Bishop Leonard retired last spring. Previously he had presided over the Ohio diocese for more than 40 years. Bishop Leonard's wife died 15 years ago. They had no children.

Bishop Leonard was the oldest Episcopal church bishop in the country, but because of advancing age and ill health declined to become permanent titular head of the church.

METAL LUNG IS KEEPING A YOUNG WOMAN ALIVE

CHICAGO, Sept. 21.—(AP)—A metal lung today afforded Frances McGaan another day of life—the ninth since her chest muscles became paralyzed and she was placed in a mechanical respirator.

Attending physicians and the patient herself were optimistic of the girl's chances for recovery. Her condition, slightly improved recently, was reported as virtually unchanged today although she took nourishment regularly and appeared to have gained strength.

Every two hours today Miss McGaan was removed from the respirator for ten minute periods and was able to breath, although with great effort.

When nature failed nine days ago in a swift attack of infantile paralysis, science was called upon to save the young student nurse's life. She was placed in an aluminum cabinet that encased her body from neck to feet. An electrically operated pump alternately created air pressure and vacuum within the compartment, forcing the girl's lungs to function and gradually compelling helpless chest muscles to return to normalcy.

Doctors believe the serum, injected a week ago to counteract the disease, has taken effect.

SEATTLE, Wahs., Sept. 21—(AP)—Less than six hours and a half of jury deliberation on six weeks' testimony has resulted in acquittal for Roy C. Lyle, suspended prohibition administrator, and three former assistants all charged with conspiracy and accepting bribes.

The federal jury reached its verdict late last night. It was read to a court room nearly filled with friends of the defendants, Lyle, his assistant, William Whitney, and Earl Corwin and R. L. Fryant, former dry agents.

They were charged with accepting bribes from rum runners in a conspiracy to permit wholesale importations of liquor into western Washington.

Gale Co[illegible]tinues To Swee[illegible]ench Coast

GALES CONTOINUE TO SWEEP

PARIS, Sept. 21—(AP)—Equinoctial gales, reaching at some points a velocity of 80 to 100 miles an hour, tonight continued to sweep the French Atlantic seaboard and channel coast.

The winds, which had been blowing furiously for 72 hours, showed no signs of abating. They drove before them to refuge in ports nearly 40 ships and took the lives of at least eight sailors, a woman and a baby.

Seventeen ships had taken refuge this evening in Cherbourg Roads. Twelve were sheltered at Brest and seven more at Lorient, on the south coast of Brittany.

Many of these craft had had their rigging or their bridges swept away by wind and heavy seas.

The Greek steamer Theodorus Bulgaris, 2,767 tons, which sailed from Istanbul on Aug. 11, was abandoned and left drifting in latitude 46.45 north, longitude 6.40 west, straight in the path of ships plying between channel ports and Gibraltar and South Africa.

Two of her crew were drowned before the steamer "British Advocate" could take off those on board. The French liner Rochambeau spent 11 hours standing by to be of assistance.

When the Rochambeau reached Havre today, the captain reported one of the worst storms he had encountered in his 30 years of sailing the seas.

While the Theodorus Bulgaris was left drifting in the Bay of Biscay, another freighter, the Italian "U. Vivaldi," 2,762 tons, was towed into the port of Brest, waterlogged. It was salvaged by the ocean going tug Iroise.

The British steamer Illingsworth reached Havre Roards today with her flag at halfmast. Her third engineer had been swept off the deck by a wave in the Bay of Biscay yesterday.

The trawler Notre Dame docked at Boulogne with two survivors of the Dutch schooner Fouxhod, which sank in the channel yesterday. The master of the Fouxhod, his wife and their two year old baby perished.

A cabin boy whose name was given as Urvoy was killed aboard the American freighter Oregon when a steel cable snapped while the ship was drifting away from the breakwater at Havre.

GALE IS ABATING IN THE ENGLISH CHANNEL

LONDON, Sept. 21—(AP)—A gale that had whipped the channel and the southwestern coasts of England for 24 hours largely blew itself out during the night and today.

The steamer Chesam, 4,295 tons, from River Plate with a cargo of maize, asked for assistance off the western coast of Ireland. She was lying helpless with her steering gear smashed. The steamer Umberleight, 2,919 tons, which went ashore on the rocks near Plymouth, has been refloated but is badly damaged.

The liner Montcalm, bound from Southampton to Quebec, Canada, felt the full force of the channel gale but halted for several hours to play her searchlights on the Umberleigh until another ship came up to the rescue.

The Montcalm reached Cobh, Irish Free State, 15 hours behind schedule.

The Italian steamer Tuscania, 4,425 tons, whose wireless calls for help off the French coast Friday night caused great excitement in shipping circles, was safely towed into the port of Falmouth by a German tug.

CROSS OPENED DEMOCRATIC STATE CAMPAIGN SUNDAY

BRIDGEPORT, Sept. 21. — (AP)—The "shameless straddle of the prohibition question by the republican party is an insult to the people of the state and I don't think they are going to get away with it," Dean Wilbur L. Cross, democratic candidate for governor, declared at the 11th annual dinner of the Fifth District Democratic club, which 500 democrats attended at The Farms this afternoon.

With reference to the nation's economic situation, Dean Cross declared:

"The republican party cannot pass the buck to an imaginary cycle of prosperity and depression, claiming credit for the prosperity and disclaiming any responsibility for the depression. It is high time that the bluff be called and I here and now call the bluff.'

The dinner, marking the opening of the democratic state campaign, was attended by all of the party's candidates for state office.

LIPTON ABOARD ERIN BOUND FOR NEW YORK

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 21—(AP)—Sir Thomas Lipton sailed for New York this morning aboard his steam yacht Erin, but before he left he expressed the hope that Harold S. Vanderbilt would bring the Enterprise to England next year so that she could race against the Shamrock and other "J" boats on British waters.

"I have asked Mr. Vanderbilt to bring the Enterprise to England next spring," said Sir Thomas, "and I hope he does."

The doughty Irish baronet refuses to be discouraged by the defeat of Shamrock in the America's cup races by Enterprise. Yesterday he was all smiles as he accepted a silver model of Newport's famous old stone mill from a committee of citizens with the reply, "I hope to race here again before very long if it is possible."

MONUMENT TO MEMORY OF BENEDICT ARNOLD, TRAITOR

HAVERSTRAW, N. Y., Sept. 21.—(AP)—A monument perpetuating the memory of a traitor was unveiled today.

Three boulders surmounted by a revolutionary war cannon and bearing a tablet now mark the spot on which Benedict Arnold, then a major general in the Continental army, met Major John Andre, the British spy, and arranged to sell out the American army and turn West Point over to the English. The monument was erected by the Rockland County Historical society. Frank E. Stripe, New York lawyer, delivered the unveiling oration.

BISHOP JAMES CANNON, JR., MUST FACE SECOND INQUIRY

Charges Have Been Filed by Four Traveling Elders of the M. E. Church, South—The Baltimore Sun Says the New Charges Comprise Complaints Against Bishop Cannon's Personal Conduct—The Bishop and Mrs. Cannon Are En Route From Brazil to New York

RICHMOND, Va., Sept. 21—(AP)—Bishop James Cannon, Jr., who emerged unscathed by the fire of an official church investigation last May in Dallas, must face a second inquiry at the hands of a committee of the Methodist Episcopal church, south.

The complaint against Bishop Cannon filed with Bishop William N. Ainsworth, of Birmingham, Ala., chairman of the College of Bishops, by four traveling elders under church rules makes an investigation mandatory. Last May Bishop Cannon's stock market dealings and political activities were investigated at the Methodist conference at Dallas. The bishop was exonerated and re-elected chairman of the board of temperance, prohibition and social service.

Should a committee of twelve, which church rules require Bishop Ainsworth to call for the purpose of investigating the new charges decide Bishop Cannon must stand trial he would be suspended until the 1934 conference when the trial would be held.

The four elders who filed the new complaint were Dr. Forrest J. Prettyman, of Baltimore; Dr. Costen J. Harrell; Dr. J. T. Mastin, of Richmond; and Dr. I. P. Martin, of Abingtor, Va. The complaint has been forwarded to Bishop Ainsworth at Birmingham.

The Baltimore Sun said today the new charges comprise complaints against Bishop Cannon's personal conduct, complaints based on his participation in buying and selling stocks for speculative purpose, and complaint based on the bishop's political activities and his participation in the handling of money for political campaign purposes.

Although Bishop Cannon was before the Dallas conference for investigation last May on two counts, based on stock speculation evidence and political activities, in neither of these inquiries was any question raised concerning the churchman's morals. In the new complaint filed with Bishop Ainsworth, however, several counts were said by the Sun to be based on allegations published during July in newspapers in New York, Philadelphia and Washington.

Bishop Cannon was notified some weeks ago by the four churchman who filed the charges of their investigation, but so far as could be learned the bishop has ignored the notice. Advices today from Rio de Janeiro, where the bishop and Mrs. Cannon, his former secretary, have been for some time, said they sailed last Tuesday for New York from the port of Santos.

BISHOP CANNON AND WIFE ARE EN ROUTE TO NEW YORK

RIO DE JANEIRO, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal church South sailed with his wife for New York last Tuesday from the port of Santos. His departure apparently had been kept a strict secret.

In Rio De Janeiro it had been generally believed that the bishop was somewhere in the interior of Brazil on a trip of study and exploration. He was reported at Sao Paulo last week to have left for the interior with an indefinite destination.

No mention was made of his departure by members of the Methodist church in Brazil. Church leaders today were unwilling to confirm where the bishop had gone, merely stating "he is on the high seas."

The couple sailed from Santos aboard the liner American Legion. Church authorities kept the closest silence about the reasons for the bishop's changing his plans and hurriedly leaving Brazil.

Bishop Cannon, when interviewed by the Associated Press correspondent on Aug. 10, declared his intention of remaining in Brazil until late in October in connection with church organization work.

He expected to return to the United States only about the middle of November, and said his work in Brazil would prevent him taking part in the autumn political campaign there.

He said he would not be a factor in the pre-election campaign.

In August he presided over the first of three conferences for working out a scheme for separation of the Brazilian Methodists from the parent body in the United States and constructing an autonomous Methodist church of Brazil.

Then he went to Sao Paulo, where he presided over a second conference. He planned to do the same at a third conference in southern Brazil, and then at a general conference here late in October.

He came to Brazil on his honeymoon, having married his former secretary, Mrs. Helen McCallum, in London in July.

DEATH OF FOUNDER OF THE CAMPBELL SOUP CO.

CAMDEN, N. J., Sept. 21—(AP)—Dr. John Thompson Dorrance, president and founder of the Campbell Soup company and described as the originator of condensed, canned soup, died of a heart ailment today at his home, Pomona Farm, Cinnaminson, N. J. He was 57.

Dr. Dorrance returned from his summer home in Bar Harbor, Me., last week and was confined to his bed with a slight illness. For several days he seemingly was on the road to recovery, but this morning he collapsed.

His life was the traditional story of American success. From a $7.50 a week employe in his uncle's fruit and preserve factory, he rose to the head of a world-wide business organization.

He was the sole owner of the Campbell company.

Dr. Dorrance was born in Bristol, Pa. He received his early education in Philadelphia, was graduated from Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1895, and received his Ph.D. at the University of Gottingen in 1897.

While in Germany, his associates said, he conceived the idea of making condensed, canned soup available in America. He returned to this country, joined the Campbell Fruit and Preserve company, his uncles's firm, and in 1899 put out the first batch of canned soup. From that time the company grew rapidly, in 1915 becoming the Campbell Soup company.

His principle business idea, that of concentration and mass production led him to confine his company's activities to soup and one or two other commodities.

TWO REP. CONVENTIONS IN HARTFORD TODAY

HARTFORD, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Republican candidates for congressman from the first district district, and sheriff of Hartford county will be named at conventions to be held at the Hotel Bond here tomorrow morning. Clarence W. Seymour, of West Hartford, is expected to be the unanimous choice of the congressional convention and Sheriff Edward W. Dewey of the county convention.

Democrats in the county and congressional district, which are the same territorially, are still uncertain regarding candidates for congressman and sheriff. Ex-Mayor Angelo M. Paonessa, of New Britain, wants the congressional nomination and party leaders who desire ex-Congressman Lonergan to be a candidate for congress are hopeful of persuading the New Britain man to be the candidate for sheriff.

A threatened contest for the republican congressional nomination between the incumbent, E. Hart Fenn, and Col. Seymour apparently ended last week when the congressman announced that his physician had advised him not to seek re-election.

It would be authorized to conduct experiments and surveys in health, hygiene, infancy and pre-natal care, education and training, neglect, dependency, delinquency, child labor, family housing and home economics.

TOSS AWAY LIP STICK AND RESUME OLD DRESS AND WAYS

They had been sent to Turkey late in 1928 by Amanullah for training as physicians, nurses and chemists and passed through here on their way back to Kabul the Afghanistan capital, to take up life as it was in the days before Amnullah's first trip to Europe.

It is understood that the young women were recalled by King Nadir Shah through pressure put on the government by the orthodox who are against the Europeanization of girls' education.

At the frontier the girls, who had been wearing European clothing nearly two years, were met by relatives who had brought with them bundles of native costumes.

Without a murmur the travelers cast aside their modern skirts and high-heeled shoes and slipped again into the Afghan attire they had known from childhood.

And at the border line the girls threw away their lip sticks and powder puffs and agreed that the old garments were quite comfortable, after all.

JEWETT CITY, Sept. 21—The formal opening of Jewett City Savings Bank, Saturday afternoon was surely a grand affair. Between three and eight o'clock it is estimated that fully three thousand callers availed themselves of the opportunity to inspect the bank's new home. Among the visitors were not only local friends of this institution, but many from nearby communities and from distant cities. At 7:30 p. m. it was estimated that there were more than two hundred present to make up the last hour callers.

This splendid building, which has been completed at a cost of $80,000, stands at the corner of Main and Ashland streets, with a site frontage of 72 feet on Main street and a depth of 100 feet. This plot was a purchase from the A. A. Young estate.

The maple trees which margined the lot on both Main and Ashland streets have been preserved, and stand as added natural attractions.

The material of construction of the banking house, is tapestry brick with limestone trimmings. The Main street front shows a pillar effect, with a wide main entrance. Above the door is an electric clock, synchronized daily with Western Union time. Across the front, at a level with the cornices, the title of the institution is cut into the stone adornment. The main floor plan is arranged so that every advantage is gained within the working space, with ample accommodation for the convenience and comfort of business patrons. A mezzanine floor along the south interior is reserved for such uses as may be deemed necessary. All the divisions of the main floor, including the directors' room, the treasurers office, the consulting room, a sound-proof office for the mechanical computing machines, the women assistant's rest room, the women's public rest room together with those for the accommodation of safety deposit box holders, are fitted with new furniture, and grass cloth and chintz draperies throughout.

The business area in the center of the main floor, was planned with a view to the best lighting effect, which is in direct from the ceiling, and counter lights. Here ample space is provided for the several cabinets and the electric coin auditing and counting machine.

All the bank's securities, currency, negotiable papers, as well as the new safe deposit boxes are contained within a steel lined vault, the entrance to which is guarded by a massive door weighing several tons, a splendid example of modern ingenuity and achievement, impregnable, of marvelous construction, the very finest and latest development in the field of scientific protection, offering as formidable a barrier against intrusion as human genius and skill can devise. When the door is closed and forced into position by the giant pressure mechanism, the joints become proof against the entrance of wedges or liquid explosives, oxy-acetylene torch and other known means of attack employed by the yeggmen of today.

Moreover, the door or entrance is thoroughly guarded by combination and timeclock mechanism, and once this entrance is locked, it will defy all human attempts to reach the contents until the maze of safety devices are released by the timeclock. Much interest was manifested by visitors in this great vault, as they inspected its interior.

An electric refrigerating plant installed in the basement furnishes cool filtered water to the bublers on the main floor.

No item has been overlooked in the building of this modern banking institution, that would make for the accommodation of its thousands of depositors and patrons. Considering every detail, a banking home is presented which is as sound and solid as its business policies. The architects were Cudworth & Thompson of Norwich, the construction being done by Contractor Earle E. Gilbert, of Jewett City.

The attractive good will floral display was very beautiful and was much admired. The baskets were from—The Thames Bank and Trust Co., Norwich; Stone, Webster and Blodgett, Hartford; Pierce Incorporated, Hartford; Shaw and company, Hartford; First National Bank, Boston; Chas. Edw. Prior, Jr., Bridgeprt; Mrs. Melvin Barr, Jewett City Greenhouses, Old Cluey Watson Dahlia Garden.

The officers of the bank are: President, Arthur M. Brown; vice-presidents, John H. Tracey, Alex McNicol; secretary-treasurer Frank E. Robinson; assistant secretary-treasurer, Walter A. Hyde; directors, Frank E. Robinson, Lloyd G. Buckingham, Fred L. Kanahan, Earle E. Gilbert, Frank D. Browning, Harold F. Geer, George E. Norman. Miss S. K. Adams is the very efficient assistant, and Earl H. Robinson has recently been appointed clerk

The deposits are $2,610,404.72, with a surplus of $200,000. The resources comprise real estate loans, $1,406,490; collateral loans, $81,980; town and town school loans, $37,030; city bonds, $95,000; railroad bonds, $415,900: bank stocks, $243,028.50; public utility bonds, $316,133.75; foreign bonds, $271,751; real estate by foreclosure, $7,174.08; real estate advances, $719.66; real estate owned, $82,000; cash in hand and in banks, $45,657.86, totaling $3,002,914.35.

The gift souvenirs included, to the men a plate glass paper weight, showing a picture of the bank backed by a mirror, while each woman caller received a leather-bound notebook, and each child was presented a ruler. These, with the compliments of the bank, were distributed by Mrs. Jay Rickets of Hartford, Mrs. Earl H. Robinson and Miss Helen Hull.

CANTERBURY GREEN

News of the sudden death of James E. Towne, Saturday evening, Sept. 13, while out with a companion on a short fishing trip to South Canterbury, came as a shock to all. Though not in the best of health for a number of years he had apparently been as well of late as usual. The greater part of his life was spent in Canterbury, though he was born in Hampton, March 1, 1887, the son of William M. and Minnie E. Davis Towne. The family came to this town about 29 years ago. Nov. 10, 1920 he married Miss Grace Dodge of Plainfield. She died March 4, 1926, leaving an infant son, Stanley, who has always been cared for by his aunt, Mrs. Wesley Blanchard, now living in Phoenix, Ariz. After the death of his wife, Mr. Towne and his mother sold the family home and went to live with his sister, Mrs. Henry Larkham. For a time he was employed in Westbrook but on account of his health had returned several months since. During his life in Canterbury he was interested in the church, grange and town and had served all in various ways. At one time he was deacon of the Congregational church and for two years was master of the grange and had held town office. Of a pleasant and genial disposition he had many friends who regret his death. The funeral at the church Tuesday afternoon was largely attended, Rev. Harry Small conducting the service. A quartet, Sidney Mathewson, Mrs. John Bradford and Mrs. Lawrence Krause of Plainfield and Arthur Tracy sang Beautiful Isle of Somewhere and Face to Face. There were beautiful flowers, including pieces from the Odd Fellows order of which Mr. Towne was a member from the church, the grange and one in the name of the little son in Arizona. Relatives and friends were present from New Haven, Westbrook, New London, Hartford, Willimantic, Providence and West Warwick, R. I. The bearers, William Wright, Arthur Kinne, Arthur Bennett and Milo Appley were from the Odd Fellows, whose ritual was carried out at the grave, Rev. Mr. Small assisting. Burial was in the family lot at Westfield cemetery, in Danielson. The near surviving relatives are the mother, Mrs. Minnie Towne, the sister, Mrs. Henry Larkham, both of Canterbury, and the son, Stanley, of Arizona.

At the grange meeting Wednesday evening the master, Miss Dawley, gave a report of the N. E. Lecturers' conference at Durham, N. H., which she attended as a delegate. Arrangements were made by the various committees for their exhibit at the Brooklyn fair. The grange was invited to visit at Chaplin on Friday evening.

MOSLEM WOMEN UNVEIL FIRST TIME AT MAN'S LECTURE

This took place under the auspices of the Arab Women's committee which directs the feminist movement among Arab women in Palestine.

Approximately 200 women of the best Arab families, both Moslem and Christian, attended the lecture by Dr. Mansur Bey Fahmy, Egyptian philosopher, on the role of woman in private and public life.

The Arab Women's committee, formed after the riots, has shown much energy in pushing emancipation of Arab women and their participation in public life. Moslem and Christian women are working side by side in the task.

A few years ago she and her husband, also educated in the United States, came to Palestine, devoting themselves to organization of the Arabs.

Mr. Moghannam, a lawyer, is secretary to the Arab executive committee.

DANIELSON

STATE TO FREE DANIELSON RESERVOIR OF FISH

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 21 — There's going to be a big time fishing party up at the Chase reservoir at East Killingly Monday morning. Sportsmen are advised not to try and horn in on the affair, because they would be unwelcome. Explaining this, it may be recorded that the state has sent a crew of its experts from the fish and game department in there to remove as many fish as may be possible from one of the bodies of water that furnishes Danielson's supply. Edward Connery, an expert, is in charge.

What the reservoir will yield in varieties and pounds of fish cannot even be guessed at. It was "trapped" by the state three years ago, and at that time many fine pickerel, bass and perch were hauled out, and later distributed in other lakes and ponds within a radius of a few miles. There are indications that fish that escaped in that operation have propagated and that many additional fish of worthwhile size will be taken out Monday morning. Such fish as are caught within the traps will be distributed in the waters of Alexander's lake, Old Killingly pond and Moosup pond.

While at work in this town the state's men also will trap the Hygeia reservoir, near the icehouses on the Elmville-East Killingly highway. This is the main sources of water supply for Danielson.

The trapping operations are intensely interesting. On Saturday the crew in charge of the work under Mr. Connery were engaged in putting out the nets. They were to remain undisturbed from that time until the hauling operations start Monday morning.

The leads of the nets are approximately 150 feet in length. Then there are wings, also of net, reaching out many feet in either direction from the leads. One end of a lead is anchored ashore, the other end reaching far out in the reservoir. The upper sides of the nets are kept afloat by huge sections of cork, the lower ends anchored to the bottom. Set in position the lead and wings of the net make what approximate a letter T. It isn't such a good break for the fish. They get in there, get all tangled up, cannot get out and are eventually picked up and taken elsewhere, that Danielson's water supply may be even more pure and wholesome than it is.

Today Supt. W. E. Parker of Killingly's schools issued a warning that a man and a woman, representing themselves to be about on the errand by authority of the state board of education, are going about Danielson telling people who receive them at their homes that they are making an enumeration of children of school age resident within the town. These people are imposters. They do not represent the state board of education, and they have no authority whatsoever to be about asking for enumeration information. That work is being done officially in Danielson at this time by James R. Walsh of School street, the tax collector of the town, serving in a special and authorized capacity.

The objective back of the fake enumerators' efforts apparently is to sell books. The word is to pass them up.

It was given out over the week-end that the state board of education is very much gratified with the registration for the vocational school soon to open at Killingly high school building. The effort here represents the beginning of this special project of the state in Connecticut. The enrollment up to the week-end shows 90 persons registered for the food preparation classes, 49 in the class having to do with clothing, 24 for the interior decoration class and 18 in the course for home management.

A few more can be accomodated in the home management and afternoon clothing classes, if anyone wishes to enroll for either. Beginning Sept. 23, and continuing for a period of nine weeks, there will be classes six evenings each week in foods, clothing, interior decoration and home management. Also, there will be afternoon classes in foods and clothing.

Some time during the course of the present week the class schedules for each course will be announced.

Tuesday of this week will be entry day for the 81st annual exhibition of Windham County Agricultural society, which has held fairs at Brooklyn every fall since time runs not the contrary, insofar as the memory of living persons is concerned. The fair will not be much different this year than it has been for the past 25 years, which is one way of saying, that it is going to be a good, old-time exhibition of the products of the farm, a place of gathering for those who like to see each other on such occasions, sort of an old home day, and a reminder that, after all, the stability of the nation, the people of which have to eat every day, still rests with the tillers of the soil.

In the past two decades agriculture in this country has advanced from any hit-and-miss system of procedure that may have existed before that time to a really scientific calling. The farmers of Windham county are in the forefront in Connecticut of the state's farm managers who do things in a modern way. Their exhibits at the fair will demonstrate this in convincing manner.

In a fog at the foot of Shippee hill, on the Danielson-Wauregan state highway about midnight last night, cars owned and operated by Postmaster W. Franklin Sheldon of Moosup and Joseph Chumira of Jewett City crashed. Postmaster Sheldon's car was southbound from Danielson, the other machine headed in a northerly direction. There were no personal injuries and no arrests. Both cars were considerably damaged. The accident is charged largely to the fog that prevailed, obscuring the vision of the operators of the cars.

Monday evening at sunset Hebrews resident in and near Danielson will gather for the services marking the observance of the Hebrew New Year, in Majestic theatre. From that time on a series of services will be held through Tuesday and Wednesday. The feast of Rosh Hashannah begins as day wanes on Monday. Ten days thereafter comes Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement. Rabbi Solomon Globus will conduct the local services.

In aid of its various needs and projects, Leo J. L'Homme post, American Legion, has planned to produce a minstrel show in late October. The cast will include many of the very capable amateur thespians that Danielson happens to number among its people. Joseph A. Charbonneau, recently removed here from Worcester, will be the director.

The Windham County National Bank of Danielson will close at 1:00 p. m., Wednesday, Sept. 24th, on account of the Brooklyn fair.—adv.

The street fair, held Friday evening and Saturday afternoon and evening on the Broad street side of Davis park was a pleasing success. The affair was held in the interest of the Nurses' Home fund of the Day Kimball hospital at Putnam.

Plans are now complete for the big benefit boxing show to be held at the state armory here next Friday evening. Promoter Frank Barber will present the greatest galaxy of fistic stars, several of them of world-wide fame, that this section of Connecticut ever has attracted at one time.

Some of the sock pheasants that men encounter while roaming the countryside the past week-end are so tame that they have to be driven out of one's path much as one would chase away a hen. It will be all different than that after the hunters begin to blast away at them. The hunting season opens October 20.

Miss Margaret Head and her nephew, Leo McDonald, left this afternoon for Winsted to attend the wedding of a relative in that place on Tuesday morning.

The horseshoe pitching fad continues in full flower as autumn dawns all through this territory. This intriguing pastime has attracted more followers and developed more good "shooters" than the average person hereabouts realizes.

The Help-a-Bit society of East Killingly has made a donation of $100 to the Haven Endowment fund. Officers of the East Killingly organization are Mrs. H. H. Beaman, president, and Mrs. Amy Boffington, secretary-treasurer.

If voters in a special meeting of the borough to be held early this week so authorize, a sewer will be built through Potter street, where one has been needed for a long time.

Out of the 179 persons, men and women who filed applications to be made voters, 126 were admitted as electors when the selectmen and town clerk met in the town hall building Saturday. Presumably, the majority of these new voters will cast their first ballots in the town election on the first Monday in October.

Mrs. W. Fenner Woodward was in Hartford today to visit with her husband, head of the town court, who is a patient in a hospital in that city.

Mr. and Mrs. James R. Walsh, their daughter, Miss Mary Walsh, and Miss Mary Geer, motored to Middleboro, Mass., today for a visit with friends.

Though a drought that has endured with few breaks from early summer still exists throughout this territory, the water in the Chase and Hygeia reservoirs near East Killingly and from which Danielson water service is supplied, are at a higher level this week end than at the same period last year.

Charles S. Francis was in Hartford today to visit with Mrs. Francis, who is a patient at the Hartford hospital.

Francis E. Storer, president of the Thames Bank and Trust company of Norwich, and resident here, and Mrs. Storer, plan to spend several days on Cape Cod during the coming week.

He reminded the parents of children of Sunday school age to send them to Sunday school which commences after the 8:30 mass. The pastor again thanked his parishioners for their wonderful co-operation and good will during the recent fair which gave gross receipts of $1,008. After deducting expenses such as the orchestra, rent of hall, advertisements, etc., the net profit was $1,025, which will go toward the fund for building the new church.

PUTNAM

TOWN NOT TO ALLOW PARKING ON CEMETERY CURVE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 21.—With an aim for the prevention of a possible automobile tragedy, the board of selectmen have taken steps to have a number of "no parking" signs made, which will be posted at intervals along the west side approach to the hazardous cemetery curve at the intersection of Grove street and Killingly avenue. Since the creation of a miniature golf course on the lots at the foot of the embankment below the treacherous bend in the highway, cars have been carelessly parked along the approach while the owners watch the doings on the thumbnail golf links below. Accidents, it is understood, have been narrowly averted since these dangers became imminent a few weeks ago.

The dangers lurking at this point are unsurpassed and since the building of the road a number of years ago, automobile mishaps occurring there have been innumerable. Proprietors of the popular attraction in that vicinity have done everything in their power to induce the automobile galleries to drive into the suitable parking area away from the danger zone, but still the number of motorists who insist upon remaining in the highway is too great for safety's sake, thereby necessitating the action of the selectmen.

On Friday afternoon, a large, heavily loaded truck and coupe crashed into each other on this curve, resulting in serious injury to one of the passengers involved in the collision and a large amount of damage to the vehicles. An investigation by state police disclosed that the accident was caused when the driver of the light car allowed his mind to become occupied with something, other than the operation of his automobile. Town officials hope that the posting of traffic signs will prove effective in eliminating present conditions at the cemetery curve, since only those familiar with the road can possibly conceive the grade dangers existing at this point.

State police at Danielson barracks have concerned themselves with the capture of a New York bandit and gunman who staged a hold-up of an A. & P. store in Southbridge Friday evening. The man walked into the store shortly before the closing hour and thrusting a gun into the stomach of the store manager, demanded the contents of the cash drawer. He was promptly obliged by the frightened storeman and departed hurriedly in a public service car. Police alarms flashed to police posts all over New England by means of the teletype brought about the apprehension of the bandit by police in Palmer, Mass. Lieut. R. V. Urquhart, at Danielson, intimated that Connecticut investigation will probably be made with a view of linking the gunman with the robbery of the Main street A & P. store, occurring in this city more than a month ago.

Norwich folk will regret to learn of the death in New Bedford, on September 8, of Mrs. Sarah Rigby Woods, aunt of Supt. L. H. Mellor of the Putnam Spinners Co., of this city. Mrs. Woods resided in Norwich for many years where she became widely known. During her residence there, she made her home with Mr. and Mrs. William Burton. The funeral of Mrs. Woods took place in New Bedford last Thursday.

There was a large number of baseball fans gathered at Adams field this afternoon where the B H Silk Sox clashed with the "Old Timers" who returned from depths of oblivion to re-enact episodes of their one time diamond days.

"Nothing But the Truth," a three-act comedy-drama, was presented to a large sized audience at the Bradley theatre Friday evening as a benefit for the nurses' home fund of the Day Kimball hospital. The cast was composed of Pomfret and Putnam amateur players.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Reardon, of Pawtucket, spent Saturday as the guests of friends in this city.

Miss Alice Perry, student at Willimantic Normal school, spent the week end at her home on Grove street.

Miss Rose and Miss Mary McCormack have returned to their home in North Grosvenordale after spending part of the summer at their former home in Ireland. They docked in Boston Sunday evening, making the return voyage in fast time under favorable sailing conditions.

With the setting of the sun Monday evening, local Hebrews will join members of their race throughout the world in setting aside their daily routine to pause for two days in prayer and meditation which is part of the observance of the New Year, known in Jewish rites as Rosh Hashannah. According to the calendar of Israel, Monday's feast marks the beginning of the year 5691 and will also introduce the most important days of the Hebrew year, including the observance of Yom Kippur, the holiest of holy days, which begins at sun down on Wednesday and continues through Thursday, and the week of Sukkoth or the feast of the tabernacles, October 6 to the 18th. During the observance of Rosh Hashannah, Jews will hold services at the local synagogue on Main street.

The autumn season was officially ushered in today, but there was not the slightest sign of a seasonal change having taken place. The weather was ideal and bright skies with a warm summer sun, prevailing during the entire day kept the mercury at its normal summer marks.

A golf tournament staged Thursday evening on the miniature Grove street greens, for the benefit of the nurses' home of the Day Kimball hospital, netted the fund a considerable amount. INTOXICATED MAN USES KNIFE ON POLICE OFFICER

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Sept. 21—Robert A. Hughes, aged 56 years, of Pawcatuck, was the cause of a fight in which the weapons were a jacknife and a blackjack, on West Broad street Friday night in which other participants were Pawcatuck Patrolmen George L. Seidel and Adin R. Sheldon. The melee occurred under the dry bridge of the New Haven railroad. As a result Hughes is in New London county jail in default of $1,000 bonds for his appearance in New London county superior court. He came before Judge William A. Wilcox on Saturday morning in a special session of Stonington town court on complaint of Prosecutor Henry P. Hammacher, charging an aggravated assault. A plea of not guilty was made through his attorney, George R. McKenna of Pawcatuck.

Hughes was reported on the Westerly side of the Pawcatuck river in an intoxicated condition early in the evening. At the time he was said to have uttered threats against Officer Seidel and was warned by Westerly police to go to his home. When Officer Seidel was seen on West Broad street, Hughes quickly drew the knife from his pocket and lunged at the police officer. They grappled and fell in the road with the officer endeavoring to wrest the knife from his assailant. Freeing one hand, Officer Seidel swung his black jack over Hughes' head, opening up a cut which later required the attention of Dr. William A. Hillard at the Liberty street lockup where Hughes was eventually landed. This was not accomplished until after day Police Officer Adin R. Sheldon, who came from the Central theatre, had rushed to Seidel's assistance. The clothing of all the participants was spattered with blood.

D., of 1812, of the Memorial to American Naval Officers who were buried within the shadows of the Mother Church in 1813, in Plymouth, England. This gesture of peace and good will between the two great English-speaking nations is recorded in the inscription on a granite tablet which contains the tombstone of the American officers. The inscription reads, "Sacred to the memory of William Henry Allyn, Esq. 27 years, late Commander of the United States brig Argus, who died August 18, 1813, in consequence of the wound received in action August 14, 1813. BRADFORD AND AYLING

Two important conventions were held in Norwich on Saturday. One was for the nomination of the republican candidate for high sheriff for the county and the other was to name the probate judge for the Norwich district. In each instance the outcome was in accord with expectations and there are reasons for believing that the action taken will receive the approval and support of the citizens throughout the county and district.

George H. Bradford was renominated as sheriff. He was picked for that office by Governor Trumbull following the death of Sheriff Brown last March. In the six months or more that he has held the office he has met every expectation, justified the confidence that was placed in him by the governor, and displayed a fitness for the office that upheld the sentiment that was freely expressed at the time of his appointment.

Sheriff Bradford knows New London county thoroughly. He has served for years as county commissioner, has had valuable legislative experience and possesses the many qualifications that are demanded of the one in the office of sheriff. Wherever Sheriff Bradford has been placed in offices of public trust he has made good and probably no more logical choice as the successor of Sheriff Brown could have been made. It was thus an endorsement of the wise selection made by the governor, as well as the desire that he continue in office, that was expressed by the county convention. His renomination should make a strong appeal to the voters, among whom he has an extensive acquaintance, and by whom, regardless of party, he is held in high esteem. With Sheriff Brown, his nomination was almost as good as an election, and there is every reason why the same should be true with Sheriff Bradford. Anyone who knows him knows that State Attorney Brown was correct in referring to him as a man of tact, ability, courage, dignity, experience, and always courteous.

It is a long and enviable record which Nelson J. Ayling has made as judge of probate in this district. The manner in which he has conducted that important office for the past quarter of a century has made a most favorable impression throughout the entire district. He has displayed an efficiency which has been recognized by both political parties, so that, for the last several years, he has received the democratic as well as the republican nomination. No better evidence of satisfactory administration could be asked and no better recognition of the advisability of keeping such an office from being made a football in politics could be sought.

Judge Ayling has labored most diligently and carefully in handling the business before his court. Experience has made him well versed in probate law, and that large number who have had business in this district's probate court know in what a conscientious and thorough manner their affairs have been handled.

Repeatedly the voters of the Norwich district expressed the conviction that Judge Ayling is the man needed in that office. It is an office where demonstrated fitness and ability should mean retention during good behavior. That there has been such a demonstration is evidenced by nominations from both parties in recent years and there are good reasons for believing that this clearly voices the sentiment of the entire district.

NEW YORK'S CONVENTION

Politically, eyes will be turned to the New York state convention which the republicans will hold at Albany. It will attract more attention than the democratic gathering in that state because the democrats are facing a renomination and there is no controversy looming concerning their platform.

The one name mentioned prominently in New York state for the republican gubernatorial nomination is that of Charles H. Tuttle, who recently resigned as United States attorney, and who also has set forth his views concerning prohibition. He doesn't wish to be understood, however, as working for the nomination. The one and only thing that appears to stand in the way is the wet question. Because of that, Mr. Tuttle took occasion to make clear his views in advance for the enlightenment of all.

There is a strong wet sentiment which is bound to manifest itself at the Albany convention. It will find its efforts opposed by the drys, who have not only threatened to put a dry candidate into the field if a wet platform is adopted, but who will point out that former Senator Wadsworth lost while running as a pronounced wet.

Just how New York republicans will endeavor to shape the prohibition, or anti-prohibition, plank remains for the committee discussions to disclose, but President Butler of Columbia is expected to lead the wets, and he has a plank which calls for enforcement as long as the 18th amendment remains, but urging repeal and pledging measures that will promote temperance, abolish the saloon and bring the liquor traffic under public control.

From all indications, the aim of the convention will be to obtain a compromise plank by which majority sentiment will be satisfied. There is recognition of the dry strength within the party ranks and the effect that could be expected should a third candidate be put into the field. There is no possibility that the dry candidate could win, but there is the probability that such a candidacy would make it much easier for the democratic candidate by dividing the republican vote.

DARTMOUTH BANS HAZING

Dartmouth has gone on record in regard to hazing, in keeping with many other educational institutions. It has been customary for the freshmen to go through certain stunts as their introduction to college life. Report has it that hazings are not what they used to be, and have been dying out, but it will be noted that it was by order of the student governing body, rather than by edicts of the president or faculty, that it has been eliminated.

Hazing is a practice of earlier days. It is possible, and such may have been the practice in the beginning, for certain forms of hazing to be indulged in without harm. But it is a well known fact that it makes all the difference in the world who is guiding the stunts. It is possible to carry them far beyond all reason and it was in so doing that various students being hazed lost their lives or were crippled. That might, and probably was not, the intention of the hazers, but they allowed their stunting to go far beyond the bounds of common sense. They resorted to the dangerous. They indulged in reckless acts without giving consideration to the possible outcome. They were out for fun at any cost. They were intent upon combating resistance and they were determined to put the newcomers in their place. Their hazing ran away with them and caused such a reaction that prompt and effective measures were taken to prevent anything of the kind in the future.

No other logical result could have been expected. Conditions were disclosed which could not be tolerated. It was a revelation in many instances to know that such hazings were conducted. Evidently the knowledge of what has been done elsewhere, the disclosures regarding hazing in general and the realization of its dangers in thoughtless hands, made an impression upon the Dartmouth student body that called for action without waiting for something serious to happen during a hazing at Hanover.

The decision, it is believed, will be recognized as a timely and sane one. It undertakes a desirable correction through prevention. The freshmen will welcome it and there will be plenty other wholesome fun in college life to adequately recompense for any possible loss in connection with the abolition.

CUBAN GRATITUDE

While there will be no question that Cuba had a perfect right to do as it pleased, and to take such a stand as it desired, relative to the provision whereby the way would be opened for the entrance of the United States into the world court according to the Root formula, there was, nevertheless, surprise here and among other countries that opposition was raised by Cuba.

The United States made certain reservations in regard to joining the world court. They were not acceptable to all the other countries and there was a conference which resulted in the production of the Root plan, explaining the attitude of this country, providing what it was believed was a method whereby any and all objections would be eliminated.

It is necessary that all countries give their approval to the plan. Thirty-four of them have ratified it. None of the others have objected except Cuba, and, because all must approve, that action by Cuba, expressed by its ambassador to Washington before the league meeting at Geneva, blocks the way. But for the action of Cuba, the plan would have gone into effect this month, inasmuch as the failure of the others to object would have been considered tantamount to approval.

As a matter of fact, the Root plan has not been ratified as yet by the United States. It had been planned to have it brought before the senate at the coming session, and it was figured that endorsement by the league and the readiness to have it go into effect at once would have its good effect in the upper house of congress. What the effect upon the senate would have been is decidedly uncertain, but it is evident that Cuba has stepped in to block it and to contribute its assistance to the opposition, for it is inevitable that it will have a reaction in that direction. If this is so, the Cuban declaration will bother those among the other nations who are desirous of American adherence, even as it does those backers of the world court in the United States. Certainly, if there was nothing for 34 of the other countries to lose by allowing United States admission to the world court under the Root plan, it is difficult to see where it would prove harmful to Cuba.

What interpretation are the allied nations going to give to the large protest vote in Germany?

When the meek inherit the earth it will be a great day for the irrepressible house-to-house agent.

The man on the corner says: Why not a census to learn how many magazine salesmen actually make college?

Now that Professor Levitt has been dropped from his teaching job in New York, will he ask the public utilities commission to get him reinstated?

H. P. Long of Louisiana having been nominated for senator is now being touted by his friends for president. That is one of the Long booms that will prove to be short.

Just as it is decided to withdraw the last of the allied soldiers from the Saar basin, Germany shows a political change tending strongly toward repudiation of the Young plan.

LUCKY CHANCE

"Now, Regina, I ask you," the young man offered unhappily. "It'd be just my luck to win that ham and what would I do with it? It's a family man's ham and I haven't even a landlady. I live at a young men's club, as you know. I couldn't walk in on a fiery chef and expect him to fall on my neck with three cheers if I presented him with a ham. Hams are nothing whatever in his life but a nuisance to be overcome. I don't know any poor and deserving family with a kettle big enough to cook it. The ham is out. Got any chances on a good airplane?"

"Don't be contrary, Herbert," the pretty girl begged him beguilingly. "I want to sell more chances than Henrietta does. I'll pass out with plain mad if I don't. You won't win it; you know you won't. Nobody you ever heard of ever does win anything. A timid little woman about 70 who never ran anything more complicated than a sewing machine won the $4,000 racing car at the bazaar a year ago. The car has never been seen since she was driven away in it."

"Are you suggesting that if I am unfortunate enough to win this ham I am slated to do a Houdini disappearance?" he wanted to know. "I don't believe you'd care if I did — would you?"

"I'll draw an envelope for you," she told him artfully. "There! Your card says 69 cents. That is certainly cheap enough for a fifteen-pound ham. In fact, it is a great bargain, and I think you should be grateful for my interest in securing it for you. Not that you stand any show of winning it. Why, I myself have taken chances on the electric washing machine, the vacuum cleaner, the dinner dishes and the aluminum kitchen set. I am not in the least worried about winning any of them—"

"Look here" the young man burst out. "maybe we could work some sort of a combination. It would be sheer extravagance to throw away all those household utensils, to say nothing of a ham large enough to feed us—any one, indefinitely. Why, two persons could live for weeks on a fifteen-pound ham! Do you realize that? And do you see that my number is seven come eleven? I have the most overwhelming sensation in my left ear that tells me without any doubt that 7-11 wins the ham. It's up to you—"

"Don't be a silly," dimpled the pretty girl. "Now I've got to go and sell more chances to that late crowd just coming in the door."

"Mercenary," the young man told her bitterly. "That's what you are. Nothing less. Get a man's money and you're through with him. Nothing of the Samaritan about you—you'd leave him dying in the ditch crushed by a fifteen pound ham—"

"You're raving," she assured him. "All jumbled. Be calm, like me. I'm not worrying over what I shall do if I win the electric washing machine —"

"You don't have to," the young man scoffed. "You know all you have to do is marry me and wash my shirts and collars forever—look at any of the ads. You would sit all handsomely gowned and with your hair waved, reading the latest book and eating chocolates while the electric machine chugged and worked for you! Good old machine! It ought to go in the parlor, at least. Say, I'm serious. This shower of household goods has unleashed my tongue, that's all. It seems a heaven-sent opportunity. Which side of town do you want to live on?"

"I've heard of composing an entire spring outfit from one scarf or a hat just the right shade," the pretty girl said with very pink cheeks. "Still, this is the first time I ever saw any one trying to base his whole wedded life on a fifteen pound ham. I—listen, they're calling the winners!"

"Ticket 7-11 wins the ham!" the barker shouted down the hall.

"Oh, Regina," panted a small girl racing up, "didja know your name was drawn and you've won the aluminum set? Didja?"

"Come along," the young man stuttered, grabbing the pretty girl by the arm. "Come along over here back of the pasteboard garden wall and let's talk this over. We just can't help ourselves, is the way I look at it!"

Let Us Be Conscious—Sensitive To The Hard Of Hearing

By Alice G. Bryant, M. D., Boston.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

The hard-of-hearing without lip-reading—the tool to work with—have become veritable education snatchers; they have trodden glimmering pathways, for the beacon-lights of education appear to them dimmed.

Many children and adults—among the hard-of-hearing—are incessantly struggling to overcome their handicaps. Lip-reading, medical diagnosis and procedures have salvaged many hard-of-hearing lives from the purposeless, dreary and gainless pathways of life.

The hard-of-hearing go out into the great wide world to seek a living of continuous progress. Their experiences are not treasured adventures, for their training has not been on an equal footing with their hearing comrades.

Class-repeatings are familiar, acutely offensive and revolting to their intelligence; they lack the hall-mark of self-respect, and they are reflections upon their moral fibre.

The hard-of-hearing have not the full use of the hearing sense and lip-reading plays an all-important part in making up for the deficiency, for it is the spoken word that brings as much of our knowledge and many of our social contacts. It means a fuller and richer self-expression in thought, word and action. The National Education association placed its seal of approval upon this outstanding movement when it created a department of lip-reading.

Each succeeding year presents a new record in finding the hard-of-hearing, in the increasing use and in a growing demand of lip-reading and in a deeper and keener sense of the medical problems. We are ot relying upon history or opinion for our data, we have facts and they are positive, informative and effective.

We want a speeding-up of the movement and we want more than a piece-meal development in our country. We want to provide a satisfactory solution of the problem. Conditions must be shaped to meet the hard-of-hearing failures in education. There is no wisdom in setting up an unreasonable standard of approach or action in the education of the hard-of-hearing. The essential point was the working result.

What, then, is the way out in meeting the problems of the hard-of-hearing? The answer is obvious. We look to our councillors of education and school administrative authorities to be in possession of the facts, to give informative points, to coordinate in a national survey, to determine and sponsor the movement whole-heartedly, to keep it actively functioning, to reach the public eye, and to give expression to the movement in language which the layman may understand.

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21— When "Kunnel" George Harvey went to London as ambassador in President Harding's time, he had a great problem to face. He found it very difficult to avoid being mistaken for a butler or a waiter when he showed up at official functions, even in day time clad in the soup-and-fish regalia of conventional civilian evening dress.

His diplomatic colleagues turned out in their respective diplomatic uniforms, bullion-heavy, long-tailed coats, medals orders, ribbons and what-not, all very fine to see. It made "Kunnel" George's plain black and white have a very flunkyish look. So he broke out black silk knee britches and stockings to go with his dress coat after awhile, and everything was lovely. Also, he got a lot of publicity at home about those short pants and was unmercifully kidded by humorous writers.

Problem

And now comes "Jack" MacNider, minister to Canada, doing his first diplomatic job. Goodness knows he rates a lot of decorations; but they are all war stuff, won in France by most conspicuous gallantry in action.

This Iowa ex-member of the Coolidge "little cabinet" group and ex-national commander of the American Legion could show a breast laden with medals, crosses and other valued personal ornaments if it were a military occasion. Also, he's an actual infantry colonel, a combat colonel at that.

But how was he to cope with the formalities of his official reception in Ottawa when he presented his letters? If he conformed to custom he would merely dig out the old dress suit and let it go at that. To have plastered it with his truly impressive array of military decorations would have been a terrible social error.

Still, everybody who knows Jack would expect him to find a way out of his trouble. He has imagination. And it was not necessary to pattern himself on "Kunnel" Harvey either and don black-silk plus-fours.

Solution

What he did was turn himself out in military full dress of his rank in the reserve corps. Not the sombor khaki or olive-drab of war days—no, sir. His Excellency showed up in the long dark blue tunic and light blue trousers of the old army full dress, a pre-war outfit only recently restored by the war department for option wear by officers on gala occasions.

It has bullion shoulder knots, gleaming buttons, wide stripes down the trousers and all the rest of it. And, being in uniform, it was only proper for His Excellency to display his military decorations.

Truly, there has been no American diplomat in a long time so handsomely set up. And the outfit must have been specially ordered for that Ottawa show.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Shadow Does Return

Whate'er you do, do with your might,
But first be sure that you are right.
—Old Mother Nature.

Impy, the black Chipmunk, hadn't lived long enough to have the wisdom of his father, Striped Chipmunk. When pretty little Mrs. Impy insisted that the entrance to their home should be closed and another entrance made, Impy didn't agree with her at all. It seemed to him like a waste of time and energy. That was a perfectly good entrance they had and he could see no reason for making another.

"I suppose you think that Shadow, the Weasel has gone for good," said little Mrs. Impy.

"Why not?" said Impy. "Why should he return when he couldn't find any one here?"

"I guess you don't know Shadow very well," said Mrs. Impy. "Shadow doesn't forget. There was no one at home when he made his last visit, but he knows that somebody lives here. The first time that he passes this way again he'll stop to visit this house of ours. If we have an open door he is going to come right in; and what chance will we have if he surprises us? We haven't got to give up our home. No, sir, we haven't got to give up our home. All we need do is to build a new entrance and close the old one. Just plain common sense says that is the thing to do."

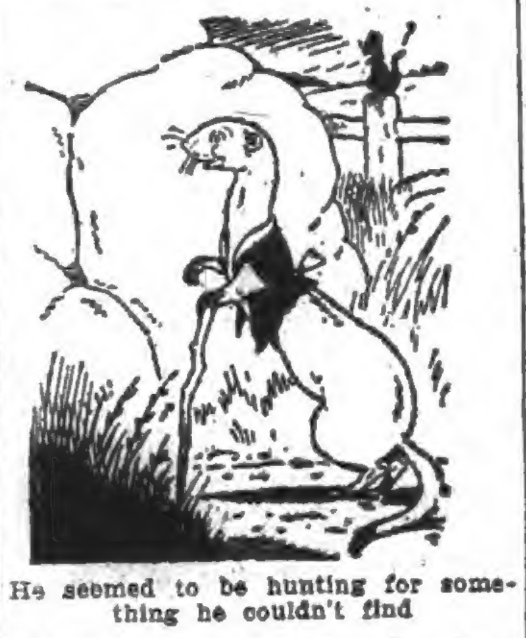
Impy wasn't convinced, but he said nothing. He had learned who was head of the household, wherein he was smarter than some people I know. Having found out who was head of the household, he was wise enough to let the head have her way. It saved a lot of argument and trouble and in the end the results were the same.

"All right, my dear," said Impy. "If you say we must have a new doorway, it is all right with me. Where shall it be?"

"I've got the place already chosen," said little Mrs. Impy, who, as you may have discovered, was a very practical person. She wanted what she wanted when she wanted it. At the same time she knew what it was she wanted.

"Shall I begin filling up this entrance?" inquired Impy, and started to push some sand in.

"Yes," replied little Mrs. Impy, "but not from the outside. I'm afraid you haven't been well trained, Impy. The idea of closing that door from the outside, telling everybody what you are doing! The only way to close a door is to close it from the inside. Then you can pack the entrance hall full and there will be no chance of being dug out."



He seemed to be hunting for something he couldn't find

So little Mrs Impy went to work to make the new entrance, and she also worked from the inside. While she was doing this Impy was closing the old entrance. So it was that, in course of time, the Chipmunk home had a new entrance in quite another spot. It was not at all near the old entrance. All the time he was at work Impy thought it was all foolishness. He didn't think Shadow would come back. However, he was wise enough to say nothing.

Three days after the new entrance had been made and the old one closed Impy was sitting on the top of a fence post. By chance he caught a glimpse of a brown form moving swiftly. His heart almost stopped beating. It was Shadow, the Weasel, beyond a doubt. Impy kept his eyes fixed on Shadow. Straight to the very place where the old entrance to Impy's home had been went Shadow the Weasel. There he stopped and began to look all about. There was a puzzled expression on his face. He seemed to be hunting for something that he couldn't find, and he was quite unable to understand why he couldn't find it. He ran rapidly this way and that way, with his nose to the ground. At last he gave up, and with a snarl bounded away.

"You see, he did come back," whispered a voice in Impy's ear.

"Yes, my dear," replied Impy. "You were right, as you always are. I am glad we had this new entrance."

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

Armstrong Manufacturing Co., Bridgeport.

The beginnings of the Armstrong Manufacturing company are to be found in the partnership which was formed between Frank Armstrong and Henry House in 1869. Frank Armstrong, the leading spirit of the concern, was the first person to introduce American sewing machines into Europe. This venture was daring, interesting and profitable. The company at first manufactured knitting machines, metal spring suspenders and spring garters and in 1871 incorporated as The Armstrong & House Manufacturing company.

A few years later, 1875, the company began to market a line of new tools which met with such world wide success as to necessitate the building of a larger factory. In a very short time this line of new pipe tools, and particularly the Armstrong adjustable stocks and dies were in the hands of pipe fitters in every part of the world. At about the same time, Frank Armstrong bought out Henry House, dissolved the corporation and continued the business as F. Armstrong.

Up to the third quarter of the 19th century, only solid blocks of tool steel bored and threaded were used to cut screw threads on pipe. These blocks were round or square. In 1875 Frank Armstrong developed and introduced the first two piece adjustable pipe die which was the first of a series of improvements featured by Mr. Armstrong in the art of holding, cutting and threading of pipe.

Closely following the introduction of the Armstrong adjustable stock and dies, the threaded throat die was developed, about 1879. Heretofore a leading screw had been employed to pull the threading dies on to the pipe. With the manufacture of the Armstrong "threads in throat" die, the leading screw was omitted from the Armstrong diestock, and this materially reduced the cost of the tools as well as lessened the labor and effort needed to thread pipe. The Armstrong hinged pipe vise. Armstrong pipe cutter, both in one and three wheel types, and the Armstrong pipe wrench were also developed by Frank Armstrong and his engineers.

During the 70's, 80's and 90's of the past century many other improved tools were invented, developed and marketed under the Armstrong banner. Among others were lathe dogs, work clamps, nipple chucks and adjustable pipe guides.

The business continued to expand and in 1882 Frank Armstrong built the factory on Knowlton street and within the year moved into the present quarters. The popularity of the Armstrong pipe tools increased so rapidly that the manufacture of other merchandise was gradually abandoned. The present Armstrong Manufacturing company was incorporated in March 1886 with Frank Armstrong as its first president.

During the World war, the United States government practically commandeered the entire output of the factory to help win the war. During that time a large addition to the plant was built.

On May 1, 1928, the control passed to another member of the family, Bernard I. Ashmun, a son-in-law, who became president. Mr. Ashmun's first connection was that of salesman in 1893. In 1907 he became general manager. He is assisted by his son, Frederick S., who is the secretary and treasurer, and his brother, Harry S., who is vice president in charge of sales and advertising.

Since the recent change in management, the company has been actively engaged in modernizing the equipment and developing new lines of pipe tools in accordance with the most recent practice. Among the more recent lines added to the tools which have been serving pipe users in every country of the world are the Armstrong dies for threading brass pipe. The necessity for this development has been caused by the rapidly growing use of brass pipe, a very large percentage of which is manufactured in Connecticut. Other items recently added or in process are pipe vise stands, vise posts and material improvements in tools for threading pipe.

Representatives of the Armstrong Manufacturing company visit the trade in the United States and Canada. Agencies and exclusive dealers take care of their interests in every corner of the globe.

During the 61 years of constant growth and expansion, the Armstrong Manufacturing company is still the outstanding manufacturer of its class of tools.

Norwich Produce Market

The market was generally steady and with but few price changes. Peach season is practically over. Supplies were very light and stock mostly overripe. Apples were liberal but buying slow. McIntosh were in most demand with good stock generally available. Most vegetables continued moderate in supply and in normal demand. Good sweet corn was scarce.

Potatoes remained firm and showed a little more price gain for most markets of the state. The bulk of trading on natives which made up nearly the total supply on sale was at $1.25 a bushel. Reports from outside markets indicate a little weaker tone and slightly lower prices than the fore part of the week.

Poultry and eggs were unchanged with very little apparent activity along these lines for the coming Hebrew holidays.

FIRE ON C. V. PIER SUNDAY— BOILER HOUSE IS DESTROYED

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 21.—A two-alarm fire called out practically the entire department of the city this afternoon, when one of the small piers owned by the Central Vermont railroad was threatened with destruction. Although the dock was not destroyed it was damaged beyond repair. Before the blaze was extinguished, a fire boat of the United States navy rendered assistance.

The fire was discovered about 3:30 and was located on one of the two small hoisting piers of the railroad, situated on the shore of Winthrop's cove, close to the railroad bridge. The pier was a mass of flames when discovered and an alarm was sent in from the box, corner of Main and Federal streets. Chief Thomas Shipman and four pieces of apparatus responded, but before water could be turned on the fire the boiler house had ignited and strings of freight cars were also threatened with destruction. A second alarm was sent in, summoning additional companies, and switch engines pulled the endangered cars to the other points of the big railroad yard. With the arrival of additional apparatus a deluge was turned upon the flames and the navy tug, which is equipped with fire-fighting facilities and which was moored at the state pier, went to the assistance of the New London department. The tug took up a position close to the pier and poured two streams of water from the river upon the burning underpinning. Within a half hour after the second alarm was sent in the fire had been extinguished. Besides the pier being badly damaged, the boiler house was entirely destroyed. The volume of smoke which arose from the pier seemed to indicate that a much more serious blaze existed. The pier had not been used for about ten years, but prior to its abandonment barges were unloaded there of their cargoes of copper and other ore that were brought to port and then forwarded to points to the north by rail.

CITIZENS SWAMP KACEYS 11 TO 1 TO WIN BASEBALL CROWN OF N. L. COUNTY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 21. — The Norwich Polish Citizens became champions of New London county this afternoon at Mercer field before 4,500 fans as they made it three out of four over the local Kaceys in their five-game series. The score was 11 to 1.

The Rose City team held the upper hand all the way behind the steady pitching of Johnny Greene. They pounded Tilly Daniels, Kacey ace, for 13 solid hits while Johnny with the lead that his mates kept piling up, never really had to extend himself.

Game Goes Off Smoothly

The game, which was the playoff of last Sunday's memorable no-contest affair, was the only uninteresting one of the series. The Cits had taken the first two, 2 to 1 and 3 to 2, lost the third, 2 to 0, and then fought to a scoreless draw that ended in a riot in the tenth inning. There was hardly any trouble today among the capacity crowd. A few minor disturbances that threatened were soon quelled by the policemen present.

The Cits scored in six of the nine innings, tallying one each in the first three frames, three in the fifth, four in the seventh and one more in the eighth. The lone Kacey run came in the sixth when Greene had a six-run margin.

The big guns of the Citizens attack broke loose today in all their fury. Lloyd Jarvis came out of his slump that had carried him hitless through the four previous games and today connected for three singles in five trips to the plate, while Tony West had a double and two singles. Nap Liberty, who appeared in the Norwich lineup today for the first time in the series, also had three hits. Liberty did not play with the Cits during the league season but neither did Whiton play with the Kaceys so that things were rather evenly balanced.

Cimmy Fields Brilliantly

The fielding features were provided by Cimikoski, who made several brilliant plays in the Norwich shortfield. Cimmy and Nap Liberty engineered a snappy double play in the fifth inning that stopped the Kacey's one real menacing gesture. Leo Jarvis also made a couple of nice plays in right field.

The first run for the Cits was not long in coming. Cimikoski, second batter in the first inning, was safe on John McInnis' bad throw to first. Lloyd Jarvis singled to left, sending Cimmy to third and Tony West walloped a hit off the first baseman's glove, scoring the shortstop.

Number two, in the second, was the result of a pass to Lamory, his stolen base and a bad throw to second on the play which allowed Lamory to make third, and Gaudette's double to left. West's double and Liberty's single made it 3 to 0 at the end of the third.

A pass to Leo Jarvis, sacrifice by Cimikoski on which Coyle threw the ball into right field, and putting runners on second and third, a single by Lloyd Jarvis, scoring the two, an infield out and Liberty's hit to left accounted for the three in the fifth. Then, in the big seventh, any further doubt as to the final result was dispelled with the following actions: Doubles by Cimikoski and Finn, singles by Lloyd Jarvis and West, an error and an infield out. Result four runs. The final tally in the eighth came on singles by Leo Jarvis and Liberty, together with an infield out.

The Kacey's run came on Whiton's double and Smith's single.

Win Vindicates Norwich Ball

This win was a big victory for the brand of ball played in Norwich as against that in New London, bringing together as it did the City league champions of both cities. It brought the championship of the county back to Norwich after it had rested in New London for a year, after the Socony took two straight from the Smoke Shop in 1929, the first of the intercity clashes. This series, without doubt, will become an annual fixture as the set of games which ended yesterday, was very popular with the fans of both places.

NOTES OF THE GAME

There was plenty of the long green that changed hands on the outcome.

The only casualty of the day was a broken nose suffered by a fair fan in the first base bleachers, the result of a wild throw by Tuneski in the seventh.

The umpiring, performed by Messrs. Elliott and Nelson of Hartford, was very good and drew nary a kick from either team or from the large crowd.

This crowd, by the way, was just about a record for Mercer field and probably for any other field in eastern Connecticut. The overflow in center field made two-base hits on ball hit into the crowd.

Pete Finn, who didn't arrive until just before game-time, doubled in the seventh and became the only man on both clubs to hit safely in all five games of the series. His record, incidentally, was eight hits in 19 trips to the plate.

The Lefty Dugas day in Taftville Saturday, October 4, was announced by the ump during the conflict with the mention of Lefty receiving a big cheer. This, by the way, promises to be a big day for the local boy who has surely made good in baseball.

Johnny Greene pitched in three of the five games and his record shows two runs scored in 27 1-3 innings. Evidently Johnny has something on these boys.

Daniels, who had pitched a beautiful 2 to 0 shut-out in Norwich in the third game, was no puzzle at all today while his teammates did not help him along any, chipping in with five errors.

The Cits will play an "Old Timers" team next Sunday. Joe Belair is lining up the outfit.

The Cits are open to challenges from any fast teams, including other city league titleholders.

GIANTS GET EVEN BREAK WITH REDS

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—(AP)—The Giants divided their final double header with the Cincinnati Reds today, winning the first game 6 to 4, and losing the second, 7 to 6, when darkness halted it after eight innings.

Carl Hubbell was hit hard in the opener but managed to last the full distance as Bill Terry drove in three runs for the Giants, and Frank Hogan sent home two. Wally Roettger's homer accounted for the other tally. Bob Meusel sent three of the Cincinnati runs over the plate and Pat Crawford hit a homer for the fourth.

Johnson pitched six good innings for the Reds in the second game but blew up in the seventh and gave New York five runs. Red Lucas stopped them a run short of a tie. The Reds piled up six runs off Bill Walker in the second for a safe lead.

The break left the Giants with a chance to tie the league leading St. Louis Cardinals by winning their three remaining games if St. Louis loses six straight. The scores:

PIRATES DROP ROBINS FROM SECOND PLACE

BROOKLYN, Sept. 21.—(AP)—The Robins lost title to second place today and dropped virtually all hope of winning the pennant when they suffered their fifth straight defeat and their second at the hands of the Pittsburgh Pirates. Ervin Brame was given great support throughout nine innings and staved off Brooklyn's late rallies to win a 7 to 6 decision.

Brooklyn nicked Brame for a three run lead in the second inning, but almost immediately, Clark weakened to yield all seven Pittsburgh tallies in the third and fourth frames. Luque and Phelps pitched well in relief for the remainder of the game, but the Robins just fell short of making up the deficit. In the eighth Herman tripled with two on and after Brooklyn had moved up to within one run of a tie with two out in the ninth, the same slugger belted a tremendous fly to deep center which Southern caught after a sensational run.

The season series of 22 games between the two teams ended with Brooklyn having scored 12 victories. The score:

CHAMPIONS SPLIT DOUBLE PROGRAM WITH BROWNS

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 21—(AP)—The pennant winning Athletics and the St. Louis Browns divided a double header here today, the Philadelphians dropping the first encounter, 4 to 8, and winning the night-cap, 10 to 4.

Goslin of the Browns hit a homer in each game, bringing his total for the season to 35. Boley hit for the circuit in the opener, and Foxx put one out of the park in the second game.

The Athletics, with the American league pennant already won for the second year in a row, continued to use numerous rookies and reserves, while the Browns continued to use several players who may be regulars next year. The scores:

North Carolina still has 22 "little log schoolhouses." They are used by Negro schools.

The Boy Friend and me spent the week-end on Cape Cod.

Great place that Cape Cod but the only codfish we saw was on the license plates of the automobiles.

Instead of a codfish they ought to put the picture of a mosquito on those plates. Besides cranberries the biggest thing they raise down there is mosquitoes.

And vicious Say those mosquitoes will bore right through the leather on your shoes. You'd think with all the tourists visiting the old Cape during the summer they'd be fed up.

This land of windmills, antiques and miniature golf courses is a sweet piece of country. When you go up there and see all the sand dunes and the clam-fritter places it makes you appreciate your own little town.

But, all joking aside, it is a treat to get down there once in awhile and smell the salt air and the pine trees without having them tainted with coal smoke.

Oh yes, I played over that Eastwood Ho golf course. What do I think of it? Oh boy, if you mashie smashers think the Connecticut courses are hard go up there. You ain't seen nothing until you see that.

There's one of the greatest views from that course of any place on the whole Cape. But it sure is tough. If I had played another 18 holes I'd be talking to myself and cutting out paper dolls.

There's two kinds of conversation carried on by players on that course, the kind that's not printable and the remarks about the beautiful view. The first kind refers to the game.

But if any of you golfers go down on the Cape don't miss playing that Eastwood Ho course. It will improve your vocabulary.

CUBS GO INTO SECOND PLACE BY BEATING BRAVES

BOSTON, Sept. 21—(AP)—Chicago retained a mathematical chance to win the National league pennant by defeating the Braves 4 to 2 before a Sunday crowd of 18,000 here today.

Gabby Hartnett's 34th home run of the season with Heathcote on base in the first half of the ninth inning broke a 2 to 2 tie and gave the Cubs the game. Previously Chicago had overcome Boston's two run lead with another two run rally in the sixth inning. Blair hit a three-bagger off the centerfield bleacher wall in that frame and scored on English's single. Cuyley's double over first base sent English home.

Ben Cantwell scattered the Cubs' eight hits well except for those two innings. He allowed one less safe blow than Malone, who had no weak innings, however, and won his 19th game of the year.

In the field, Maguire of the Braves and Kelly of the Cubs, who made 16 put outs, stood out. The score:

RED SOX RALLY IN 10TH TO BEAT CLEVELAND

CLEVELAND, Sept. 21.—(AP)—The Boston Red Sox broke loose to score five runs in the tenth inning today to make it two out of three in the series against Cleveland, 9 to 4.

The veteran, Jack Russell, held the Indians to ten hits, one of them Averill's 19th home run of the season, while Hudlin and Ferrell were found for 15. Ferrell, who leads the major league right handers with 25 victories, was charged with his 13th defeat, after he scored the tying run himself in the ninth. TIGERS NOSE OUT SENATORS IN TENTH

DETROIT, Sept. 21.—(AP)—An error which followed a double steal gave Detroit a 4 to 3 victory in 10 innings over Washington after a close pitchers' battle between Earl Whitehill and Irving Hadley in the last game of the season between the two clubs here today.

Hadley and Whitehill each allowed seven hits, including one two bagger, each issued six bases on balls and struck out five. Hadley was given better support until the last inning, the Senators turning in a triple play in which Judge, Hayes Cronin and Hadley handled the ball.

Johnson doubled in the tenth with one out, and Gehringer walked. They worked a double steal and Johnson scored the winning run after Spencer overthrew third. The score:

TOMMY ARMOUR WINS $10,000 ST. LOUIS OPEN GOLF TOURNEY WITH CARD OF 276

By PAUL MICKELSON
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 21.—(AP)—Tommy Armour, the black Scot from Detroit cracked par by an even dozen strokes to triumph over a great brigade of sharpshooters in the 72-hole tussle for the $10,000 St. Louis open golf championship today.

Carrying on from his triumph in the professional golfers championship just a week ago, Armour dazzled the field with a sensational total of 276 strokes to clinch his victory. Two strokes to his rear was Walter Hagen, another Detroiter, and Horton Smith of New York, Joe Kirkwood and Al Espinosa of Chicago finished in a deadlock for third place money with par-breaking 281 totals.

On only one round of his four 18-hole jaunts over the championship course did the black Scot fail to break par. That came on his final round, when with shots to spare, he loafed around with a par 72. His other rounds were all in the sixties, —67, 68 and 69. Armour trailed only at the end of the first round when Ralph Guldahl, 18-year-old Dallas professional, startled the big field with a 66. But he swept into the lead at the end of 36 holes with a 135 total and held his margin to the finish.

All told Armour, who won prize money of $2,500, was 12 strokes under fours. He collected 18 birdies and one eagle and slipped one stroke over par on only eight of the 72 holes. His finish was somewhat dramatic. Coming up to the final tee, he was informed he needed a par four to win. He slapped his tee shot 250 yards, sailed his second to within 10 feet of the pin and calmly sank it for a birdie three. It was a typical Armour finish.

Hagen came close to catching Armour today but the margin of two strokes was greater than it looked. The "Haig," fighting to win at least one title during his barren year, had rounds of 69-68-70 and 71. He trailed two strokes at the halfway mark, lost another at 54 holes and then gained it back to finish two shots behind the high flying Armour. His rounds were far more erratic than Armour's, however. He had 21 birdies but went over par on 11 holes because of timid approaches, for the most part.

Sixth among the low scorers came "Lighthorse" Harry Cooper of Chicago, who finished with a great 67 for a 282 score. Trailing him were Gene Sarazen of New York, western open champion, with a 283, and Guldahl, who proved his first round wasn't exactly a fluke by finishing with a 184

Tommy Armour, Detroit, 67-68-69-72—276—$2,500.

Walter Hagen, Detroit, 69-68-70-71—278—$2,000.

Clark Morse, St. Louis, 74-69-72-70—285—$150.

WHITE SOX END HOME STAND WITH VICTORY

CHICAGO, Sept. 21—(AP)—The White Sox made their final home appearance of the season today with a rousing 15 to 7 victory over the New York Yankees, and giving them a two to one edge in their final series.

Donie Bush's youngsters slammed Gibson, Wells, McEvoy and Herb Pennock for 18 hits, while Pat Caraway held the Yanks to three in six innings. Red Faber finished and was hit hard by the Yankees, but it was too late for them to overcome the early Sox lead. New York committed five fielding errors. The score:

HORNSBY MAY MANAGE CUBS, SAYS CHICAGO PAPER

CHICAGO, Sept. 21—(AP)—The Herald and Examiner in a copyrighted story today said Joe McCarthy will be dropped as manager of the Chicago Cubs next year and that both William Wrigley, owner, and William L. Veevk, president of the club favor Rogers Hornsby as his successor.

Wrigley reached at his Lake Geneva, Wis., home said the story was based on "pure imagination."

"We will not discuss anything of that nature until the season is over," he said. "We have never talked with McCarthy about handling the team in 1931 because he has been busy trying to win the pennant and has not had time to talk about it."

The Herald Examiner, which did not disclose the source of its purported information, said the manager and the officials had "agreed to disagree."

The paper pointed out that although officials of the St. Louis Cardinals and the New York Giants saw fit to announce publicly at a critical stage of the National league race, that Gabby Street and John McGraw would manage their respective teams again next year, such a tender of confidence has not been accorded McCarthy, by officials of the Chicago club.

ASHLAND WINS FIRST GAME OF SERIES

In a hard fought game played at Ashland park Sunday afternoon, the Accos took the first game of their series with the H. N. S., by the score of 7 to 5.

The Holy Name team took the lead in the first inning on Perry's single after Slonsky had walked. Ashland tied the score in their half of the inning on Derda's slashing triple to right-center, followed by Jarvis' double. From that point the game seesawed back and forth until the H. N. S. infield cracked behind Vachon and Ashland took the lead never to be headed.

The hitting honors went to Bush and F. Lefty, the former with five hits in five times up and the latter with two screaming triples and a single in four times up.

The second game of the series will be played next Sunday at Ashland park. The score:

JONES GETS A 69 OVER MERION COURSE

MERION, Pa., Sept. 21.—(AP)—As a final display of scoring fireworks preliminary to the United States amateur golf championship, starting at the Merion Cricket club tomorrow, Bobby Jones on one of his foremost rivals, George Voight, gave a Sabbath gallery of nearly 5,000 spectators a dazzling exhibition of par-cracking play this afternoon.

Voight, the slim, dark-haired New Yorker who came close to beating Jones in the British amateur tournament a few months ago, came off with the main honors when he sank a 25-foot putt on the eighteenth green for a birdie three and a score of 68, two under par for the hazardous championship layout.

Jones narrowly missed a putt of the same length and finished with a 69. It was Bobby's best performance in practice and satisfied the gallery, as well as the assembled experts, that the super-star, who has already bagged three national crowns this year is in fine condition for his attempt to make a clean sweep and blast all records off the books.

JOHNSTON FOLLOWS JONES ON HIS PRACTICE ROUND

ARDMORE, Pa., Sept. 21.—(AP)—The champion amateur golfer of the United States is Harrison R. (Jimmy) Johnston of St. Paul, but he was just one of the thousands in the gallery following Bobby Jones this afternoon.

Johnston indulged in no practice, remarking that he felt his game would benefit by a rest, but he had a good workout elbowing his way among spectators, few of whom recognized him and most of whom perhaps might have been surprised to know this unobtrusive individual in shirtsleeves, carrying a putter, was the defending title holder.

"I have been playing pretty well," Johnston said in answer to a question, "but isn't Bob great? I hope he can keep it up."

Danielson Wins Again.

The Danielson soccer team won from the Goodyear team for the second time this season when they won 6 to 0 Sunday afternoon. Panciera and Barrowe each scored three goals. Next week Danielson will play Wauregan.

JOHN HALEY, EAGLE BOAT 35, ARRESTED AT WESTBROOK

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 21.—John Haley, a member of the crew of U. S. S. Eagle boat 35, moored in the harbor, was arrested early today in Westbrook by state police, charged with evasion of responsibility, and has been returned to Bridgeport for trial. Haley was driving a Cadillac car owned by Roy Atwell, of Wilton, and in passing through Bridgeport the car collided with three other machines. Haley did not stop in either instance to ascertain the extent of the damage caused and continued toward New London. The police in this city and the Westbrook police were asked to be on the lookout for Haley and arrest him. At 2 o'clock, when the auto, in which were other sailors, was passing through Westbrook, Haley was arrested.

George Hackett, 24, employed as a waiter, was arrested Saturday night by Sergeant John Courtney, charged with non-support of his wife and daughter, aged two. He was locked up in default of a surety on his bond and will be in court Monday. A warrant for Hackett's arrest was issued two weeks ago, but he was not found until last night.

Walter Ridley, a youth without a home, was in the police court Saturday charged with theft, and was given suspension of judgment. The youth was arrested several nights ago when found asleep in a doorway in the rear of a Bank street store. He was in possession of a quantity of rope, which he said he stole from a boat at the pier of the Atlantic Coast fisheries.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre

George O'Brien, athletic and handsome young screen actor has a new leading lady in "Last of the Duanes" the Fox Movietone soul stirring and pulse beating romance of the Southwest, which is the current attraction at Warner's Broadway. She is Lucile Browne, petite and beautiful blonde, recently recruited from the New York speaking stage.

The combination is a happy one, both O'Brien and Miss Browne being particularly well suited to their roles. In fact the entire cast is a carefully selected one with Myrna Loy and Walter McGrail portraying the other featured characters and James Bradbury, Jr., Lloyd Ingraham, Nat Pendleton, Frank Campeau, Blanche Friderici, James Mason and Willard Robertson in the supporting roles.

Hundreds of extras, herds of cattle and many horses lend atmosphere to the production which was filmed and recorded in the wide open spaces of Arizona, famous for its beautiful and picturesque scenery.

The story was adapted from Zane Grey's widely read novel of the same name by Ernest Pascal and is the first of the Fox Movietone "Great Outdoor Romances."

Palace

How and why did Erich Maria Remarque write "All Quiet on the Western Front", the sensational best-selling novel of the decade, now transferred to the screen by Universal as the outstanding picture of the year? It is now playing at the Palace Theatre.

Remarque simply could not help writing "All Quiet on the Western Front". Hurtled from the quiet schoolroom at the age of eighteen into the vortex of war on the wave of patriotism that swept all of Germany he plodded through years of terror at the front. Disillusionment followed disillusionment. Horror followed horror, while his young and inquiring mind sought to grasp the meaning of the living nightmare in which he was plunged. Long before the end, especially when the presence of the sturdy and well fed American forces loomed up in contrast with the half starved and heartsick band of schoolboys of which he was a member, he knew Germany was defeated and that their sufferings were a feeble gesture spelling futility and nothing more.

All this—even the passing of his mother—is woven into the web and woof of his book, sustaining the belief of many that "All Quiet on the Western Front" is a biographical study flavored with the legitimate license accorded writers. The psychology he emphasizes throughout—Paul's fear that his generation robbed of youth and all that it connotes, and unacquainted with the aims and conventionalities of normal life, would be unable to adjust itself to post war conditions should peace ever come—shaped his life and activities and was responsible for the novel.

INDICES THE PAST WEEK INDICATED A LITTLE IMPROVEMENT IN BUSINESS

NEW YORK, Sept. 21.—(AP)—The business map continued spotty, but in the background there appears to be a feeling of confidence that the worst is over even if signs of a strong immediate upturn have not developed.

Not in a long time have the reports from trade and commerce been awaited more eagerly or studied more carefully than at present. These indices in the past week revealed some further improvement in certain lines, while in others, which have gained in comparison with the summer's business, the advance has slackened with the turn in the season.

Evidence of firmer price structures, a better trend in commercial collections and a moderate expansion in seasonal buying were among the week's favorable developments. On the other hand, warmer weather in parts of the country was said to have retarded both wholesale and retail buying.

The iron and steel industry continues to show some irregularity. Midweek estimates of ingot production reported no change in operating ratios from the preceding week, but emphasis was placed on the appearance of a better inquiry from consumers who were said to be interested in current prices. However, the hesitancy of the automobile industry, whose September output may not succeed that of August, has tended to hold back output of steel. Railroad purchases have so far been small.

The August increase in copper stocks was promptly followed by price reductions, and leading producers, exporters and custom smelters are now offering at 10 1-2 cents a pound, the lowest quotation in 20 years.

E. F. MURPHY, NEW LONDON, VICTIMIZED OUT OF $47.25 BY FRAUD CHECK CROOK

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 21.—E. F. Murphy, manager of the Dunlop Tire & Rubber Co., 686 Bank street, reported to the police Saturday night that he believed he had been victimized by a crook, for he had negotiated a check that he believed worthless. Murphy said that a young man entered the store ostensibly for the purchase of a tire, finally selecting one that cost $9.75. Payment for the purchase was given by a check for $57, which purported to be made payable to Charles Leonard and by the Armour Co., by their representative, L. Channing. The autoist was given the tire and $47.25 in cash. After the check passer had left, Murphy made inquiry as to whether the check was negotiable and information which he ascertained made him suspect that the check was worthless and he notified the police. The holder of the check is described as being about five feet, ten inches in height and was smooth shaven. He had a gray shirt, a bow tie and soft gray hat, Murphy recalls.

THREE MOTOR VEHICLES IN EARLY MORNING MIX-UP

A three-cornered crash of automobiles occurred on the New London-Norwich highway early Saturday morning. One of the cars, which was operated by Joseph Nameny, stationed at the submarine base, was being driven toward New London at 3 o'clock and between Gallows lane and Bolles hill, Waterford, the auto sideswiped a truck of the First National stores, driven by Joseph Lombardo, of Wilson, Conn. Caroming from the side of the truck, the car driven by Nameny hit an auto driven by Eugene Naylor, U. S. coast guard. Nameny sustained cuts and bruises and after the injuries were dressed the sailor was taken to the sick bay at the submarine base. A. J. Ouilette, 95 Hempstead street, also a sailor and a passenger in Nameny's auto, was arrested by State Police Officer Eric Swanson, charged with intoxication, and will be given a hearing in the police court Monday.

MRS. KELLEY'S PLATFORM DEFINED FOR THE VOTERS

One of the most vigorous campaigners for Monday's second city election is a woman. Mrs. Nellie K. Kelley. Mrs. Kelley is a candidate for re-election as a member of the school board. She is reminding the taxpayers that she has ten qualifications for re-election: A native of this city; a graduate of the public schools; a former teacher in the public schools; one of the first teachers in this city with a normal school training; alumna of Connecticut college; the wife of one of the local business men; a mother; a voter on the school question for years; a member of the school board for nine years, her only thought the welfare of the children; a taxpayer, therefore with a wholesome interest in economy in the use of public money.

Mrs. Kelley has been prominent in public life for years, especially as a member of the state board (and its secretary) of the State Farm for Women at East Lyme. It was largely through her efforts that recent improvements and enlargements have been made in the buildings and equipment at the state farm.

Reminded of Their Duty

Sunday, at the four masses in St. Mary's Star of the Sea church, the big congregations were reminded by the priests of the parish that the matter of voting or not voting at Monday's election was not a matter of choice but a real obligation. Each listener was urged to properly value his power of franchise and to exercise it, as is the duty of every citizen of these United States.

It was announced at this church that all services and parish activities the coming Sunday would go back to standard time.

Several arrests of autoists for violation of the state and city traffic laws were made Saturday afternoon and night. Grant E. McLaren, South road, Poquonoc Bridge, was arrested by Sergeant Frank Howard, charged with passing a motionless trolley car that was receiving and discharging passengers. The automobile the sergeant was driving on Broad street came close to being hit when McLaren drove from Cleveland street and headed for the Hartford turnpike. McLaren speeded through Broad street and at Connecticut avenue, where several passengers were about to board the trolley car, McLaren speeded along. At Phillips street, McLaren was overtaken and arrested.

Francis D. Herbert, 8 Huntington avenue, Norwich, was charged with passing an automatic danger signal, corner of Crystal avenue and Main street. He was arrested by Patrolman Ernest Opperman and posted a bond of $15 for his appearance in the police court Monday. Benjamin Pellenberg, New York, was arrested by Opperman on the same charge. The driver also posted a bond of $15.

James Buck, 31 Pennsylvania avenue, Niantic; Joseph B. Peckham, Trading Cove, Montville; Joseph Kavalanka, 13 Sharaf street, and Robert Stevens, 28 Jefferson avenue, were charged with parking on Pearl street, which thoroughfare is restricted to all parking. The drivers posted a bond of $2 each for their appearance in court.

George Galbo, North Bergen, N. J., and J. Henry Wilkins, Niantic, were charged with parking in front of a fire house on Bank street. They also posted bonds of $2 each for their presentation in court.

Run Over by Own Machine

Chester Henry, 892 Bank street, sustained a painful injury Friday night when he was run over by the automobile of which he was in charge, in an unusual manner, the young man sustaining lacerations of the face and legs. He is now a patient at Lawrence-Memorial hospital. However, it is expected that he will be discharged within a day or two. Henry, accompanied by his mother, was driving on the Chesterfield-Flanders highway, en route to New London. When in Chesterfield the auto had a flat tire and, reducing speed to about five miles, Henry allowed the auto to coast and then alighted to make an inspection. As he ran around the front of the machine, his clothing caught on the fender, causing the driver to be thrown to the highway, and the wheels of the car passed over him. State Police Officer Eric Swanson, who was performing patrol duty, was near at hand and he had Henry taken to the hospital.

Dominic Orazi, of 210 Shaw street; Miss Eleanor Donohue, 13 Belden street; Olle Hubbard, Essex; Mrs. Daniel Shugrue, 31 Walden avenue; Mrs. Rachel Lenner, Chicopee Falls, Mass.; Miss Mary Pendergast, 69 Colman street; Mrs. Elizabeth Comins, Stafford Springs; Mrs. William Aikin, and infant daughter, 18 Spicer avenue, Groton, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged Saturday.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel Saturday ordered the suspension of the drivers' licenses of John Brutsman, 41 Blackhall street and Lance Chitwood, submarine base.

Elizabeth Maloney, 14, of 59 Moss street, Westerly, was detained early Saturday when she was found loitering on the street and it developed that she had run away from her home several days ago. The police of Westerly were communicated with, resulting in the mother and brother of the girl coming to this city and taking the girl back home. Patrolman Frank Luehan observed the girl loitering at the corner of Broad and Williams street at 2 o'clock in the morning and when he questioned her, ascertained that she had run away from home.

Alexander Slodden, 357 Huntington street, a tailor, was in the police court Saturday charged with breach of the peace. The case was continued a week and Slodden was given into the custody of Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield, although when arrested the accused was held in bail of $1000. Slodden's treatment of his wife was most painful and inhuman.

Sold To Norwich Woman.

Henry T. Bray and the Commercial Trust company, New Britain, guardians of Margaret, George H., William J., and John H. Bray, have sold a house and lot on Bentley avenue, Ocean Beach, to Sea Gull, Inc. Since the sale the corporation sold the realty to Ida Schoenberg, of Norwich. Deeds transferring the property were filed Saturday at the office of the city clerk.

GAY PALS ON A HOUSEBOAT TO EXPLAIN IN CITY COURT

Lanetta Connors Serna, 45, residing on a houseboat in the rear of 58 Broad street, was arrested Saturday charged with conducting a disorderly resort. Rose LaValle, alias Duchaine, alias Griens, and William Jackson, a former sailor, were also arrested charged with lascivious carriage. The Connors woman furnished surety on her bond of $200, but the LaValle woman and Jackson were locked up as they could not provide bail. The trio will be presented in the police court Monday. The arrest of the two women and man was the result of complaint being made by the husband of the LaValle woman, a Filipino sailor on U. S. S. Camden, that his wife had been absent from home several days and that he had knowledge that she was residing on the houseboat with Jackson. Mrs. LaValle was found and taken to police headquarters where she admitted having been aboard the boat about five days, with Jackson and the Serna woman as her companions. Detective Sergeant Nelson Smith and Patrolmen George Labous and Cornelius Moriarty went to the houseboat and finding Mrs. Serna and Jackson there, arrested the pair. The LaValle woman was arrested several months ago charged with lascivious carriage and while locked in a cell attempted suicide by hanging, she having ripped some of her apparel and tied the portions together, then attempting to hand herself. She was discovered and rescued.

Sabbath Bells

The Sabbath Day dawned clear and fair
Upon a village old,
Upon a church within its square,
On homestead, farm and fold.

The morning sun o'er vale and plain
Shone bright with golden light,
It shone upon a weather vane,
A steeple tall and white.

And from that steeple white and tall
Within the village square,
The sexton sent a solemn call,
Resounding everywhere.

Like summons to the church's dom,
Afar from city ways,
Awoke that faithful bell once more
That bell of childhood days.

Another church stood on that square,
Its steeple white and high;
Another bell awakened there
The echoes far and nigh.

O Sabbath Bells! Sweet Sabbath Bells!
Whose voices thrilled the air,
Whose melody still sounds and swells
Within that village square.

—By Charles Nevers Holmes.

The Farmer

He told them money couldn't buy the place,
And that was all. They wouldn't understand
If they were told, the waking of the land
In Spring, like laughter on a friendly face;
The well winch, creaking in the early light,
The trees so tall and straight upon the hill,
The old wheel turning in the hay mill—
Why, lacking these, no morning could seem right!
And apple time, with clean and fragrant scent
Drifting through orchards thick with crimson fruit . . . .
What use to tell them he had taken root?
They never would have guessed half what he meant,
How could he tell in words how all his toil
Had linked him like a lover to this soil?

—Eleanor Alletta Chaffee, in New York Sun.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Maid Applicant—Well ma'am, I was maid in a college boys' fraternity house for three years.—Exchange.

Miss Pimpkins (at picnic)—Oh, gracious, there's an ant in my coffee! Will it hurt it?

Mr. Simpkins—Hurt it? Heavens, woman, it'll kill it.—Pathfinder.

Mrs. Bindler—Is there any difference, Thomas, do you know, between a fort and a fortress?

Mr. Bindler—I should imagine a fortress, my dear, would be more difficult to silence.—Utica Press.

The professor was asked to give his definition of woman. After clearing his throat he began in his leisurely way:

"Woman is, generally speaking—"

"Stop right there, professor," interrupted a masculine listener. "You'll never get any nearer to it than that."—Punch.

Teacher—Who can tell me what the former ruler of Russia was called?

Class (in unison)—Czar.

Teacher—Correct, and what was his wife called?

Class—Czarina.

Teacher—Correct, and what were the Czar's little children called?

A military drama in aid of the Red Cross fund was being produced. One man did not seem to understand the scheme of the drama. 'Look here," said the stage manager at length, "unless you improve we shall have to do without you! I thought you said you'd been a soldier?" "So I 'ave!" returned the super. "But I was only a private. Did you expect a field marshal for a shilling a night?"—Montreal Star.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21— (AP) — Girls who have both a father and a grandfather in the diplomatic service are fortunate.

Dividing their time between Europe and America, school one place and debuts in another, is the interesting life of Misses Elizabeth and Anne Chilton, daughters of Sir Henry Getty Chilton British minister to the Vatican.

They are also grand-daughters of Thomas James O'Brien of Michigan who has been U. S. minister and ambassador to three countries.

Many friends and relatives in this country and a home in Rome keep the two sisters commuting across the Atlantic.

They were presented to Washington society when their father was councilor at the British embassy here. They usually return here for part of each year, usually in the winter when the social season is gayest.

They have been spending the summer with their grandfather in Grand Rapids.

Guiding Your Child

By Mrs. Agnes Lyne

Envious

Six-year-old Dora is known to all the neighborhood as a horrid, envious, greedy and disagreeable child.

When, one day, another child appeared before her with a new toy, she regarded it with hungry eyes and exclaimed: "Oh, you lucky duck! I wish I had that; you get everything and I don't get anything!"

Another time when the little girl next door came out with a new dress and specially curled and shining hair, Dora cried: "I suppose you think you are just beautiful, don't you? You're nothing but a stuck up thing, that's what you are!"

Dora is certainly not a lovable child. Greed and envy taint all her responses to other children.

Ugly as her behavior is, it is entirely natural, for she lives with parents who show her little interest and who delegate her care to a succession of housekeepers who regard her simply as the cause of extra work.

No one, apparently, cares for her. Nobody gives her presents. She has no pretty clothes, few toys and seldom receives the treats and privileges which mean so much to every child.

Greed and envy are distressing qualities anywhere.

When they appear in children they tend especially to provoke a cold dislike and punishment, the very treatment that accentuates the faults.

It is inevitable that a child who sees another receive in abundance what he himself lacks and craves intensely should feel envious. He will cease begrudging another child his happiness only when he feels himself to be well loved.

He will learn to regard with serenity the pleasures of other children when in his own life there is enough joy.

Sport Jackets

PARIS, Sept 21—(AP)—Coats which flare in front and are belted in back are quite general among the sports models couturiers show.

Jackets of tweed, either three-quarthe length or shorter, are newest when the front is unbelted and hangs loose in semi-cape style. Patch pockets accentuate the generous lines of the coats.

WOMAN SHERIFF DESPOT OF ITALY'S RED SEA COLONY

MASSAUA, Eritrea, Sept. 21—(AP)—A woman descendant of Mohammed rules with almost despotic sway over a section of this Italian colony on the Red Sea.

She is 50 and once, they say, was very beautiful. She still retains traces of her beauty.

If you are near Otumlo you go to see the scheriff—provided she has invited you.

Outside her home you are stopped by guards in white turbans and flowing gowns, with little pointed beards. Finally they admit you into the garden.

Like other women of her race, the scheriff is almost completely veiled. But her brown cheeks give testimony of a not long-lost beauty; her eyes are black, intelligent.

You sit down when she gives the signal. She motions to an attendant and are handed an enormous glass containing a red wine-like mixture. You drink. You talk, with the assistance of an interpreter. The scheriff has a soft, rich, pleasing voice.

In recent years, a cousin, Said Giaffar, has sought to carve into her influence.

Satin Gloves For Evening

PARIS, Sept. 21—(AP)—Long gloves for evening wear, at one style house, are made of satin or georgette.

Checked Costume

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21—(AP)—Mrs. Leroy Hartley, wife of Major Hartley, has returned from Paris and brought with her a number of striking costumes. Among them is a knitted sports suit of black and white check with hat and hand bag to match. The hand bag is of checked leather. Even her gloves are black and white check.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Straws are convenient additions to the family picnic basket.

Do not keep flour near meat or vegetables, as it absorbs odors.

If green peppers are oiled first before baking they will not turn brown in the oven.

Green leafy vegetables wilt if allowed to stand in oil, so add the salad dressing just before serving.

A layer cake can be baked in one pan of sufficient depth by cutting pieces of paraffin paper and placing them between each layer.

To make mashed potatoes more fluffy, add one-half teaspoonful of baking powder to the milk and butter before adding them to the potatoes.

Oil the clock by saturating a small rag with kerosene and laying it inside the clock. Leave it for three or four days. The oil will loosen the dust in the works, oiling them at the same time.

Never throw away bones left from a roast or shoulder. Put them on in cold water and if cooked several hours, a very good soup may be obtained with the addition of diced vegetables.

Mattresses, pillows, and blankets will be more sanitary and will last much longer if they are placed in the sun one day each week. It gives them a sweet, fresh odor that is very pleasant on retiring.

Mixed fruits make a delicious deep dish pie. Use apples as a base and mix plumbs, prunes, figs, apricots, peaches, pears or any fruit. Use a few spoonfuls of tapioca to thicken the juice slightly.

To prevent curtains from blowing out of the window and becoming soiled, buy lead dress-weights. Cover with cloth the color of the curtains and slip into the bottom hem of the curtains. Use about five weights in each hem and the curtains will hang in place.

DO YOU KNOW

Lamb or mutton may be roasted on a bed of tart apples.

Creamed ham should be highly seasoned. A teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce to one cup of white sauce gives an added zest.

A thick slice of veal baked in milk is very good.

Ham is good baked in pineapple juice.

GREASE ON SOUP

Before serving soup or beef tea to a child or invalid take a piece of tissue paper and draw it two or three times over the top. This will remove every sign of fat, which is usually so objectionable to invalids.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Even when reducing, you want to take foods that are strength maintaining.

If you will learn to hold up your chest you will automatically overcome faulty posture habits. Your abdomen is pulled in and your back is held straight. Don't slump or don't hold yourself rigid.

Curve your hair well out on your cheeks, if your face is round, to conceal some of the surface. Part the hair on the side and wear it well off the forehead. In this way you may materially reduce appearance of facial circumference.

Buttermilk is a harmless bleach. Pat it on at night before going to bed. The juice of a lemon in a cup of milk makes another excellent bleach. As these bleaches are somewhat drying, it is well to follow their use with applications of cold cream.

BACK TO BRUSHING

Women desirous of keeping their hair beautiful and healthy are now returning to the simple process of brushing that stood our grandmothers in such good stead.

No high frequency treatments or electrical massages are now given in the hair-dressing salon of an all-British Bond street beauty parlor. When a client's hair is thinning or is in poor condition she is taken in hand by an assistant who steadily brushes her hair for twenty or thirty minutes. Practically each strand is picked up, separately and brushed from the roots to the ends. This ensures the thorough circulation of air that is so necessary if one wants to keep a really healthy head of hair, free from dandruff.

The proprietor of this salon finds that many women are growing their hair, almost to shoulder length. In the daytime it is worn swathed round the crown of the head, but for evening functions, when ankle-length frocks are donned, it is transformed into a mass of curls covering the nape of the neck.—The Morning Post.

COOL DRINKS

If you keep ice tea in the refrigerator, you can make up a cool beverage at a moment's notice. It is an excellent base for many drinks, and all you have to do is to add fruit juice or chopped fruit.

MIRROR'S HELP

Try moving your mirrors around so that each one in your house will reflect a view out the window or open door. It brings the outdoors into the house amazingly.

STRAPLESS BAGS

Trimmings on purses in the nature of straps and handles are almost nil at the moment. When some really novel idea in that direction is evolved it is labeled as distinctive and interesting.

The bag with the short, stiff handle, such as a curve of crystal above an envelope that is very squarish and severe in outline, is having a run in Paris just now, as are also certain unique bead and chain handles for afternoon bags. Yet the emphasis is all in favor of the strapless, handleless affair taking an odd modern shape.

DICTATES OF FASHION

All shades of green are growing in fashion prominence.

Sleeping pajamas have short overblouses rather than tuckins.

Millinery trimmings are again under discussion—the strongest rivalry being between the bow and the quill.

BUTTONS EMPLOYED

Several of the most advanced designers are employing buttons for their practical uses in fastening the blouse or skirt, rather than in the way of decoration. This tendency has brought back the double-breasted feature, a line which is in harmony with the wrapover treatment and the surplice theme, since it gives a distinctly overlapping blouse effect.

NEW BLOUSES

The dress with the jacket-blouse is somewhat fitted, with the blouse buttoning down the center of the front or in surplice fashion and finished with a belt of leather or fabric. Such models are likely to be either hip or finger-tip length, distinguished in various ways, especially by button and collar trimming or medium.

SMART FABRICS FOR FALL COATS

It is difficult to tell whether it is more broadcloth than suede or vice versa, this new fabric that is being launched for fall and winter coats. It is a soft velvety material, partaking of the nature of duvetyn but with a satin finish that gives it an even, delightfully smooth glow. An excellent material in colors, it is especially effective in black.

SWEET AND PRETTY

Utterly feminine is a frock made of white, pink and blue flowers. With it is worn a wrap of pale blue transparent velvet.

LAUNDRY HINTS

Wrap the soiled clothesline around the washboard and scrub with brush and hot suds. Rinse well.

Blue materials will hold their color best if soaked in a salt solution, one tablespoon of salt to one quart of water.

If you wish to give an excellent glaze or gloss to starched linen, mix the starch into a paste with milk instead of water. Pour on boiling water in the usual way.

To restore to their former brightness enameled bathtubs and washbowls which have become yellow, wash them with salt and turpentine.

BOIL TO BLEACH

When white clothes have turned yellow with much washing, put them in the boiler, half full of water, to which a handful of salt and washing soda has been added. Bring this to a boil and keep simmering for some hours. Rinse the clothes in plenty of cold water and hang them in the sun to dry. Clothes treated in this way will be perfectly white.

CLEANING LEATHER

Leather picture frames and portfolios may be cleaned with benzine. Apply it with a soft cloth and if the benzine removes the polish apply the well-beaten white of an egg.

WOOLEN BLANKETS

A pair of small wool blankets, 66 by 86 in. should weigh from six pounds to seven pounds. The larger size, 76 in. by 96 in. should weigh from nine pounds to ten pounds. Outside these two weights exist many synthetic blankets purporting to be qualified for the invaluable work done by the true wool blanket. As yet, however, no known textile fibre has been discovered to equal wool as a blanket material.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Women outnumber men as stockholders of big corporations in the United States.

Women are now eligible to the office of elders in Presbyterian churches of the United States.

At 76 years of age, Miss Grace Archer, of Leyland, England, started her 57th year as a dancing teacher.

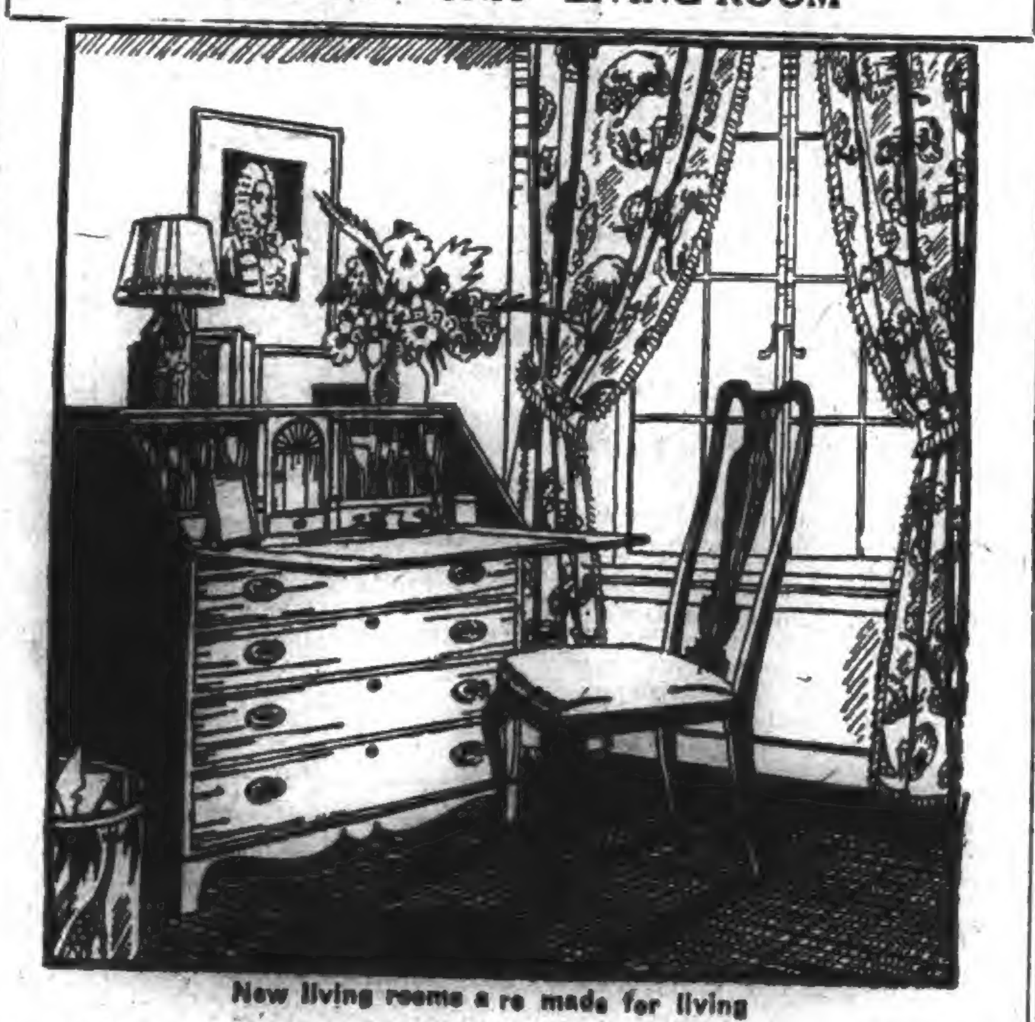
Young women who intend to go to New York and live on their own resources, are advised to stay away from the city unless they are assured of an income of at least $25 a week.

As the result of a survey recently made in London, England, women smoke more cigarettes than men. Some London tobacco dealers declare that half their customers are women and a third of these buy 200 cigarettes a week.

BREAKFAST FOR ONE

An individual coffee pot that holds also a cream pitcher and sugar bowl that fit into one another like a puzzle, is particularly nice for the breakfast tray especially, when it comes in pewter.

NOOK IN "UNIT" LIVING ROOM



New living rooms are made for living

Is yours a new "unit living room?"

The ordinary living room is going the way of the old "parlor."

The American family might be said to have come to life when the parlor was invaded on everyday occasions instead of being reserved for Sunday and special events.

Now we are transforming the living room from a place for sitting around waiting for bedtime into a place in which the whole family may really live.

In most homes it is already reception room, music room, recreation room, library and often dining room. But in how many homes does it remain comfortable while used for these purposes?

A unit for every purpose is the new way to make the living room livable—the unit may be a corner, one side of the room or a good part of it.

Conversation? The conversational unit should be grouped around the fireplace—if any—and should have a daybed or davenport, an easy chair or two, a table and a lamp.

Music naturally has a unit, arranged around a piano, radio or victrola—or all. There must be a chair which insists on relaxation, a cabinet to eliminate the music sheet pile. Here the floor lamp should be—and, to be really smart, it should have a parchment rather than a heavy, fringed, silk shade.

What opportunities for charm and distinction are massed in a writing ensemble! A desk, preferably open, either an 18th century high topped secretary or a Governor Winthrop, with a lamp or picture and candlestick arrangement—there's an ideal group near a window.

And reading—the whole living room may become a reading unit. But for the favored one there should be at least a graceful Cogswell chair and a convenient lamp.

Ripe Cucumber Pickles

Two quarts ripe cucumbers, sliced, 1 tablespoon powdered alum, 2 quarts water, 3 cups brown sugar, 2 cups vinegar, 1-2 cup mixed pickling spices.

Peel cucumbers and cut in thin slices crossways. Mix alum and water and add cucumbers. Heat slowly to boiling point. Remove from fire and let stand three minutes. Drain and soak one hour in ice water. Mix rest of ingredients and boil five minutes. Add cucumbers, which have been drained from ice water, and boil 15 minutes. Pour into sterilized jars and seal.

Sweet Mixed Pickles

(With green tomatoes)

Two quarts sliced green tomatoes, 2 quarts red tomatoes, 1 cup chopped onions, 1 cup chopped green peppers, 1-2 cup chopped red peppers, 2-3 cup salt, 6 cups vinegar, 1 teaspoon cloves, 2 teaspoons cinnamon, 1 teaspoon nutmeg, 1 tablespoon white mustard seed, 2 tablespoons celery seed, 3 cups sugar.

Wash green tomatoes, remove blossom ends. Wash and peel red tomatoes. Mix tomatoes and rest of vegetables with salt and let stand over night. In morning drain thoroughly and add rest of ingredients. Cook slowly for 12 1-2 hours. Pour into sterilized jars and seal at once.

A large white enameled kettle and a long handled wooden spoon are suggested to use for cooking and stirring pickle mixtures.

Sweet Pickled Pears

One-half peck pears, 7 cups light brown sugar, 5 cups vinegar, 1-4 cup whole cloves, 1-2 cup bark cinnamon.

Peel pears, cut in halves and remove cores. Lightly tie spices in white muslin bag. Add vinegar and sugar and boil for four minutes. Add pears and cook slowly until they are very tender and well glazed. Pour into sterilized jars and seal.

If pears seem very hard, after they have been peeled and cored, steam for five minutes and then add to syrup mixture.

GAY SOCIAL SEASON FOR WASHINGTON ARMY GIRLS

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21—(AP)—The gaiety of army life with its uniforms, flags and bands is intensified during the Washington social season for daughters of army officers.

Among the service buds of this autumn as the daughters of army and navy men are called, is Miss Lucille Swift, daughter of Col. and Mrs. I. Palmer Swift. She will be presented to society on Oct. 31 at a tea dance at the army, navy and marine country club.

Miss Charlotte Hannum, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Hannum of Baltimore, has been visiting her chum, Miss Rosalind Deskyne, daughter of Brigadier General and Mrs. Herbert Deskyne in the capital and has been the inspiration for a number of parties.

ARRANGING SERIAL AFFAIRS IN WASHINGTON SOCIETY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 21—"What has become of the old time cut and dried social programs?" queried a woman in high officials circles. "You know we could plan all our social affairs weeks and weeks ahead, and count on every body who had accepted. That was but four or five years ago and nowadays a hostess is lucky if she fills her table at dinner, although the table was "full" within three days after her formal dinner invitations were out." And the lady of high degree sighed, as she recalled some bitter and harrowing experiences of the past season Her friends tried to comfort her by remarking that she was placing her estimate of what may happen, on the usual conditions last winter, when President Hoover ruthlessly cut into all prescribed plans for one reason or another, but all of which, in his opinion warranted the change "Charge it up to telephone, the rage for informality, and the modernism and cosmopolitanism of the President and Mrs. Hoover" put in another woman present. "You see the white house sets the pace, and if the white house changes from high to low gear, all of a sudden, other folks get left." And everybody smiled and said. 'Why, of course, and then Mrs. Hoover is so delightful we can forgive her for spoiling our plans once in a while." There it ended. But here is the situation. Those of the official set, engage a young woman whose duty it is to help make nonconflicting dates for dinners, luncheons, coming out parties and the like. In former administrations the lady of the white house has asked the ladies of the cabinet to drop in for an informal tea, before the social season opens, and dates, what sort of entertainment, what sort of refreshments, and other details are discussed. Then all things were ready for a smooth voyage. Then, though it was never published, other leaders would be quietly informed of state affairs at the white house, cabinet receptions and so forth and the social season was under way without a hitch.

But with the incoming of the Hoovers, the scene changed. Partly because of the death of Secretary of War Good, and the ordering by the president of 30 days mourning—that cut out a dozen or more of the first month of the session; then the president dealt another social blow, when he went to Florida for a fishing trip, cutting out a lot more affairs. But the worst blow came when he returned, and he and Mrs. Hoover begun a series of most delightful, informal, asked-by-telephone affairs. That upset things. Folks were delighted to go to the white house on impromptu verbal invitations. But what of the dinner hostess who had her guests of honor, snatched from under her very nose at the 11th moment? What of the hostess who was herself invited to the white house, and instead of presiding at her own dinner party, left it in the hands of some friend? And how fill the other vacancies? Well, they tell me some women were near brain storm, before the season ended. And little shivers are even now running down the backs of society leaders, and the shivers are not caused by the prevailing "low back" gowns of the season. It's Mrs. Hoover's 11th hour telephone invitation they dread. For no one knows what will happen this year.

BACKWARD, DOWNWARD GO LINES OF EVENING GOWNS

PARIS, Sept. 21 —(AP)— Forward looking styles for evening have a decidedly backward movement.

Skirts which swathe the hips with an upward line terminating in a pseudo bustle are beloved by several stylemakers of first caliber.

Chanel is one of the leaders in the backward and upward move. Worth also gives the style a hand. So far all of the exaggerated backs occur on formal evening dresses. Deep U-shaped decolletes extend to the waistline or just a bit below it.

Despite their style which places emphasis just below the waistline in back the new dresses fasten up the back with a businesslike row of closely spaced hooks and eyes.

Sometimes these old-style plackets are disguised by a subtle arrangement of tied ends, flat bows or soft falls of chiffon. On other models the fastening is plainly visible.

New Deb's Charms In Brown

Her hat is a small close-fitting brown model with a touch of white. Her shoes and bag are brown and the bag bears her initials in crystal.

WOMEN OF ICELAND SNUB STYLES—KEEP OWN DRESS

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, Sept. 21—(AP)—Iceland women refuse to bow to Parisian fashion edicts. They retain their national dress, which is far more expensive than a costly Paris gown.

The trinkets worn with them are valuable, too. The gold belt of the Icelandic matron is more expensive than a good motorcar, the work of the Icelandic goldsmiths being exquisite but dear. The belt probably is of the same pattern as those worn by the ladies of the Viking chieftains.

When Queen Alexandrine visited Iceland for the first time, Icelandic women presented her with a beautiful national dress, which the queen wears on special occasions. It was said at the time that the dress was valued at more than $15,000.

NORWICH TOWN

"Food for the Soul," was the theme of the Sunday morning sermon at the First Congregational church, by Rev. Charles E. Reeves, Text, St. Matthew, 4.4. "But He answered and said, it is written, man shall not live by bread alone; but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."

At the Young People's C. E. service Sunday evening, the theme assigned was, How Improve Our Organization and Team-Work. Acts 6:1-7.

Rev. and Mrs. Harvey H. Conklin of Westerly, formerly of Baltic, when Rev. Mr. Conklin was pastor of the Methodist church there, had as guests Friday, Mr. and Mrs. George Geer and family of Plain Hill road. Special significance was given September 19th, Mrs. Geer's birthday, as Mrs. Conklin served a fine dinner to her guests.

Under the heading Contrast in the Bible, the mid-week service of conference and prayer at the Congregational church, will have for its theme, The World and the Kindom. John 18:36, 37, Matthew 6:33. Are we losing the sharpness of the distinction between the World and the Kingdom? What does it mean to be "in the world but not of the world?"

Mrs. Herbert I. Sanderson of Willimantic has been passing several days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Buckley.

REPUBLICANS OF COUNTY NAME BRADFORD FOR SHERIFF

The republican county convention held in the court house in this city, Saturday, nominated George H. Bradford for election as sheriff of New London county on the party ticket. Mr. Bradford at present holds the office of sheriff by appointment by Governor John H. Trumbull, as successor to the late Sidney A. Brown. The nomination was by acclamation, Mr. Bradford receiving the endorsement of the entire delegation.

Perry J. Hollandersky of New London called the convention to order and Thomas E. Troland of New London was named chairman of the convention. Judge William A. Wilcox was appointed clerk.

At the suggestion of the chairman all stood in silence in tribute to the memory of the late Sidney A. Brown of New London, who for a quarter of a century was high sheriff of the county.

Mr. Bradford was nominated as candidate for high sheriff by State's Attorney Arthur M. Brown. The state's attorney said he was pleased to see women participating in the political life of today. We need the uplifting influence of women, he said. After speaking of the importance of the office of high sheriff, the state's attorney said it was a very significant thing that when the late Sheriff Brown, who for so many years satisfactorily served the county as he did and whom we all loved, died, that all eyes instinctively turned toward one man, George H. Bradford. At this point, the state attorney commended Chairman Troland for taking the action that he did in having all stand for a moment in silent tribute to the late Sheriff Brown. During the short time he has been in office, since being appointed by the governor, he has made good. The state attorney told of the contact between his office and that of the office of sheriff. He has made an excellent sheriff. He is the best kind of a mind to fill the position. The state attorney referred to Mr. Bradford as a man of tact, ability, courage, dignity and experience, and one who was always courteous.

GEORGE H. BRADFORD.

"I believe it would be a calamity if he should be superseded by anyone else as sheriff of the county," State Attorney Brown said.

"I take great pride, and say it with all sincerity, in placing in nomination the name of George H. Bradford for sheriff of New London county," Mr. Brown stated in closing amidst much applause.

Deputy Sheriff Oscar H. Main of this city and Winder Reed of New London, were appointed a committee by the chairman to escort Sheriff Bradford to the convention hall. All stood as Mr Bradford was escorted to the hall.

"I am not unmindful of the duties of the office of high sheriff of New London county," said Sheriff Bradford, in accepting the nomination. If elected, Sheriff Bradford promised the delegates that he would fulfill the office to the best of his ability.

State's Attorney Brown declined reelection to the county committee, because of the office he holds and for other business reasons. Perry J. Hollandersky of New London, Andrew B. Davies of this city and George Costello of Mystic were named on the committee. Following the convention the delegates were guests of Sheriff Bradford at a luncheon at the Wauregan hotel.

TALMAN STREET MAN DISCOVERED IN HELPLESS POSITION HANGING BY FOOT

Found hanging head down over a 20 foot embankment on Talman street, held only by his foot caught in an iron railing, William Fowler of Talman street, was hauled to safety about 10 o'clock Saturday evening. He is a patient at the W. W. Backus hospital, where it was said Sunday evening that his condition is not serious. He passed a very comfortable day Sunday.

Officer Simpson was notified by a pedestrian about 10 o'clock Saturday night that a man was hanging head down over the embankment. Police headquarters was notified and Officer Patrick F. Shahan and Officer Simpson went to the spot. The man was hauled up to the sidewalk and rushed to police headquarters. As his condition was considered serious he was rushed to the W. W. Backus hospital where he received medical attention.

How long he had been hanging over the embankment is not known. He was barely breathing when the police took charge of him, and administered first aid, and also summoned Dr. W. T. Driscoll to police headquarters to give him attention. It is thought that while on his way home, the man stumbled and fell over the iron fencing, his foot catching in the railing, preventing him from falling to the rocks, 20 feet below, but at the same time leaving him helpless to haul himself back to the street. Mr. Fowler is a well known plasterer.

HENS AT STORRS KEEP AHEAD OF LAST YEAR

With five weeks to go the hens in the Storrs contest are holding on to their one and one-half egg margin per hen over last year's total production to date. Thus there are very fair prospects of at least equalling the past year's performance if not indeed bettering it by perhaps an egg or two per bird.

In the forty-sixth week the production for all pens was 3,212 eggs or a yield of 45.9 per cent. This is 127 eggs under the previous week but 156 more than in the forty-sixth week last year.

During the past week Edward N. Larrabee's pen of Rhode Island Reds from Peterboro, N. H. came through with 60 eggs and thereby outlayed all other pens in the contest. R. C. Cobb's pen of Barred Rocks from Littleton, Mass. was second best for the week with a total of 56 eggs.

Cloverdale Farm's pen of White Leghorns from Cortlandt, New York made third place with a score of 53 eggs. Another pen of Leghorns entered by Pretoocee Poultry plant of Telford, Pa., and Homestead farm's pen of Reds from Newtown, Conn., tied for fourth place with 52 eggs each. These five pens laid at the rate of 78 per cent as compared with 46 per cent for the general average.

Rhode Island Reds — Edward N. Larrabee, Peterboro, N. H., 2552; F. S. Chapin, Longmeadow Mass., 2373; Homestead farms, Newtown, Conn., 2364; F. S. Chapin, Longmeadow, Mass., 2302.

LEGION DISTRICT MEETING TO BE AT NOANK

The regular monthly meeting of the fifth district, the American Legion, will be held next Thursday at the town hall, Noank. This meeting will be very important insomuch as final plans will be made for the participation of the district in the national convention to be held at Boston, October 6th to 9th. It is very important that all the Legionnaires of the district who intend to take advantage of the Pullman arrangements made attend this meeting or advise the post national convention committeemen of their intentions or their plans, otherwise they cannot be accommodated as after this date this means of travel and sleeping accommodations will probably be closed. Special reduced fare certificates will be necessary for this train and may be had upon application to the post officers or the department adjutant.

The special Pullman train will be made up at Stamford and will leave Stamford at midnight Sunday, October 5th. The Pullman cars to handle the members from the fifth district will be picked up at New London. These cars will be ready for occupancy early Sunday evening, October 5th and the train is due to leave New London Monday, October 6th, at 2:15 a. m. and due in Boston at 5:05 a. m. Here they will be parked and are to be used as quarters for the party until Wednesday, October 8th, when the return trip is due to leave Boston at 6:00 p. m., arriving at New London at 8:30 p. m. Arrangements are being made whereby it may be possible to hold this train over until Thursday evening, October 9th. Final details about this plan will be reported at this meeting by John Killeen, of Montville, who is the district national convention committeeman.

To accommodate those who wish to view the monster parade on Tuesday, October 7th, special excursion trains will be run, made up of day coaches only, to accommodate the general public as well as Legionnaires and auxiliary members. This train will leave New London at 7:20 a. m. Tuesday, October 7th, and will arrive at Boston at 10 a. m. Returning it will leave Boston that night at a late hour, the time to be announced later. Reduced fare certificates are not required for this train. Reduced fare certificates will be necessary for all those traveling on regular scheduled trains. The district meeting is being held under the auspices of the Noank post and its auxiliary and will be followed by refreshments and dancing.

STATE FORESTRY MEETING AT ROCKY NECK BEACH

The Connecticut Forest and Park association will hold its fall field meeting at Rocky Neck beach in the town of East Lyme, on Saturday, October 4, beginning at 11 a. m.

A few months ago, ten public spirited citizens of Connecticut secured control of the Rocky Neck beach property, their one and only aim being to hold it for the public until the legislature may make the necessary purchase appropriation. This group will deed the property to the state for the exact cost to them. The property includes over 500 acres and over one half mile of beautiful white sand beach. If the people of southeastern Connecticut are to have adequate public beach privileges the state must acquire this property. There are no other available beaches in that section which can compare with it.

The program—11:00 a. m., inspection of the property; 12:30 p. m., luncheon. (Bring your own, but hot coffee will be provided). 1:30 p. m., meeting. Theodore S. Woolsey, president of the Connecticut Forest and Park association, presiding. "Shore Parks" Walter O. Filley, treasurer of Connecticut Park and Forest commission. "Southeastern Connecticut Needs A Shore Park," Hon. Lee R. Robbins, mayor of the city of Norwich. "State Parks and Forests," Lieut. Gov. Ernest E. Rogers.

Plans were made for the fall work. After the meeting members assembled in the dining-room. Mrs. Frank Carter and Miss Gertrude Byrd were pleasantly surprised in honor of their birthdays. Both were the recipients of useful and pretty gifts. The color scheme was pink and white. The hostess served a dainty lunch, assisted by Mrs. Martha Silvia. Mrs. Frank Carter entertains at the October meeting.

REGISTRATION PLAN FOR LEGION NATIONAL CONVENTION

For the information of those who expect to attend the national convention of the American Legion at Boston October 6th to 9th, a plan of registration has been put into effect according to advices received from the state headquarters of the department of Connecticut. For national registration post officers have received sheets upon which they may register at a fee of $1.00 each, all members of the Legion, auxiliary and their families going to Boston. Members so registered will receive from the Boston committee, probably through post officers, one convention guests badge similar to the badges of delegates, one program and one book of strip tickets. Some of these tickets will admit bearers to certain events at Boston without further fee and others will permit the holder to purchase at reduced rate admission to other attractions not on the free entertainment list.

Department headquarters will be located at the Hotel Statler, Boston, and will open Saturday, October 4th, for the convenience of Connecticut members and families going ahead for the convention opening. There will be a separate registration for this which will include name, address, post, Boston address and service outfit if desired. Post officers, especially housing chairmen, have been requested to aid in this work by sending advance lists of members from their posts who have already been assigned housing by the Boston committee. All members who go to Boston without being so registered in advance should report to department headquarters immediately upon arrival in Boston so that their convention addresses may be known.

It is hoped by the department convention committee that all members of the department who are able will attend the Boston convention in the official department uniform. It has been voted by the committee that members not in the regulation uniform for the parade be requested to appear in the following dress: White shirt, white duck trousers, blue bow tie black shoes, legion cap and sash of a color to be chosen by each district.

SCHWARTZ BROS.

Last Days of Celebration

Beginning today, (Monday), and continuing Wednesday night, Thursday Friday and Saturday, we will feature specials worked out so as to make the last days of our 25th Anniversary Celebration the most spectacular and sensational of all. We may have started out strong, but we're going to end up even stronger. We are giving even greater values that you will at once recognize, so that you will call often and buy your furniture needs for months ahead. It must be remembered that Schwartz Bros. prices are at all times lower and during these last days of celebration reductions have been made that are greater than ever.

NORWICH, and Neighboring Cities Give Hearty Response

The large response from our invitations by local people and out of town folks is indeed gratifying. Scores of callers outside of Norwich include cities of Westerly, Moosup, Jewett City, Voluntown, Willimantic, and the immediate areas surrounding them. Deliveries are made regularly and in most cases the volume makes it necessary to give daily service.

The large attendance last Thursday night at the cutting of the Anniversary Cake is further proof of the interest people take in Schwartz Bros. activities. It is estimated that about 3,000 people gathered at the store to join in the celebration. All Norwich was aware that something was doing at Schwartz Bros. No doubt you were there or you have heard your friends talk about it.

Looking Ahead!

The Schwartz Bros. store is composed of men who look ahead and think ahead. There password is "Forward." They think that way and their policies and methods of doing business are along progressive lines. That these methods are good can be proved in two ways. The first is—that the store is growing from year to year, making more and more friends and doing a regular increase in business. The second is—that our methods are being followed by those that think that when they don't know how, following a leader is safe. That may be good second-hand horse sense.

Many that come to our store call our attention to this. It works out right in the end. Parrot-like business methods cannot make a business—not a sound business—not a business that can stand on its own feet—that can think for itself. Such a business is always in danger. The buying public must be extra cautious when buying at such places for in the end they are the ones that pay for poor business methods.

We are glad to say that Schwartz Bros. carry on their business on ideas that are theirs and by methods that they work out in the interests of their customers.

Opportunity

A closing word on the opportunity of greater saving than ever, during the closing and last days of this 25th Anniversary Celebration. In the advertisement here to the right, and in Wednesday, Thursday and Friday's advertisements, we show you how much you can get for very little money. A great opportunity—but like all opportunities it is short-lived—it is here for only a few days more. To the right the prices listed are for Monday only, until 6 P. M.

LEGS DIAMOND NOW UNDER ARREST IN PHILADELPHIA

Was Ordered Arrested as a Suspicious Character—Police Have Planned to "Slate" and "Mug" Him—Will Be Given Hearing Today—New York Gangster Says That He Has Done Nothing Wrong—Had Been Ordered Out of Germany as an Undesirable.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 22.—(AP)—Jack (Legs) Diamond, New York racketeer, who was ordered out of Germany as an undesirable and who arrived here today on board the steamer Hanover, was ordered arrested by Philadelphia police late today as a suspicious character.

He was taken from the ship by two Philadelphia detectives and driven away. Police said it was planned to "slate" and "mug" him and give him a hearing tomorrow.

The New York gangster was taken first to the 12th and asked to be permitted to leave.

"I've done nothing wrong," he said, "why don't you let me go on my way? This is just a lot of newspaper publicity."

"Didn't you ever go under the name of Nolan?" asked Captain Creedon.

"No, Diamond is my name," the gangster replied. "I've done nothing. I was born and raised in Philadelphia—I don't see why you can't treat me right. I want to go on to Washington."

Captain Creedon declared that Diamond must remain in town "over night" despite his protests, until after he has a hearing on the suspicious character charge lodged against him.

EXPECT FULL INFORMATION ABOUT LEGS DIAMOND

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—(AP)—Police Commissioner Edward Mulrooney said today he did not plan to arrest Jack (Legs) Diamond who arrived in Philadelphia today, after being deported from Germany.

"But we expect to get full information about him," the commissioner added.

Mulrooney made no mention of Harry Weston, Catskill readhouse man, who disappeared just before Diamond left for Europe and whose bloodstained car was found in the possession of a man alleged to be a Diamond beer runner.

HERBERT HOOVER, JR., HAS TUBERCULAR INFECTION

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22—(AP)—The illness of Herbert Hoover, Jr., elder son of President and Mrs. Hoover, today was diagnosed as a "very early tubercular infection of a small area in the chest."

Captain Joel T. Boone, White House physician, in making the announcement, said that since the lesion had been discovered early, the outcome is "viewed optimistically" and a complete recovery is believed likely.

The president's son is to remain at the presidential lodge in the Virginia mountains, at an altitude of about 2,500 feet until cold weather. Then, Captain Boone said, he will be brought back to Washington for another examination after which the future course of his treatment will be determined.

Months of constant work was said by the white house physician to have left the 28-year-old son of Mr. Hoover in a generally rundown condition. Last week-end he was taken to the Rapidan River lodge, where he has remained in bed since, and it was announced then that he was suffering from an intestinal disorder and an inflamed digestive system. At that time, Dr. Boone said today, "suspicious evidence was elicited" of a tubercular infection.

"Subsequent clinical and laboratory investigations," Captain Boone said, "have confirmed earlier suspicions so that it can be definitely stated that the diagnosis is established."

The physician added that the president's son has responded to treatment and during the week had gained strength and weight.

HEARD NOT TO BLAME FOR SHAMROCK NOT WINNING

BRISTOL, R. I., Sept. 22—(AP)—Captain Heard will sail Sir Thomas' racing yacht next season. "He was not to blame for Shamrock's not winning," said Col. Duncan Neill, who manages all of Lipton's yachting affairs, today as he stood on a wharf here and watched the large crew of yard riggers and Enterprise sailors ease Enterprise's famous metal mast to a horizontal position on the horses placed along the wharf. Shamrock arrived early this afternoon just as the riggers and sailors were hoisting the duralumin mast out of the latest cup defender. Shamrock's houseboat Killarney arrived soon after and the crew immediately began preparations for taking Shamrock's mast out of her to be shortened for the yacht's voyage to England.

MECHANICAL RESPIRATOR IS KEEPING NURSE ALIVE

CHICAGO, Sept. 22 — (AP) — After twelve days in a mechanical respirator, Miss Frances McGaan, student nurse at St. Luke's hospital, tonight showed continued signs of improvement. Hospital attaches predicted that she would overcome the attack of infantile paralysis which rendered her lung muscles useless.

During the day she was removed five times from the respirator for periods of a few minutes each, and was able to continue the breathing which heretofore the machine has made possible.

She expressed an ambition to become well enough to help perfect the machine which has kept her alive by forced breathing and suggested several changes in its mechanism for the comfort of patients.

NO FALLING OFF IN MORAL CODE OF YOUNG PEOPLE

SWAMPSCOTT, Mass., Sept. 22—(AP)—There has been no deterioration of the moral code of young people in recent years, J. Elmer Morgan, Washington chairman of publications, said today at the semi-annual meeting here of the National Parent-Teachers' association board of managers.

"The attitude of the mass has never been so sound before," said Morgan. "That is the general feeling of the whole association."

The board decided to hold the national convention of the association at Hot Springs, Ark., next May 1 to 10.

REDUCTION OF AUTOMOBILE PRODUCTION LAST MONTH

The department of commerce today placed the total August output at 223,-446 as against 263,863 during July and 493,628 for August of last year.

The commerce department reported also Canadian automobile manufacture had dropped to 9,729 last month against 10,188 in July and 14,214 in August, 1929.

FARMERS ADVISED TO BUY WHEAT FOR LIVESTOCK FEED

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—(AP)—The charge of Secretary Hyde that short selling of wheat in the Chicago pit by the Russian government contributed at least in part to the recent decline in prices was reiterated today by Chairman Legge of the farm board.

At the same time, he advised farmers to purchase wheat now at a low price and use it as a livestock feed.

"Then there would be an end to all this excitement," Legge asserted. "There would be no wheat for sale."

The department of agriculture joined in advising the purchase of feedstuffs at this time.

While the chairman said the full effect on the market price of the short selling by the Russian government was uncertain, an official of the agency which placed the selling orders announced the total of their operations had been ,765,000 bushels.

B. Y. Belitzky, vice-president of the All Russian Textile syndicate, said the operations were carried on only on the 9th, 10th and 11th of this month. He denied they extended over a period of several months, as the secretary understood.

Belitzky said he had offered department of agriculture representatives the full figures at the time they asked if wheat had been sold short, but that he was informed "the secretary of agriculture would communicate with me if he desired these figures." The names of the brokers used were given at that time, he added.

PRESSING CLAIMS AGAINST GERMANY FOR EXPLOSION

THE HAGUE, Sept. 22.—(AP)—The fateful day of Jan. 11, 1917, when the Kingsland (N. J.) munitions plant caught fire and blew up was dealt with by Robert Bonynge, American claims agent and counsel for the United States, in this afternoon's session of the mixed claims tribunal adjudicating American claims against Germany resulting from damages inflicted before America entered the World war.

"On that day," said Commissioner Bonynge in the trial today, "Wozniak and Rodriguez, who were in German employ, were working side by side at a bench in the plat and it was at that bench that the fire originated.

"Both Wozniak and Rodriguez had been supplied with incendiary devices by the German agent Hermann, who had been sent to America with instructions to blow up munitions and ammunition plants.

"Two other German agents, Jahnke and Binsch, also had claimed while working in Mexico they were responsible for the disastrous explosion at the Black Tom (N. J.) terminal."

This claim, Commissioner Bonynge concluded, was corroborated by the fact that an official named Thorne, who was assistant employment manager at the Kingsland plant, was an acquaintance of Binsch and had caused Rodriguez to be employed at the plant from December, 1916, until the explosion.

SAYS CRATER MIGHT HAVE BEEN SLAIN OR KIDNAPED

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—(AP)—A New York county grand jury's inquiry into the disappearance of Supreme Court Justice Joseph F. Crater was augmented today by authorities of Kennebec county, Maine, where the Crater summer home is located. They took steps to determine whether the judge was a victim of foul play in that jurisdiction.

District Attorney Crain, who solicited the aid of County Attorney Southard of Kennebec county, said Crater may have disappeared not from New York on Aug. 6, but from Maine on a later date.

"It is possible that Justice Crater went either by automobile or train to Belgrade Lakes and disappeared after reaching there," Crain said. "There are circumstances that make this seem possible."

Asked what crime involving Justice Crater might have been committed in Maine, the district attorney said, "He might have been slain or kidnaped."

NEW YORK, Sept. 22—(AP)—Former Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, returned today from a three months' vacation abroad with no idea as to whether Europe was on the verge of a war or what was the political or economic condition of the countries he visited.

"I can say that I am mighty glad to get back to the United States after a summer abroad," he added. He squinted through the thick glass of the smoking room of the liner Bremen at the slowly appearing New York skyline.

"I can just see the skyline of New York," he added, "it looks good to me."

Soviet Government Uncovers [illegible]nspiracy

MOSCOW, Sept. 22.—(AP)—The government today announced disclosures by the ogpu (secret police) of a powerful counter-revolutionary society embracing the organizations of the meat, fish, vegetable and other food industries as well as the commissariat and trade and state planning institutions.

The police charged the society with striving to create a food panic throughout the country, thus exciting the resentment of the population and preparing the ground for overthrow of the proletarian dictatorship. It was the purpose of the conspirators, the authorities said, to establish instead a bourgeois democracy.

The society, headed by Prof. Alexander Ryasantsev, chairman of the meats products department of the commissariat, formerly a rich landowner and general in the czarist army, included scores of high officials in all branches of the soviet food producing and distributing institutions. Most of the members of the society were former noblemen, czarist officers, manufacturers and property owners.

According to a confession which the secret police claim to have secured, the Ryazantsev society was initiated and subsidized by a British meat packing firm, "Union Storage Co." through its Russian representative.

Ryazantsev, the alleged confession narrated, admitted receiving £10,000 for his part.

The counter-revolutionists will be tried by a police body instead of the supreme court.

LIBERAL CELEBRATION IN RUSSIA OF ROSH HASHANAH

MOSCOW, Sept. 22.—(AP)—The Jewish telegraphic agency reports that religious preparations for celebrating Rosh Hashanah tonight were more widespread in Russia this year than in any other year since the revolution. This is said to be due to the fact that for the first time the government is not directly encouraging the anti-religious movement, nor interfering with synagogue services.

In a number of private houses religious quorums have been arranged for, something which was impossible a year ago, when every building owner was instructed to forbid any Jewish religious gathering. All seats in Moscow synagogues this year have been reserved. The Choral synagogue, the largest in Russia, is a special mecca of worshipers.

Reports from the provinces also indicate that the religious fervor this Rosh Hashanah is stronger than the anti-religious sentiment. Synagogues throughout the soviet union are selling seats for the high holidays undisturbed, and religious meetings are being organized in innumerable private homes without government hindrance and in spite of hte propaganda of the local Jewish communists.

COMMUNISTS HAD HOPED TO START REVOLT IN ECUADOR

QUITO, Ecuador, Sept. 22—(AP)—President Ayora of Ecuador, in an interview granted the Associated Press correspondent tonight, blamed communist circles for spreading rumors in other countries about an alleged revolutionary movement here.

The president said that the situation in Ecuador is politically normal, but that the communists had hoped to start a revolution.

The only matter troubling the government is a strike among students of the Colegio Nacional. President Ayora said there was no reason why student demonstrations against university authorities should be taken as indicating political disturbance.

INSURGENTS NOW MENANCE THE CHILEAN GOVERNMENT

Wire Communication is Disrupted Between Santiago and Valparaiso and the City of Conception, Where the Revolt Broke Out Sunday—All Railway Traffic South of Santiago Has Been Suspended—Two American Airmen Are Being Held in the City of Conception.

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 22.—(AP)—Telegraph and telephone communications were reported today to have been interrupted in Chile between Santiago and Valparaiso and the southern city of Concepcion, where an insurgent movement against the Chilean government was attempted yesterday. All railway traffic south of Santiago is suspended.

Well informed circles tonight expressed the belief that unexpected events may happen across the Andes. They gave little credit to official dispatches from Santiago stating that everything was calm after failure of the revolutionary attempt at Concepcion.

It is widely believed in Buenos Aires that the insurgent movement in the third large Chilean city was carefully prepared. It is thought to have received strong support from Chilean military and naval forces.

BUSINESS OUTLOOK HAS ENCOURAGING OUTLOOK

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22—(AP)—A silver lining in the clouds of business depression that have hovered over the United States in recent months was discerned today by Secretary Lamont.

"It is prefectly clear," the commerce secretary said in a statement, "that business on the whole has ceased a marked decline which was characteristic of a number of earlier months and there are some distinctly encouraging features."

Lamont added that the most encouraging signs were the growth of export trade as revealed by August statistics and the distinct increase in retail trade in this country.

"The increase of exports during August," he said, "was more than is customary at this season. The gain already manifested in retail trade is more than usually occurs at this season. Moreover the stocks of retail stores are exceptionally low and there is good reason to believe that their purchases from manufacturers and wholesalers will increase materially."

Lamont added that business men already are buying raw materials for ahead of the current consumption and that this was a natural reaction to the present low level of commodity prices.

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 22—The matters of a traffic survey and the forthcoming $500,000 drive for a new St. Joseph's hospital were discussed in talks delivered at a membership meeting of the chamber of commerce held in connection with a dinner at the Nathan Hale hotel tonight. Mayor Walter R. King, Chief of Police Thomas F. Grady and the following members of the common council were in attendance to hear the traffic discussion: Alderman C. A. Lamoureux, Robert A. Hanna, Eugene E. Lewis, John P. Carlsen, Louis C. Veglard, and Herbert I. Sanderson. The speaker on this subject, introduced by Chamber President Louis H. Arnold, was Howard D. Baldwin, technician of the state motor vehicle department. Mr. Baldwin's department has been invited to conduct a survey in Willimantic by the council.

He said that a preliminary visit of the town indicated to him that the outstanding problem was that of parking, especially in the business district. He warned against curb parks and proposed time limits to create a larger turnover of parked automobiles. He said that there were 2,548 automobiles in the city in 1929 and that there had been 145 accidents during the year, an increase of only 11 accidents over 1928, despite the increase in local ownership of automobiles and in through traffic.

He said that taxi-stands on the main street were allowed in many cities but were specifically designated and reserved only for taxis. He warned against the promiscuous use of signal lights on the grounds that they often prove a severe delay to traffic while being very expensive to operate. He termed double-parking as taboo.

The department has conducted a survey in 37 towns of the state, 29 of the surveys now being completed and accepted. The surveys are done only upon invitation and at no expense to the city. Acceptance of all or part of the reports is left entirely to the city council. Mr. Baldwin stated later that he expected to have the engineers of his department begin their work here Tuesday of next week. All through the summer counters have been at work in the city so that peak traffic conditions may be compared at various seasons.

Charles D. Folsom of New York city, who has been retained by the trustees of St. Joseph's hospital to conduct a half-million dollar drive, which will open in a few weeks, spoke on the needs of a new hospital and of the manner in which the drive would be staged. He emphasized the fact that in view of present conditions, payments on pledges made at this time would be extended over a period of three years, the first payment becoming due April 1, 1931. He enlisted the endorsement of the chamber of commerce to the project.

SITE FOR NEW HOSPITAL GIVEN BY VANDERMAN FAMILY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 22—The donation of an ideal site by members of the Vanderman family for the new St. Joseph's hospital for which a $500,000 campaign will be launced this fall, was announced today. The land, which will be as a memorial to the late William Vanderman, founder of the Vanderman Manufacturing company consists of 12 acres and is located directly in the rear of the Harden Fitch estate on West Main street. The location is on a hill west of Mansfield avenue and about one mile from the center of the city.

The plot was purchased by the late Mr. Vanderman and at his death in 1918 was inherited by Mrs. Annie B. Vanderman, Mrs. Grace A. Sullivan and George A. Vanderman. The trustees of St. Joseph's hospital accepted the gift and title during the past summer but withheld announcement of the donation until publication of the plans for the drive.

It was found that the plot was without convenient entrance and investigation disclosed that near the junction of Prospect street and Mansfield avenue there was a block of land 80 feet wide that would serve well for the purpose. This additional land was subsequently given by Jeremiah E. Sullivan, John Reilly and George A. Vanderman.

The donation is given unconditionally with but two restrictions, first, that the entire tract must be kept for hospital purposes and that no part of it may be disposed of for other uses and secondly, that a modern hospital with not less than 50 beds must be built on the property within five years.

Some months ago the hospital trustees retained Charles F. Neergaard of New York, one of the ablest hospital consultants in the country, to advise them for economy of construction and efficiency of operation of the proposed new hospital. After viewing the donated plot Mr. Neergaard made the following report to the trustees: "The new site is ideal; the exposure sloping to the southwest is excellent. It overlooks the beautiful Willimantic River valley and surrounding hills and will afford a most delightful and beneficial atmosphere for the sick."

The plot is so located and designed that the hospital will be erected at a distance from traffic and residences to insure absolute solitude and clean air while the elevated position on the slope of a hill will insure the health-giving and restful sunshine now considered so strong a factor in recuperation.

SHRINE OF EUGENE FIELD DRAWS GROWING NUMBERS

CHICAGO—(AP)—The popularity of Eugene Field, the famous former columnist and children's poet, is growing rather than diminishing, the increasing number of visitors to his burial shrine indicates.

Field is buried in a shaded cloister close beside the Episcopal church of the Holy Comforter at Kenilworth, a short distance north of Chicago. An iron railing surrounds the tomb, a hundred trees and shrubs make its setting, and a marble altar stands nearby.

The number of visitors to the shrine grows year by year, according to the rector of the church, and the number of children who come there to pay their respects to the memory of the poet, he says, is especially remarkable.

CHEAPER TO CAN NOW THAN BUY NEXT WINTER

Home-canning Pays Because Fruit and Pure Cane Sugar Are So Cheap Now

The abundance of luscious fruits in the market now, and pure cane sugar at an unheard-of low price, give every housewife the opportunity to put up a wide variety of preserves, jellies and jams at a most reasonable cost. With these home-canned delicacies on hand, the problem of next winter's fruit desserts can be most inexpensively solved.

From the viewpoint of health, canned fruit, jellies and jams should appear daily in the winter diet. Canned fruits are rich in vitamins. Their flavor pleases the appetite, and their sugar content helps to balance the meal.

Aside from eating jelly or jam with bread or toast, they are a delicious accompaniment for roast meats and other dishes. And a spoonful used to top rice or bread puddings makes these nourishing desserts more taste-appealing.

As pure cane sugar plays an important part in preserving, so it is equally essential in the preparation of every-day meals. Pure cane sugar when used to season canned or fresh vegetables improves their flavor, thereby making them more enjoyable to the taste. Most foods are more delicious with pure cane sugar. DANIELSON

MOOSUP MAN HELD ON CHARGE OF MANSLAUGHTER

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON Sept. 22.—Bart Constantine, of Moosup, a patient at the Day Kimball hospital, was being held under bonds of $1,000 today, by order of Coroner Arthur G. Bill, on charges of manslaughter and operating a motor vehicle while he was under the influence of an intoxicant.

Specifically, Constantine will be charged in court with causing the death, in Moosup, just before 10 o'clock last night, of William Lambert, 35 years of age, and a resident of that place. Constantine was operating a car in which he and Lambert were the only passengers when the machine crashed head-on into a tree near King's filling station on the Moosup-Sterling road.

The accident was checked up by Sergeant G. L. Gardner and State Officer Lionel Poirier of the Danielson barracks and also investigated by Coroner Bill. Constantine offered the explanation that Lambert, who is said to have been intoxicated, grabbed Constantine around the neck as the car was proceeding along the road, causing the driver to lose control and to head directly for the tree.

Lambert was taken away from the scene of the wreck in an automobile, but died on his way to the Day Kimball hospital. He was badly injured about the head. Constantine was not dangerously injured, but it was also necessary to take him to the hospital for treatment.

Constantine also figured in a fatal accident in a car he was driving, back in 1923, when his machine was in collision with a motorcycle operated by Ernest Harper of Naitic, R. I., who was killed. Constantine also has been arrested and convicted in Rhode Island for operating a motor vehicle while he was intoxicated. He had his operator's license for Connecticut suspended in January, 1928, and obtained restoration of it in January, 1929. He is a woolen weaver by occupation, is married and the father of children. Lambert also was a married man and father of three children.

Pierre Boulaine obtained his early education in the schools of Tadousac, later taking a three years' commercial course at Point Levis college. Subsequently he continued his studies at St. Charles seminary at Sherbrooke, P. Q., graduating in the class of 1888. After his graduation he was for two years with the firm of Campbell and Hopkins, grocers, at Sherbrooke, and later for a time with Proulx and Co. In 1891 he returned to Tadousac, where for a year he was assistant registrar of deeds.

Mr. Boulaine came to the United States Nov. 6 1892, locating in Manchester, N. H., where he was a bookkeeper for the Singer Manufacturing company. Later he was transferred to the Nashua branch. In July, 1893, he came to North Grosvenordale to enter the employ of a large general store. He located here in April, 1899, and became a bookkeeper for the Quinebaug company, remaining at the general store of the mill company until March, 1918. Thereafter for a time he was employed as a bookkeeper in Southbridge. In February, 1919, he returned to Danielson and purchased the grocery business of Charles E. Austin and has since successfully conducted it.

Mr. Boulaine is survived by his wife, who before their marriage was Miss Sara Paradis of North Grosvenordale; by two sons Roland and Gerald, and two daughters, Misses Pauline and Fleurette, all of Danielson. He also leaves a sister, Mrs. Ann Marie Olsen of Tadousac. His brother, Henri died in Canada three months ago.

Two Bushels Of Fish Trapped

Today, a considerable number of persons, including a group of officials, watched with interest the pulling of the traps set in the Chase reservoir at East Killingly Saturday by men representing the state fish and game commission.

The first two traps hauled this morning yielded between them, about two bushel of fish. Included in the haul were pickerel weighing up to two pounds, a lot of fine yellow perch and a few pout. Some of the pickerel appeared to weigh between a pound and a half and two pounds. During this afternoon more of the traps were hauled and also gave up quantities of fish. Fish taken out today were transferred to other suitable bodies of water in this section of the county, and will be available for lucky fishermen to catch.

There will of necessity be changes in the personnel of the board of assessors and the board of relief in Killingly following the early October election, no matter which way the election goes. This comes about because A. M. Thompson, member of the board of assessors for a long term of years, and William J. Young, who has a long record of service as a member of the board of relief, no longer wish to serve. Both are republicans. To replace Mr. Thompson the party has selected Charles B. Hutchins as its candidate. Mr. Hutchins previously has served as an assessor. To replace Mr. Young Henry Lague has been named.

TREE "SUICIDE" CUTS OFF SAP FLOW IN OWN ROOTS

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP)—Florida's first case of "tree suicide" has been reported by Joe S. Talmadge, city forester.

Talmadge removed the dead tree, a large oak, and investigated the cause of its demise. He found that two small roots had grown around all the other roots in such a manner as to gradually cut off the flow of sap.

The forester said that tree suicide had been discussed in several magazines from time to time, but that this was the first case on record in Florida.

PUTNAM

WALTER C. BROWN NAMED FOR OFFICE OF SENATOR

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 22.— Re-affirming their faith in Senator Walter C. Brown of Ashford, through the committee on resolutions, twenty-two delegates at the district convention of the 28th senatorial district today unanimously and enthusiastically acclaimed the Ashford candidate for re-election. Absolute harmony, which has become a common place in Windham county republican politics since the campaign opened, reigned throughout the meeting as Senator Brown's nomination was made without the slightest adverse sentiment.

Mr. Brown was escorted to the convention room in the Putnam inn by Mrs. Ida E. Armington of Danielson and Ray C. Bosworth of this city, the committee appointed to notify him of his nomination. After entering, he expressed his appreciation and extended his personal thanks to Justin N. Burrill of Ashford, who offered his name in nomination.

Continuing the order of business,

WALTER C. BROWN

Sidney P. Marland of Danielson, member of the Killingly delegation submitted the names of Leon T. Wilson Putnam, Charles D. Tatem, Eastford and Mrs. Ida E. Armington, Danielson, to comprise the senatorial district committee for the ensuing two years. The committee on resolutions consisted of Sidney P. Marland, Walter N. King and Lewis N. Lawton, of Woodstock, and delegates serving on the committee on credentials were Arthur Morse, of Woodstock, and Clarence H. Barlow, of Ashford.

The delegates were the guests of Senator Brown at a luncheon at the Putnam inn. Charles D. Tatem, of Eastford, convention moderator, was toastmaster and he introduced as speakers: Sheriff Charles A. Gates, of Willimantic, candidate for re-election; State Central Committeeman from the 28th district Sabin S. Russell, of Danielson, and Miss Katherine Byrne, vice chairman of the state republican central committee.

In his talk, which was brief, but directly to the point, Judge Russell emphasized the great importance of getting out the "off year don't vote" element. "Unfortunately," Judge Russell said, "there are a great number of these voters enrolled in the republican party, especially in Windham county."

The total county republican vote, according to the judge, in round numbers is about 23,400, of which number 6,000 failed to reach the polls in 1926 and 3,000 in 1928.

While a republican victory in his opinion is a certainty, Judge Russell reflected upon circumstances which are likely to cut the party majorities unless G. O. P. leaders and subordinates in every community in the state exhaust every possible effort for the cause during the few remaining weeks preceding election day. Chief among these existing handicaps, the speaker said, are present day business conditions. Admitting that the business outlook is not one that can draw the optimism of every voter, Mr. Russell asserted that it is likely the party in power may be held responsible for the condition of business, which is in a true sense of the word an absurdity, but nevertheless a factor which republicans in general must strenuously combat if they expect to pile up the looked for majorities on November 11.

Sheriff Gates in his address, extended his hearty congratulations to Senator Brown and expressed his pleasure in having his name on a ticket on which the name of a man of Senator Brown's character also appears. Impressing upon the minds of the delegates the fact that their work does not end with the naming of their candidate, he urged that every one should upon returning to their respective towns today, go directly to the registrar of voters and obtain ballots for distribution among eligibles not enrolled on the voting lists, in order that the republican victory of 1930 may be the greatest in the history of the party.

The state ticket, he pointed out is one of the strongest ever drafted and is worthy of the undivided support of every loyal Connecticut republican.

Miss Byrne one of the most widely known of Connecticut public speakers in her usual delightful and eloquent manner, delivered a brief but interesting address in which she prophesied a sweeping victory for the republican party at the polls on October 7 and again on November 11. Declaring the women vote an essential factor to this anticipated success, Miss Byrne stated that the men of the party will find their feminine supporters valuable allies when the strength of the party becomes arrayed in battle formation on election day, charged with the supreme duty of preserving the prestige of republicanism and preservation of the welfare of the state. Referring to the 2 A's—apathy and absenteeism—as two unsolicited drawbacks found in every organization, regardless of its nature, Miss Byrne said that these characteristics are prominent in the republican party and will be stamped out only by the getting out of the so-called "lazy vote," which is paramount to the success of the party. In closing, Miss Byrne lauded the state ticket and extended her heartiest congratulations to the nominees, Senator Brown and Sheriff Gates.

The roll of the convention showed the following delegates in attendance: C. H. Barlow, N. G. Armitage, T. H. Babbington and J. N. Burrill, Ashford; Charles D. Tatem and A. S. Walker, Eastford; Ida E. Armington, Sidney P. Marland, A. Putnam Woodward and Grace D. Barstow, Killingly; Leon T. Wilson, Ray C. Bosworth, Elsie A. Galant (clerk of the convention) and Walter N. King, Putnam; Matthew D. Dart, Frank E. Kies, Joseph H. Lafontaine and E. H. Kritzer, Thompson; Arthur M. Morse, William C. Child, Lewis M. Lawton and Luther S. Place, Woodstock. Four delegates were represented by proxy.

CHIEF THURSTON MAKING BRAVE FIGHT FOR LIFE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 22.—Anxiety prevailed in municipal circles this afternoon and extended throughout the city when word came from the Truesdell hospital in Fall River, Mass., where Fire Chief Ralph E. Thurston is a patient, that the well known citizen and prominent public official is making a brave fight for his life. In communicating word of his condition to Dr. F. A. Morrell, intimate friend of Chief Thurston, Dr. Truesdell of Fall River, the chief's attending physician when asked what chances for recovery for the stricken executive were, is reported to have said: "He has a fighting chance."

Chief Thurston has been a patient at the Fall River hospital for many weeks where he has been suffering from a poison which seeped into his system through an infected tooth. Until yesterday reports of his condition were to the effect that he was making gradual recovery, but these were thwarted when the alarming bulletin was conveyed to Dr. Morrell late today.

DRANK YEAST FOR CIDER BUT RESULTS NOT FATAL

Last week a local store sold 300, or thereabouts, cakes of yeast. Presumably two-thirds of that number may have been used in the making of a little something to take. Possibly 50 were used in baking, leaving around 200 of the cakes sold, to be eaten as a health diet, probably with favorable results. Forty-five years ago, when commercial pressed yeast cakes were not in common use, many of the local thrifty housewives used to make their own. Mrs. Keziah Barber made old-fashioned potato yeast by the gallon, and sold it for three cents a cup. Near her home was located a meat market, where the owner employed three, and sometimes four young men. To accommodate Mrs. Barber a gallon jug of yeast was kept in the big market ice box, on the floor down behind the corned beef barrel. One day one of the hired butchers came into possession of a jug of fine cider, old and hard. He secured this prize up around Packerville where he had friends along his meat peddling route. It was considerable dark in the ice box when he got in that night, and he put his jug of cider on the floor behind the corned beef barrel. Next morning, starting early on a trip to Voluntown, and just before leaving, the owner of the cider slipped into the ice box, reached down, grabbed up what he supposed was his jug and took a man's size pull. It didn't taste just as it ought to, and gurgled around inside considerably. Investigating, there was another jug. Inside that thirsty butcher nothing less than a quart of Mrs. Barber's A-1 potato yeast was performing its health-giving office and then some. The meat man's howls were heard a mile away as he rolled around the floor. Dr. Hammond, of Danielson was sent for and Clark Reynolds drove to Norwich for a stomach pump. Just as the man was getting ready to cash in, E. N. Tupper, who ran the Ashland boarding house, came over and learned what was to be recorded on the death certificate. "Sho!" said he, "where's the yeast?" The jug was produced, he put it to his head, and drank a pint without stopping to breathe. "There!" said he, "that's good stuff and we'll die together!" The first victim looked brighter, and soon said he felt better, ate four pork chops and started for Voluntown. He, and one other of all those concerned are alive today and they both are loud in their praises of yeast as a sure cure for all ills, including corns and bunions.

It is believed that certain other Canadian conditions presented no allurements for the local voyagers.

RANGE BULLS BEING SHOD IN NEVADA TO SAVE FEET

RENO, Nev. (AP)—Nevada ranges are developing a new racket for the blacksmith.

Ranchmen in White Pine and Humboldt counties have had their range bulls shod in an effort to cut down the excessive loss of animals from sore feet, to keep them in better condition and to get a better price when they are sold. The practice is expected to spread to the entire state.

A special bull shoe of two pieces, necessitated by the cloven hoof, is nailed on while the animal is confined in a specially constructed frame.

PREVENTING HIGHWAY DEATHS

Last year as 1929 was nearing its close, it was pointed out to the motorists of Rhode Island that a certain number of deaths from automobile accidents could be expected before the close of the year, unless extra efforts were made by auto drivers and individuals to prevent it. This prediction was based upon previous experience and it aroused so much interest and produced such a concentration of effort that it was upset. It was a happy result and showed what could be done by trying to be careful.

There isn't much of this year left, a little more than a quarter, but it is figured once more that if the rate at which fatalities have occurred in the highways during 1930 thus far is continued there will be 42 more persons killed before the end of the year. Thus the motorists of the neighboring state are faced with the proposition of driving more carefully and saving 42 lives or disregarding the requirements of safety and sending 42 persons into eternity.

Motorists in Rhode Island are having the importance of safer driving set before them in a manner which impresses. Those who drive motor vehicles cannot fail to appreciate the fact that most of the fatal accidents are needless. They recognize it when others are involved and it is only natural that they should desire to avoid any such unfortunate circumstances themselves.

Highway safety depends to a large degree upon personal effort. With such a large number of needless deaths there is sufficient reason for the exercise of all possible care, for refraining from careless and reckless driving and for paying due respect to the rules of the highway and traffic regulations.

Certainly there is a sufficient inducement for safe driving if it will mean the saving of 42 lives. By the same token, if it is possible to save 42 lives during a quarter of the year, a much greater record in life saving can be made by driving safely throughout the entire year, and with highways becoming more, and more crowded each year there is a corresponding need for safer driving.

MORROW'S AMBASSADORSHIP

When the diplomatic representative of this country administers his office so successfully that the people of the country to which he was sent regret his departure it is easy to understand that he has made a success of his effort. When, in addition, it is realized that he has changed the relations of the countries from that of uncertainty to that of good friendship and a decidedly improved understanding, it explains why his departure brought so many expressions of sorrow.

Dwight W Morrow was named ambassador to Mexico at a time when there had not succeeded in smoothing out the long-standing attitude of ill feeling and suspicion He was not selected because he had accomplished valuable diplomatic service on other occasions, but because it was believed he had the natural talent to meet the situation and meet it right. All too well is it known how successfully he has met the test. He went to Mexico after informing himself upon conditions existing there, got into close contact with the leaders in the Calles government, avoided any stiff-necked and lordly attitude, and soon established the utmost confidence in himself, his government and his efforts.

It was not long before Mr. Morrow had eliminated the distrust of previous days and not only was he discussing long-standing problems existing between the neighboring republics but his advice was also being sought concerning purely domestic questions in Mexico.

Contrary to some other ambassadors Mr. Morrow found that he could do business with Mexico, and the president and other officials of Mexico found they could deal effectively with him. The result was that decidedly better conditions followed and there was regret even when Mr. Morrow returned to Washington for a visit or to accept other duties of a temporary nature. In view of the success which has attended his work in Mexico, the reaction of that government and the people of Mexico City on his termination of his ambassadorship was a glowing tribute to the man and his methods. The country loses a valued diplomat but it hopes to experience a continuance or similar service through his election to the United States senate by New Jersey.

FIGHTING ILLITERACY

In the fight against illiteracy a new movement is underway in the southern states which gives promise of important accomplishment.

From Georgia comes word that the Rotary clubs of that state are to campaign against illiteracy as one of their main objectives. This endeavor appears to have been prompted by the campaign which Georgia started early in the year in order to make a substantial reduction in illiteracy before the census was taken. It was with a good deal of pride that the state was able to report that 40,000 persons had been taught to read and write. Now it seems to be the purpose of the Rotarians to see that the job is continued and completed. At the same time, Georgia is setting an example which other states will do well to follow.

Illiteracy has had a strong grip on the southern states. Georgia is not the only one to recognize this, nor is it the only one to attempt to change it. Similar efforts have been made by Alabama, South Carolina and Louisiana, in which about 200,000 persons have been taught to read and write, while the campaign was extensive enough to reach many thousands in Virginia, West Virginia, Tennessee and Arkansas.

This indicates an awakening to conditions which exist and a determination to overcome them. The desire to get rid of illiteracy, even to the extent of hunting up and teaching the illiterate, is to be commended, and with such fine progress being made it is a capital idea that has sprung up in Georgia to keep after the job until it is finished.

That these states have received valuable inspiration and assistance from the National Advisory committee on illiteracy is indicated. Leadership from that direction has played an important part and will continue to do so, but with the cooperation of states and state organizations the accomplishments will be more rapid and gratifying.

The fight against illiteracy is one in which not solely the southern states but all the 48 commonwealths can participate with profit. In fact, in every city, full use of the educational facilities should be made to such an end.

SIR THOMAS' INVITATION

In the extension of his invitation to the American yacht owners to send their craft across the water to race with the Shamrock V and others of that class, Sir Thomas Lipton didn't seek to have the possession of America's cup determined thereby. He was desirous of seeing what the result would be after our racing sloops crossed the Atlantic and met the conditions on the other side.

The inference under the invitation is that Sir Thomas believes that a better showing would be made by his challenger over there. Probably his opinion in that matter would not be supported by yachtsmen in this country, for it is difficult to believe that Shamrock V would have done any better in British waters than it did in American What does seem possible, and it has been referred to before, is that there might have been a different race with different handling.

The question might be properly asked as to whether the British skipper got everything possible out of Shamrock V and whether the result would have been the same had the American skipper and crew been sailing the Lipton sloop and the British skipper and crew been handling Enterprise. That might have been determined if a race could have been arranged under those conditions. It wouldn't necessitate going across the water, and a race of the yachts on the other side wouldn't furnish the answer.

Still there is nothing against the invitation which has been extended by Sir Thomas. Others would like to see how American yachts and their handlers would make out on the other side and it is not impossible that one of them would bring home another cup to remain indefinitely on this side of the Atlantic.

PROMISES WITHOUT ACTION

Conditions in New York city have been under criticism for a long time. They were brought out quite effectively during the campaign preceding the last mayoralty election, but the voters insisted upon retaining the criticized administration. They have been kept in the limelight since election by the manner in which salaries of the faithful have been boosted by themselves and by the revelations which have been going on for weeks in connection with appointments and courts

The end is not yet, but developments have stirred Mayor Walker to talk, and in the course of his remarks he has assured the people of that city that he is always ready to listen to any complaints which may be offered concerning city departments and to investigate such complaints.

In other words, he is satisfied to have conditions go on as they have been and are going without doing anything to set them right, unless he considers the protest of sufficient importance to act. There have been statements made concerning conditions in New York which haven't as yet gotten action on his part. Possibly they were not made directly to him and possibly he doesn't consider them of sufficient importance to act, but it is quite evident that he has inaugurated no investigation as yet and none appears to be underway from his direction

While New York is experiencing investigations at the hands of the courts and under authority from the governor, there appears to be no endeavor on the part of the mayor to start a clean-up on his own account, despite his claims.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22—Probably every one is familiar with the instructions a noted managing editor once gave a newly fledged reporter, how to recognize "news" when he ran across it.

"If a dog bites a man, it isn't worth much, but if a man bites a dog it is news." And that might apply to the week end trip the President and Mrs. Hoover made to Rapidan last Sunday.

It is a fact that certain newspapers carried on the front page, "President and Mrs. Hoover motored to the Rapidan camp taking with them no week end guests." The news value comes from the fact that in the 18 months that have passed since President Hoover entered the white house, there has not been a week end without a house party of guests numbering any where from five to 25. Maybe it was at the white house, maybe at the camp, but always a string of guests appeared in the presidential item as given out to the press from the white house.

That fits in well with the authentic information that since that date on March 4, 1929, the President and Mrs. Hoover have never been without guests at luncheon and dinner, and also frequently at breakfast, for, like the week ends, they are seldom, if ever, without house guests. As they say down east, "The Hoovers like company."

They prepared for it by adding to the staff of white house employes until the number reached 50, so we are told.

But the past week, except their son and a woman relative of Mrs. Hoover, who was regarded as "one of the family," no stranger composed the Rapidan presidential party, except the usual number of secret service men, who are always standing by, wherever the president goes.

Maybe Mrs. Hoover "was clean tuckered out," as the elder Mrs. Leiter is said to have told Mrs. Cleveland at one of the presidential receptions in the Cleveland administration. As the story runs, Mrs. Leiter, a woman of great wealth, fashionable and quaint with original "naturalness" in the midst of Washington's overweighted "code" of what's what, stopped, as she reached the President and Mrs. Cleveland, while passing down the receiving line, and apting the charming and very young mistress of the white house, affectionately on the arm, said, "My dear, you look clean tuckered out; why don't you run away and sit down a minute?"

The story goes on to tell how though Mrs. Cleveland stood her ground till the last of 2000 guests had been greeted, she always felt a certain affection for Mrs. Leiter, even though she told the incident with great glee.

And maybe Mrs. Hoover felt just as Mrs. Leiter said Mrs. Cleveland looked. And so took a Sunday off from entertaining.

Folk out here are wondering if Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick hasn't stalled her political machine by turning the wrong lever, when she attacked the senate investigation committee by personal investigation of her own.

It was a new wrinkle in senatorial investigations, and just how it will work out is problematical, though the odds seem to be against the lady from Illinois, in spite of what certain special writers, who strongly favor her candidacy, have to say about it.

Mrs McCormick is resourceful and well informed; she knows that she spent nearly twice as much to secure her nomination as did the rejected Senator-elect Smith of the same state and Vare of Pennsylvania; she is aware that her late husband, Senator McDill McCormick voted against the seating of such senators as had spent large sums in nominations or elections when he was in the senate; she knows the southern democrats want to see James Hamilton Lewis made one of their colleagues; she knows she has antagonized many regular republicans and particularly every insurgent senator by her attacks and accusations of the Nye committee; she knows it will be pretty difficult for senators who voted not to seat Smith and Vare to give any reasons for voting to seat Mrs. McCormick, with her nearly double expenditures. She knows Lewis is a strong candidate and a remarkable campaigner. She knows many republicans resent that she has given Illinois a chance of electing a democrat. With this in view, a good many folks here wonder if she slipped a cog, or whether she has something up her sleeve that will pull her through at the last minute. But just now the sun isn't smiling on her candidacy, as far as can be discovered here.

New Hampshire, a state which for a long time refused to be one of those to ratify the woman suffrage amendment, seems to carry off the palm in number of women candidates for her state legislature. There are now 36 women nominees for the next session, 34 are candidates for the house and two for the senate of whom 23 are republicans and 11 democrats.

The Granite state women did not enthuse when the suffrage movement was on, that is, the majority did not. The state legislature voted against ratification and the anti's rejected. But later on, the governor and council were prevailed upon to call a special session, militants from Washington took the matter in hand, and finally the measure passed, and New Hampshire fell into line. And the ladies are coming to the front and securing plenty of candidates, as is shown by those 36 women, some of whom were and others were not for the "cause" when the question hung in the balance.

Thus far Massachusetts is the only New England state to even make a try at sending women to congress and New York and New Jersey the only eastern states that have women in their delegations, outside Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers, of the fifth Massachusetts district.

The official records put out here show, according to statements made by Senator Dill, democrat, of Washington, that 15,000 lives have been lost in automobile accidents through drunken drivers and approximately 500,000 persons maimed or injured. The statistics cover seven years.

The New England figures give Massachusetts and Connecticut as examples.

For Massachusetts it is stated "in seven years convicted drunken drivers killed 376 and maimed or hurt 14,000 others."

And speaking of automobile accidents here is one that is credited to Alexandria only a stone throw from the capital of the nation. Little Doris Kidd, three years old, got into the path of a big automobile. The driver, Horace Camp, rushed the child to a nearby hospital where she was found to be uninjured. But one side of her pretty childish bob had been given a free haircut and on the right side of her head her bobbed hair had been cut off as clean and even as if by scissors.

Police reported the accident "settled out of court," for the first thing the child did was to demand a penny from everybody standing 'round. She got them, too.

A SHOWER FOR SHEILA

"The rest of you can do as you like" crisped Luella Crane over her sandwich and salad, "but I'm not going to contribute anything for a wedding present for Sheila Sellers. She's too queer. And to think a girl like that would grab the best matrimonial bet in the office! What Bruce Weston sees in her I can't understand. Think of the Westons' social position. Bruce could have practically anybody."

"I'm with you, Luella, about the present," Grace Harper asserted stoutly over her chocolate fudge sundae. "If anybody else in the office were getting married I'd be in favor of doing something nice. But Sheila has always kept herself so aloof. You couldn't exactly say that she's stuck up, but every time we girls have asked her any place she's turned us down. Look at the dances we've invited her to and the way she squirmed out of every single one. And then there was the spread we had on Aggie Trone's birthday. You remember we put Sheila down for salted almonds and chocolate eclairs, did practically everything we could but drag her to the feed, and she refused that too."

"Half the time she looks absolutely dowdy," interrupted Luella. "I'm surprised Mr. Weston would keep anybody in his office that wore the same blue flannel dress all fall, let alone marrying her. I think she's crazy, myself, something missing somewhere."

"Something's missing all right," Grace shrugged. "If you talk about the movies to Sheila she says she doesn't care for them If you ask her what's her favorite show she says she doesn't bother much about shows. Card parties don't interest her and she prefers reading a book to dancing. She's an awful bookworm. Think of Mr. Weston marrying a bookworm."

"She has a passion for books because they don't cost anything," observed Luella. "She's always either going to or coming from the library. If you'd ask me, I'd say she was just downright penurious. What she does with her money is a regular mystery. She must get a decent salary, too. Private secretaries usually do."

"I think I can account for her money," interceded Florence Flanner, the third occupant of the lunch table. "Sheila keeps her mother and her two kid sisters, and how I happen to know this is from nothing that Sheila ever let drop to that effect. Sheila's not the kind to boost herself or to cry because she has to sacrifice good times. My information comes from an aunt of mine who has lived next door to Sheila ever since She was a kid.

"From what Aunt Nell says, I guess Sheila would like to have fun the same as anybody else. I guess she'd like to wear nice clothes and go to dances and play cards and be in on birthday spreads, but she's the backbone of her family. Her money goes for rent and clothes and school books for her kid sisters. I think more of Mr. Weston every time I remember that he's going to marry her.

"There are a lot of fellows who might marry a pretty girl like Sheila but a girl with a family on her hands—that's different. You don't see many men who are devoted enough to shoulder such responsibilities. I think that Sheila's a lucky young woman, and I don't know that Mr. Weston could have made a wiser choice. He'd have to go a long way before he'd find another girl like his fiancee."

"Really, Florence, you're amazing," murmured Luella. "I never heard you talk so much in all my life before but maybe you're right about Sheila. Maybe we'd better give her a wedding present, too. I'm sure I don't mind contributing toward one. I'm not that stingy"

"Nor I," interrupted Grace, "Come to think about it, I've always secretly admired the bride-to-be. What do you say we have a shower for her, too?"

"The very thing," chorused the other two girls.

"What shall it be—linen, kitchen or miscellaneous?" all three demanded in unison. And gay chatter and preparations usurped the remainder of their lunch hour.—Exchange.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept 22—Senator Tom Walsh, of Montana told his fellow democrats out home the other day that he had no thought of seeking further senatorial honors after the present term, provided, of course, that he wins out in November. He has a hard fight on his hands this year, admittedly.

Naturally there was a lot of comment. But what was said seemed to overlook the fact that the senator was born in 1859. He is 71 years of age. Should he achieve another six-year term in the senate, he will be 77 when campaign necessities roll 'round again for him. Not many men care to lay plans for political activities six years ahead that late in life.

Veterans

There are but eight other men now in the senate born in the 50's. They are Fletcher of Florida, Ransdell of Louisiana, Kendrick of Wyoming, Gould of Maine, North Carolina's two veterans, Simmons and Overman, Glass of Virginia, and, of course, the dean of the mall, Gillett of Massachusetts.

Gillett, Gould and Simmons are already out of the political picture, their senate service virtually over. So it seems likely that Senator Walsh was thinking merely of the crowding years when he indicated this was to be his last senatorial campaign.

Not that the Montanan shows his advancing years, aside from his whitened hair. His is one of those slender frames which defy the piling poundage with which the years slow up so many men. Tom Walsh has seemed to thrive on hard work in all the years the Bystander has watched him from the press gallery and in hard fought battles to reach his objectives.

Tenacity

Back in the earliest days of his senatorial hopes, Walsh was the moving spirit in democratic activities in his state that set the stage for election of a democrat to the senate to oust Tom Carter. Yet Walsh, who had previously failed of election to the house, failed to reap the benefit of his labors and Henry Myers came to the senate in his stead. That was in 1911. Two years later, in the days of preferential primaries, he was swept into a senatorship under circumstances that gave him the unanimous vote of the legislature There is a buldog tenacity about Walsh his foes have learned to dread.

The senate surely justifies the derivation of its name which is "old men." Aside from the nine senators born in the 50's, there are nearly 30 of the decade of the 60's; more than 30 born in the 70's; not more than 15 born in the 80's and only three, Tydings of Maryland, Nye of North Dakota and LaFollette of Wisconsin, born in the 90's. Three or four do not reveal their age.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Home.

Mr. Editor: I do not think I would be true to myself or to my many friends if I did not write now and then, and through the medium of the home paper, The Bulletin, keep in touch with them. Letters are but the silent messengers of our thoughts. And still they convey a world of meaning for they speak in no uncertain way. The one book that is our guide through life tells us that a word fitly spoken is like apples of gold on pictures of silver. Through them we talk to the ones back home, and what a world of meaning is hidden in that word home. A little word of just four letters, the first letter, H, the beginning of Heaven.

Poets and writers for ages have written on this subject and I have often given a thought to that old song of Home, Sweet Home, and of the one who wrote that song that will never die, John Howard Paine. I recall reading many years ago, of the inspiration of that immortal song, when he was walking the streets of the French capital, Glancing through a window he saw the interior of a home and there he saw the mother busy with some needlework, while the father sat in an easy chair reading while the children were playing on the floor. On returning to his quarters he sat down and wrote that song that will always be sung while men live and carry on. There has come into the lives of some men who when even banished have looked back with a wistful longing for their old home, the home of their boyhood. There comes to me now the story of a brilliant man and an unscrupulous one, a son of the Rose of New England who was an exile in a foreign land who just before he passed on had said, What wouldn't I do to undo the past so I could return to my old home amid the rugged hills of New England where I spent my boyhood days. But let me be buried in my old uniform that I loved so well. And so he died, unwept, unhonored and unsung, just a victim of circumstances. And yet his last thought was of home. Perhaps the reader may ask, Who was this man? but with the years that have passed and gone let us be kind and forgive and forget.

What happy hours I have when I return, even if it is only for a few brief hours, for though I have been in many places I still look upon it as home. Perhaps it will always remain so. No doubt you who read may at some time have read that masterpiece of Edward Everett Hale, "The Man Without a Country," and noted the heart anguish of poor Philip Nolan whose last request was "Bury me in the sea for it is the only home I have ever known." And yet he loved his country as no other man has loved her; and deserved less at her hands. This no doubt was a legendary story and still he longed for home.

Perhaps this letter of mine may be a little bit sentimental. If you judge it as such, let it be so. And yet behind it all there is a wistful longing in the lives of every one to wander back to their old home. Have you ever noticed at some time, somewhere, as a man nears his home, how his children will run to meet him and take him by the hand? This pays him for the real hard work of the day for he is going home. I care not whether he has only a few chairs, a bare floor, and a table, that is his home and this is only a short distance away from the Heavenly Kingdom, the eternal home that is promised to every one of us: After all is said and done:

Home is not merely four square walls,
With pictures hung and gilded;
Home is where affection calls,
Where the heart, its shrine hath builded.

Do not think when you return that you will find everything as it was when you left it many years ago. The blessed memories of other days have moved away on the sea of time and are now only recalled as in a dream. All this was seen with childish eyes, for God is very near to children and they remember even during the losses of later life. There still remains one thing that endures, the memory of boyhood days—and home.

Tribute to Christopher Thurber

Mr. Editor: I am enclosing a sonnet as a slight tribute to the memory of Christopher Thurber, who was born in Norwich, and won fame abroad for his good works.

In a recent letter from Saloniki, Greece, I am informed that Mr. Thurber died May 31, 1930. He was buried in Athens by the Greek government with the honors of a retired Greek general. All Athens mourned him.

In his last testament he requested that he be buried in Greece with the Greek service, and the last paragraph read as follows:

"To all I have labored with in Greece I implore forgiveness for my ill-temper, impatience, and inconsideration. Most of them know that it all came from an over-burdened soul and a heart breaking because I so often had to turn my face away from 'God's Poor.'"

These matters may be of interest to your readers. A life of noble sacrifice, such as that of Christopher Thurber's, should be an inspiration to everyone in our community.

Very truly yours,
WILLIAM TYLER OLCOTT.

La Jolla, Cal., Sept. 17, 1930.

The tribute follows:

TO CHRISTOPHER THURBER
IN MEMORIAM

To you, a gentle lad I knew of old,
Now slumbering beneath an alien sky,
I lay this wreath upon the marble cold
That marks the holy earth wherein you lie.
You had the strength of purpose,
heard the call
Of those who suffered, and with pitying heart
You gave your life, your efforts, and your all,
Some measure of God's mercy to impart.

Forsaking home and friends for those in need,
Your only thought to solace woe and pain;
You sowed of brotherhood the golden seed,
And reaped a life that was not lived in vain.

You lived among us humble and obscure,
You died afar beloved by God's poor.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Days of Thrift

In days of plenty, free of care,
The wise for leaner days prepare.
—Impy the Chipmunk

These were busy days for Impy and Mrs. Impy. Indeed, they were busy days for all members of the Squirrel family. They were days of preparation. Frosts had not yet opened the nut husks, so that harvest had not really begun, excepting for such as stored away seeds. Impy and Mrs Impy were among these. There were certain seeds of which they were rather fond, and in one of their storerooms already there was a goodly supply.

But, if the nuts were not ready for harvesting, there still was plenty to do to make ready for the harvest. Impy and Mrs Impy looked over their storerooms. Impy thought they were good enough, but Mrs. Impy was not altogether satisfied. "You know," said she, "it would be dreadful to run short of food in midwinter."

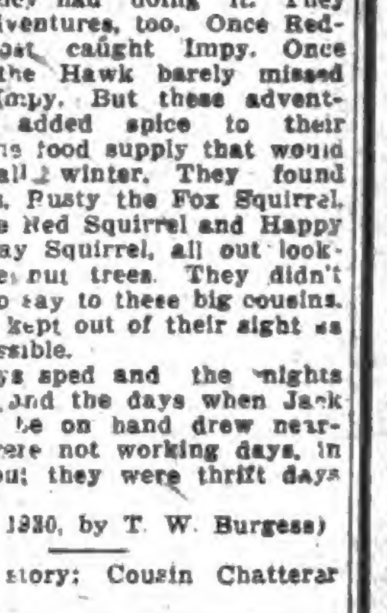
"I don't know much about it," replied Impy, "because I have never spent a winter I have always supposed that the general idea in the Chipmunk family is to sleep all winter."

"True enough," replied little Mrs. Impy. "That is the general idea. But supposing you wake up a few times, whether you want to or not; and supposing you are hungry when you wake up. I'm afraid you wouldn't get to sleep again if you didn't have plenty to eat."

Impy thoughtfully scratched his nose. "There's something to that," said he. "There certainly is something to that. It is better to have too much than not enough. It is better to have some left over than not enough to go around. I should imagine there would be a very comfortable feeling in knowing that our storehouses were full."

"Just so," replied Mrs. Impy. "We want to know that our storerooms are full, and we want to know that our storerooms are big enough. There is nothing like thrift to give one a comfortable, settled feeling in life. I can't understand people who are not thrifty. No, sir, I cannot understand people who are not thrifty. Thrift is the foundation of success. Now, I think we'll enlarge these storerooms of ours. This one that has the cherry pits in it can hardly hold anything else I think we might make one more storeroom."

Now, the weather being cool, Impy was feeling fine. He was in high spirits and full of enthusiasm. He felt just like working. With two of them at work, it didn't take very long to get a new storeroom and to enlarge the others. With this work done, Impy proposed that they go look the nut trees over and make plans for the coming harvest.



"I don't know much about it," replied Impy

Now, during the summer, in playing about, both Impy and Mrs. Impy had discovered certain nut trees. Still, they didn't know where all the nut trees were, by any means. So, now they went hunting nut trees, and a lot of fun they had doing it. They had some adventures, too. Once Reddy Fox almost caught Impy. Once Broadwing the Hawk barely missed little Mrs. Impy. But these adventures merely added spice to their search for the food supply that would keep them all winter. They found their cousins, Rusty the Fox Squirrel, Chatterer the Red Squirrel and Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel, all out looking over the nut trees. They didn't have much to say to these big cousins. In fact, they kept out of their sight as much as possible.

So the days sped and the nights grew cooler, and the days when Jack Frost would be on hand drew nearer. These were not working days, in one sense; but they were thrift days nevertheless.

YOUR HEALTH

Pregnancy And Heart Disease

By William D. Reid, M. D., Boston.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

What advice should be given to the woman who has heart disease and who contemplates marriage? If pregnancy ensues is it not likely to cause her death, or, if not that, to cut years off her length of life? These are important questions. Many physicians believe that such women should not marry, or if married, should not be allowed to go through pregnancy. However, recent studies appear to warrant more optimism about the effect of childbirth on the longevity of women with heart disease. Well over 90 per cent of such patients go through pregnancy successfully.

In 40,000 childbirths occurring in three large hospitals 0.9 per cent of the mothers died; 9.7 per cent of these deaths were due to heart disease. This indicates a cardiac mortality of somewhat less than 1 per 1,000 births.

Certain other information is available from these studies. There are changes in pregnancy which sometimes cause the heart to appear to be diseased although it is not. Familiarity with this simulation and skill in the diagnosis of the status of the heart is essential. It has stated that there is no such thing as heart disease caused by pregnancy. If heart disease is actually present, in 90-95 per cent of the cases it is some form of rheumatic heart disease, or in simpler language, disease of the heart valves. The average age at death of all patients with rheumatic heart disease is a little under 40 years. Analysis of the patients dying in a twelve-year period in a large Boston hospital and who at postmortem examination were found to have had rheumatic heart disease, disclosed the following average age at death; males 38.6 years, married women 42.4 years, single women 47.2 years. These married women averaged 5.75 children per mother. The percentage of deaths actually due to the disease of the heart was the same in each group. It seems reasonable to believe, therefore, that women with heart disease die during the child-bearing age because of the natural evolution of rheumatic heart disease and not because of pregnancy. If this be true it should be given consideration when these patients seek advice regarding marriage and the bearing of children. Motherhood, as has been well said by a medical writer, is women's peculiar privilege and prerogative, a privilege which should not be refused without adequate reason.

The status of the unmarried woman is much closer than is usually taught, I believe, to that of the male cardiac who is contemplating marriage. The prospective mother has the problem of whether she can adequately care for her future children. There also is the possibility of the early death of the patient (male or female) causing the leaving of dependent children. The amount of damage which the heart has already suffered and the financial, social and intellectual status of the patient have much importance in the decision reached.

The foregoing is much more optimistic than the opinion of many physicians who consider child-bearing prohibited in all patients with heart disease. I would not, however, be misunderstood; some patients develop increased trouble with the heart during pregnancy and need treatment. If they come under treatment early much can be done; if they improve they can often be carried through and obtain a live baby, but otherwise the pregnancy can be terminated. The failure to obtain treatment promptly is dangerous and accounts for the death of most of the 5-10 per cent of pregnancy women who have heart disease. All pregnant women should report to their physician early in pregnancy The details of the advice to be given to those with heart disease are technical and must be individualized to the patient; they will not be discussed here.

Subject to certain reservations I would like to bring a little more optimism to the subject of child-birth in the woman who has heart disease. It is repeated that such cases [illegible] during the years of child-bearing more due to the natural evolution of rheumatic heart disease than to pregnancy.

For every bushel of wheat that blackbirds destroy they also consume five bushels of insect pests, and these insects would otherwise destroy ten bushels of grain in a year.

TELLS NORWICH CLUB WOMEN'S PART IS TO ADD REFINEMENT TO LIFE

The first fall dinner and business meeting of the Norwich Business and Professional Women's club was held Monday evening at Thames tavern, Gales Ferry.

Rev. John J. Reilly, curate at St. Patrick's church, was the speaker of the evening, taking as his subject the part of women in life. Before explaining just what part in life women played, Rev. Father Reilly gave a very comprehensive description of life itself, including plant life, animal life and the life of man. Man's life differs from either of the others in that he has the capacity to think and know and love. When he loses this capacity, he becomes a beast. Man's life is of two parts, the physical and spiritual. In giving a definition of life, he quoted St. Thomas Aquinas, scholarly saint of the 13th century, "Life is imminent activity." The more activity there is, the higher the life. Woman's place in this life is not to imitate men. By so doing she pays a high compliment to men and admits of an inferiority which she actually does not possess. Her part is to add, by her refinement and charm, to this imminent activity which is life, thus making it higher than it might otherwise be.

Following the speaker's address, the meeting was called to order for business. Miss Bernice E. Willey, the president, who was one of the club's delegates to attend the state convention in Bridgeport last June, gave her report, as follows:

"The state convention of the Connecticut Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs was held at the Stratfield hotel, Bridgeport, on Saturday, June 7. During the morning session, presided over by Miss May Grant of Stamford, president of the federation, routine business, consisting of reports from officers and committees, was conducted.

"During the luncheon hour the polls were open for the election of officers. Among the three new directors elected for a term of three years, was Miss Lucy B. Abbott of Norwich. Miss Grant, president, as well as all other officers, were re-elected for another year. Following the luncheon round tables of various committees were held and at 2:30 the convention re-convened. The speaker for the afternoon session was Miss Jessie Lee Hall, former president of the New York State federation. Her subject was 'The Divining Rod,' and in her address she said that the Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs had been like the man who goes about with a divining rod, finding out where there is water. He is a promoter and so for some time has the federation been a promoter. But to really accomplish results, to get water, it is necessary to dig. The time for digging has come to the federation. One big thing already accomplished by the National federation has been to bring together through its organization 56,000 women and make them national minded. Miss Hall outlined several projects by which the federation might further broaden and help women. Teachers and organized nation-wide associations, but there are many other large groups who have no such organizations. Miss Hall felt that getting in closer contact with women's organizations abroad would be most helpful in broadening women's minds.

"Dinner was served at 6:30 and this was followed by solos from Mrs. Judith Flather of Bridgeport. The address of the evening, 'A Changing World—And the Business Woman,' was given by Mrs. Geline M. Bowman, first vice-president of the National federation. Mrs. Bowman is a Virginian and proved to be a most delightful speaker of charming personality. She contrasted the meeting held in St. Louis in 1919 when the federation was formed and was comprised of 200 women, with the vast organization of today numbering 56,000 members. 'Nothing is sure in this life,' said Mrs. Bowman, 'except change. When change ceases, decay sets in. About 20 years ago, about the only women read about in the newspapers were those who married counts, committed murder, or ran off with some other woman's husband. At that time a woman was thought of by the business world as something half angel and half idiot. Not only have women shown that they have ability in business and in the professions but they form a very large percent of the stockholders in all prosperous enterprises.'

"The National federation makes a strong point of vocational guidance. Too many girls are sticking to stenography and bookkeeping—lines of work which are greatly overcrowded. These same girls would have such better opportunities in banking, insurance, and advertising—fields that are not overcrowded—if they only had someone to tell them.

"The federation has proven that women can work together and be just as loyal to each other as men. Its membership is made up of women of a high type—women with brains, with ideals, and who wish to do their work well.

"Delegates from the Norwich Business and Professional Women's club who attended the convention were Miss Lucy B. Abbott, Miss Mary E. Rogers, Miss Sara McClellan and Miss Bernice Willey."

The report was accepted and a report from the New Haven conference of Sept. 13 was made, and reports from various committees were read and approved. Plans for the coming year were discussed at length and the programme for 1930 and 1931 promises to be of unusual interest. It was voted that the club meet two evenings a month instead of one, as has been customary, and to eliminate the luncheon meetings.

DERBY MAN WILL SPEAK AT C. OF C. ANNUAL MEETING

For the annual membership meeting of the Norwich chamber of commerce, which is to be held next Monday evening at the Wauregan hotel, the speaker secured is P. L. Gerety of Derby, secretary of the Connecticut division of the New England council, according to an announcement made by Miss Mary E. Bundy, acting secretary. Further final plans for the membership meeting are to be made at a membership committee meeting on Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock.

President Frank R. Murdy has called the membership meeting to the attention of members in the following letter:

Fellow Member:

This is not merely an invitation but an earnest request for you to be present if you possibly can, at the annual meeting of the chamber of commerce to be held at the Wauregan hotel on Monday evening, Sept. 29th, at 6:15.

We have been fortunate in securing as our speaker P. L. Gerety of Derby, who is the secretary of the Connecticut division of the New England council. Mr. Gerety's subject will be one that everyone will enjoy and we sincerely hope that he will be favored with a large audience. In order to insure this large attendance it is absolutely necessary that you be present.

At this same meeting the six new directors will be voted upon. If you have any other suggestions you would like to make regarding the new board they will be welcomed.

Entertainment and other features will be provided, and we are working hard to make this one of the best meetings ever. Do your bit, show your fine spirit of cooperation, by being present on Monday night, Sept. 29. The ladies are especially invited.

FOUR GO TO JAIL ON DISORDERLY HOUSE CHARGE

Found guilty on disorderly house charges, three of four colored persons arrested in a midnight raid Saturday at 72 North Main street were fined and jailed and the other was given a straight jail sentence by Judge Arthur F. Libby in the city court Monday morning. Connie Wanamaker, 32, formerly of New London, Wendell T. Kelly, 30, and his wife, Winifred Kelly, 25, of Akron Ohio, were each fined $100 and costs and given six months' jail sentences and Carl Moton 22, of this city was sent up for 60 days. The costs in the Wanamaker case were $14.50 and in the Kelly cases $8.10.

After watching the place for a week a squad of local police, headed by Sergt. Matthew Delaney, raided it about midnight Saturday. Men and women, colored and white, according to the police, had been frequenting the place for over a week. Earlier in the evening a local police officer, in civilian attire, accompanied by an aide, gained admission to the house. They asked for liquor but did not secure any. However, they secured evidence of a serious offense, and the raid followed.

In court the Wanamaker woman denied any wrong doing. She admitted, however, that she had been arrested on three occasions in New London, on disorderly charges and had been ordered to leave that city. She claimed she came here for the purpose of establishing a hair dressing business but had not had an opportunity to do so.

The Kellys claimed they were here from Ohio on business. They claimed they were roomers at the place. The police, however, produced evidence that the Kelly woman was guilty of a serious offense and that her husband had aided her.

The four tried to raise bonds in order to appeal their cases to the court of common pleas, but were unable to do so, and were taken to jail during the afternoon.

When the mercury reached to 85 degrees Monday afternoon, heavy garments were laid aside for the flimsiest ones of summer.

ELM LEAF BEETLE RAVAGES ARE SHOWING

During the past summer injuries by the elm leaf beetle have become very apparent, according to Dr. E. P. Felt, director of the Bartlett tree research laboratories at Stamford. This condition is the result partly of the feeding being somewhat later than usual and also because the extremely hot dry weather has killed the injured leaves more quickly than would ordinarily be the case and therefore made elm leaf beetle damage more apparent.

This insect is a European species, now widely distributed throughout the eastern United States. It is quite local in habit, is particularly injurious to European elms and especially on trees standing near shelters, such as open sheds, belfries and the like, structures offering enticing winter headquarters for the beetles. The extent of the injury to individual trees may be gauged by the loss in vigorious foliage. The abundance of the beetle was undoubtedly favored by the dry weather of last year, enabling a large proportion of the insects to winter successfully.

This pest is easily controlled by spraying with arsenate of lead in the spring, preferably before the leaves are more than half developed. It is too late to apply poison this year and it is not advisable to spend time and money in attempting to destroy the grubs and the golden yellow pupae now so numerous on the trunks and around the bases of many trees. Feeding the weakened trees now is a valuable aid to their regaining vigor and it is certainly advisable to spray elms next spring in sections where this injury is most apparent.

Colchester Land Records Replaced

Among the volumes of land records which are being replaced by the state librarian with a bound photostat copy, certified as provided by the law passed in 1921, is the volume of Colchester land records, 1701-1721, vital records, 1697-1729, and cattle marks, 1722-1800.

At Auburn, Wash., Carl Jorgenson returned home from a fishing trip with a flying fish as his spoils. No one around Auburn ever saw a flying fish, but the creature Jorgenson hooked in Soos creek looks exactly as the encyclopedias say a flying fish should. "I just catch 'em—I don't explain 'em," Jorgenson said when asked to explain what the fish was doing 1000 miles or so from its native habitat.

JONES HEADS FIELD AT HALFWAY MARK IN AMATEUR QUALIFYING ROUND

By ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor

MERION CRICKET CLUB, Ardmore, Pa., Sept. 22—(AP)—Golfing fireworks exploded all over these historic premises today as the one and only Bobby Jones skyrocketed into the lead for the first 18 holes of the two-day 36-hole qualifying test for the United States amateur championship.

The great Georgian, blazing the way as he began his last battle for a clean sweep of all the major golf honors of 1930 shot a brilliant 36-33—69, one under par and one stroke in front of his nearest two rivals—19-year-old Sidney Noyes, Jr., of New York, a Yale freshman, and Dr. Oscar F. Willing, 40-year-old dentist from Portland, Ore.

Noyes finished the last nine holes in 32, two under par, to post the first par of 70 of the day and set the pace until he was overhauled by Jones. Dr. Willing, among the late finishers, posted his fine 37-33—70 after barely missing a 10-foot putt that would have given him a tie with Jones.

Fourth place went to another youngster, George T. Dunlap, Jr., of New York, the national intercollegiate champion, who scored 35-36—71.

Collapse of Johnston

The first day's struggle was featured otherwise by the virtual collapse of the defending champion, Harrison R. (Jimmy) Johnston of St. Paul, and a hole in one on the 215-yard 17th by Maurice J. McCarthy, Jr., of New York, Metropolitan titleholder.

Johnston, his putting touch so completely gone that he took 41 strokes on the greens and as many as four on a single green, finished with 43-40—83 and faced the necessity of cutting perhaps ten strokes off this score if he is to qualify in defense of the crown he won at Pebble Beach last year.

The records fair to reveal any previous instances of a defending title holder not qualifying. Johnston was confident, even after his miserable showing today, that he would stage a come-back, even if he had to shave it as close as Jerome D. Travers did in being forced into a play off to qualify in 1913. Despite his close call, Travers went on to win the crown again that year.

Johnston, as he steadily lost ground and strokes, presented the extraordinary picture of a champion being forsaken almost entirely by his gallery and so woefully weak on the greens that he needed at least three putts to get down on six of them. He was almost as unsteady off the tees and before he was through had been in more traps and hazards than he usually finds in a half dozen rounds of golf.

McCarthy's Hole-in-One

McCarthy's hole in one, was the first ace recalled by officials since Robert A. Gardner achieved it in the qualifying play of the 1915 tournament, which the Chicago star and former Yale pole vaulter won. McCarthy used a spoon and his tee shot landed a few feet from the cup just trickling in. It helped the New Yorker to score a 75 and might furnish the margin by which he could qualify tomorrow.

Johnson, though on the extreme outer edge of those having any chance to break into the qualifying list of 32 for the match play beginning Wednesday, was not alone among the favorites who blew themselves to high, wide and dangerous totals for the first round, Jess Sweetser, of New York, with an 81, Cyril Tolley, the former British champion, with an 82, and Roland MacKenzie of Wilmington, Del., with an 83, put their chances in extreme jeopardy. MacKenzie was nowhere near his great practice form.

Probably no better than a 36-hole total of 157 will be required to qualify, with exactly 40 scores of 78 or better for today's competition.

OLD TIMERS TRIM OLD MEMBERS OF CANADIAN CLUB

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 22—Local baseball luminaries of a quarter of a century ago returned to the limelight for an afternoon Sunday when the members of the Canadian Athletic club donned their long since discarded uniforms, stepped down from their places in the memories of their old time followers and marched onto Adams field where they crossed bats with the Putnam Old Timers, another group of diamond performers who delighted the crowds of yesteryear. The Old Timers came out on the long end of a 20 to 14 score after nine innings of entertaining sport, marked with few spectacular plays, but with plenty of hard hitting, timely scoring and innumerable errors.

The largest crowd to witness a ballgame this season stormed the bleachers at an early hour and manifested interest in every play that was made. Richard "Dick" Whalen, well known local sports enthusiast, stood behind the batsmen and called the strikes and balls, while the crowd roared with delight. "Pop" Tourtellotte, who has seen ball players come and go for the past two score years, graced the diamond at intervals during the game and told the fans all about each player. The oldest players who stepped from oblivion to the limelight for the day were Dr. Bernard P. Murphy and Mark Lewis. Both artists in their time engraved indelible impressions upon the minds of diamond fans many years ago, which were revived Sunday when they made their first appearance since retirement. They were a bit out of form but the old time spirit of aggressiveness was there, nevertheless. Lewis, who is 63 years old, held the mound for the Old Timers for three innings and allowed but few hits. He was also successful in cracking out the longest hit of the day—a three bagger, which netted him a rising ovation from the large crowd of onlookers. The C. A. C. line-up at various times was made up of Armand Lizotte, Farley, Harry Wallen, "Tris Speaker" St. Onge, Chabot, P. Tetreault, A. Pepin, and P. Bonin, while the Old Timers numbered among their players: Mark Lewis, Dr. Murphy, Tom Light, Brodeur, Marion, Larrier, Monte Kilbourn, and Faucher.

KLEIN LOSES GROUND IN BIG SIX RACE

(By the Associated Press)

With only two games scheduled in the major leagues, Chuck Klein was the only member of the Big Six to get into action yesterday and he failed to take advantage of the opportunity to gain ground. Klein faced the Cardinals' hurlers five times but failed to get a hit, with the result that his average fell off four points, dropping to .335. It was still good enough however, for third place in the standing which follows:

CUBS BEAT BRAVES BUT FAIL TO GAIN ON LEADERS

BOSTON, Sept. 22.—(AP)—Retaining their mathematical chance to win the National league pennant race, the Chicago Cubs defeated the Braves 6 to 2 in the final game of the season here today. The victory still left the Cubs trailing the Cardinals by two and one-half games with four games to play—all with Cincinnati at Chicago.

In turning back the Braves, Guy Bush turned in a brilliant exhibition of hurling, holding Boston to six hits, while the Cubs were pounding Socks Seibold, Eddie Brandt and Bruce Cunningham for 12 blows. Included in the collection of hits was Hack Wilson's fifty-third home run of the season, delivered in the first inning with one teammate on base.

Wilson also contributed one of the fielding features of the game, making a sensational running catch of Richbourg's liner. The entire Boston infield also performed brilliantly.

The Cubs left tonight for Chicago, where they open their final series with the Cincinnati Reds on Thursday.

CARDS SWAMP PHILLIES TO HOLD TOP PLACE

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 2. —(AP) —Pounding the ball to every corner of the park, the St. Louis Cardinals moved a little nearer the National league pennant today with a 15 to 7 victory over Philadelphia. The victory still left the Cards out in front by two and one half games as the Cubs also won.

Beginning a heavy barrage in the second inning, the Cards kept at the task until they had piled up nineteen hits, including eight doubles. Mancuso collected four hits and Bottomley and Watkins connected for three each. Willoughby, Collard and Hansen proved easy for the pennant bound Cards; Phillips, who pitched the last two innings, was the only hurler able to check them.

St. Louis started its scoring rampage in the second, counting four times in each of the second and third innings, adding two more in the fourth and three in the fifth. The final two runs crossed the plate in the seventh inning.

After holding the Phillies to four hits in six innings, Sylvester Johnson weakened a trifle in the seventh and eighth as the Phils gathered in five runs. The Cardinals' lead was never seriously threatened but Herman Bell pitched the ninth and held the Phillies in check.

NORWICH TEAM SEVENTH IN N. E. PRO-AMATEUR

SPRINGFIELD, Mass, Sept. 22.—(AP)—Willie Ogg, pro, and Ben Ayres, amateur, of the Worcester Country club, won today's New England pro-amateur golf tournament at the Springfield Country club with a best ball score for 36 holes of 136. They nosed out Alec Simpson and James Toole, of the local club, by two strokes. John Bernardi and Charles Bradley, of the Charles River club, tied the local golfers. Massie Miller and Noble Miller, of the Norwich, Conn., club, finished seventh with a score of 144

There is something radically wrong with the woman who talks only when she has something to say.

They were driving along toward their destination in another state. John was driving and Mary was plotting the course from a map that she had spread on her knees.

Mary: Now John, are you sure you're on the right road? I haven't seen any of those poles with the markers on them in a long time.

John: What do they need markers for, this is a straight road ain't it? You don't suppose anybody's going to turn down one of them country roads do you?

Mary: No, but I think we ought to ask somebody. There's a man, stop John, and ask him if this is the right road to Podunk. All right then, I'll ask him.

John: There, didn't I tell you we was on the right road. There's a route marker now. Which way do we turn?

Mary: Wait a minute and let's see where we are. The last town we went through was Squeedunk and Podunk is 15 miles from Squeedunk. How far have we been now?

John: How do I know, I can't watch the speedometer and the road, too. You watch the speedometer and I'll do the driving.

Mary: Well, I wanta be sure. I hate to get on wrong roads and have to turn back. Let's see. Oh yes, here it is on the map. You take the road to the right. No, I guess it's the one to the left.

John: Well which is it, we don't want to stay here all day. Every time we come to a cross road you want me to stop while you check up on yourself.

Mary: Now John, you know if it wasn't for me you'd have been on the wrong road a dozen times since we left home.

John: Oh yeah? Well if we didn't have to stop so often to ask the way we'd have been there two hours ago. You must get awfully disappointed when you ask if this is the right road and they tell you it is.

Mary: Oh, John, there's the sign post right ahead and we never saw it. There, didn't I tell you we turn to the left here. See, it says "Podunk 15 miles."

John: Yeah, that's funny that's what the other sign said ten miles back. Say, give me that map a minute. Well, just as I thought. Look here, see where those two roads come together? Well, you said that the left road was the right one and now we're farther away from Podunk than when we started. If we'd taken the road I said we'd be in Podunk by now.

Mary: Well, if you'd use your head for something besides a place to park your hat maybe we'd get along faster. If you're so wise go ahead and find your own way. There (ripping the map in pieces), see if you can get to Podunk now.

John (After ten miles of driving): Well, here we are Mary in Podunk. I told you I could get along without a map.

Mary (Looking at a sign on a building and reading aloud): "Squeedunk Public Market". My ain't you the bright boy, instead of being in Podunk we're back in Squeedunk. You was the little globe trotter who knew his way around, yes you do.

John: I don't see how that could have happened. I was sure I was on the right road.

Mary: I knew you wasn't because I didn't see any of those pole markers.

John: Mary, here's a half dollar, go in and buy another one of those maps.

TY COBB'S SON GOES OUT FOR YALE FOOTBALL

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 22.— (AP) — Tyrus Raymond Cobb, Jr., son of the former major league baseball star, was one of the 150 candidates who reported today for the first Yale freshmen football practice.

Young Cobb played halfback at the Hun school, Princeton, N. J., where he prepared for Yale.

Apparently baseball is not in his line, in filling out his card, he listed tennis hockey, swimming and squash racquets under the heading of "other sports."

Another to report to Coach C. S. (Pat) Osbourn was Joseph Gilligan, brother of the two Gilligans now on the Harvard varsity.

CITIZENS TO PLAY SERIES WITH VELVETMEN

Not content with the scalp of the New London Kaceys, which dangles at their belts following a one-sided 11 to 1 victory Sunday, the Polish Citizens are now to tackle the J. B. Martin club of this city in a two out of three game series that is billed as for the championship of Norwich. The series, which is expected to rival the Cits-Kaceys set of games in interest, will start Sunday and games will be played on the succeeding Sundays. All games will be at J. B. Martin park.

The Cits-Old Timers game that was anounced on Monday has now been called off, it was announced last night by Joe Belair who was lining up the players.

TAFTVILLE CLASHES WITH AETNA FIVE THIS EVENING

The first major bowling match of the season takes place this evening at the Taftville alleys when the Taftville Five clashes with the Aetna Five of Norwich. This match opens the season's bowling activities in Eastern Connecticut and will be the first of a number of such matches that will be rolled from time to time during the winter.

Seeking Basketball Games

Company G, as in previous years, will again band together a fast basketball team to represent the local guardemen on the chalked court for the coming season.

Home and home games are desired with teams in the vicinity of Norwich, Danielson, New London, Colchester, Baltic and Saybrook. Early dates will be appreciated for rounding out the locals' schedule. For games address William Crockett, Mgr., 350 Center St., So. Manchester, Conn.

DR. PENNIMAN PICKS ATHLETICS TO WIN THE WORLD'S SERIES

"There is no doubt the Athletics will win the world's series against the winner in the National league."

That is the opinion of Dr. James Hosmer Penniman, called the most ardent baseball fan in the world, and who has seen more than 5,500 big league games.

Dr. Penniman, a close friend of Connie Mack, and brother of the provost of the University of Pennsylvania, has been watching the A's for years and studying them as carefully as does their manager He witnesses every one of their games when not on one of his numerous trips to Europe.

Often named as "Baseball's Most Devoted Fan," Dr. Penniman believes that the result of the world's series will be largely determined by the reserve strength of the clubs, and in his opinion the Athletics have a larger and better reserve than any other ball club in the world.

Lauds Reserve Strength

He points out that there is an abundance of reserve in both the infield and outfield, with Shores and Quinn making up a fine reserve in the pitching staff.

But Dr. Penniman puts his greatest faith in Connie Mack.

"There is not even the slightest possibility that the Athletics will lose this series, because Connie Mack is at the helm," Dr. Penniman said.

"Some of the most effective things in baseball were done by Mr. Mack. With his score card he tells his players just where to play and in many instances where the opposing batter could have made a two or three-base hit against any other team, he makes only a one-base hit and often he is put out."

"Practically every world's series is largely determined by the reserve strength of the club and there is no club now playing ball that has the reserve strength of the Athletics.

"In my opinion, Dykes is the best all-around ball player now working. Freiberg is often called the Dykes of the Phillies, and he, too, is extremely valuable.

"Dykes throws marvelously to first base. At no time is the ball more than three feet from the ground and it reaches the first-base mit with astounding speed.

"It is remarkable how Foxx and Cochrane when playing for a ball run full speed and make a catch with accurate precision. Cochrane is a catcher of astounding endurance. He is full of life every minute of the game and never seems to tire. Perkins is second to none for coaching young pitchers. There is no man playing ball today who can throw a ball to second base as he can.

Praises Rommel

"Rommel's knuckle ball has been useful and very effective this year. He is conceded to be the best fielding pitcher of all times. He just seems to sleep and eat baseball.

"Simmons is the best outfielder I've seen. He can get the ball away with a snap faster than anyone in both leagues. He takes long strides and covers an enormous amount of territory in a short time. "Bing" Miller has shown his skill in every game that the Athletics have played.

"Of course, Mack is the master general of them all. Some of the most effective things in baseball have been performed by Mr. Mack. He has made the most remarkable trades in baseball history. He traded 'Bing' Miller for Sammy Gray. He sold Hale for Schang, who is very effective in pinches.

"Mr. Mack studies carefully the weaknesses of the other teams. Often I have seen him in the Athletics' dugout watching and eyeing carefully the opposing team.

"An enormous amount of thought is put behind the pitching staff. Mack keeps his pitchers in the proper frame of mind. One of his greatest and grandest qualities is the way he uses psychology in managing the team. He establishes a confidence in the ability of the pitchers.

"No one ever thought much of Ehmke when Mack placed him on the team in exchange for Slim Harris. Ehmke was knocked out in the first inning of his first game against the Yanks, but in the world's series of last year he astounded the baseball world with his marvelous pitching."

When asked whether he would see the world's series games this year, Dr. Penniman said: "At present I am in the hands of the doctors, and am being prepared for a possible operation, but if I am in the hospital I'll give one long yell when I hear that Grove has won the first game."

HARVARD'S FOOTBALL PROSPECTS ARE BRIGHTEST IN NUMBER OF YEARS

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 22—(AP)—Although Harvard's flow of great sophomore athletic material has ceased for the time being, football prospects have seldom been brighter here at the stadium.

Graduation losses never fall so easily upon a Crimson team and Head Coach Arnold Horween and his aides had plenty of time during the spring training period to test and season many promising candidates who would probably have been overlooked in the early fall rush.

As a nucleus for his 1930 varsity squad Horween has 21 of last year's 37 players, including 14 lettermen and five of the starting eleven against Yale.

These statistics, however, are not quite as impressive as they appear, for Harvard has troublesome tackle problems and could use at least twice as many experienced ends as Horween now has at his disposal.

If he can find competent replacements for the missing "Red" Barrett and Bill Ticknor, tackles of last year, and Dick O'Connell and Jim Douglas, who flanked them on the wings, Harvard will have a strong line for Captain Ben Ticknor, all-American snapper-back, and his sturdy guardsmen, John Trainer and George Talbot, promise to have another great season.

This center trio, which bruised and battered every set of rivals last year, is again supported by an impressive list of substitutes, such as Henry Gilde, Charley Richards and Joe Cunningham, all first class pivotmen, and among the spare guards are valiants like Henry Myereon, Bill Ginman, Bill Brooks and Jim Easterly.

Vic Harding, capable forward pass receiver, has recovered from the dangerous injury he suffered in the Yale game and should gain one of the end posts without great difficulty. Bob Ogden and Bic Moushegian, who saw plenty of service last season, will probably battle for the other wing. The others in the end squad to exhibit promise are Larry Lovett and Dick Werner, freshmen last season, and Jim Baldwin, now back in the good graces of Dean Hanford.

The outstanding tackle candidates are Bob Faxon, George Kuehn, Graydon Upton, all first string subs in 1929, and the new eligible and powerful "Red" Finlayson. It is almost a certainty that two of this foursome will prove to be as capable as either of last year's regulars before the season is far advanced.

Horween's greatest strength is behind the line for he has two fine backfield combinations ready for action. The great Barry Wood, described by no less an authority than Knute Rockne as "the greatest forward passer in football," is the keyman for the "A" machine that includes such stars as Eddie Mays and Charlie Devers, halfbacks, and Bernie White at fullback.

The "B" string is composed of Roger Gleason as quarterback, Arthur Huguley and Jack Chickard halfbacks and Joe Schereschewski, probably the longest name in Harvard's football history, as fullback. If any of this double quartet weaken, Horween has only to beckon and Sam Batchelder, Eugene Record, Paul Fullam, Dana Greeley, Ralph Coburn or Jim Leonard, will rush out for relief work.

Harvard will play an eight-game schedule as follows: Oct. 4, Vermont; 11, Springfield; 18, Army; 25, Dartmouth; Nov. 1, William @ Mary; 8, Michigan; 15, Holy Cross; 22, Yale at New Haven.

NOTED RACE DRIVERS BUILDING 300 M. P. H. CAR

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Sept. 22—(AP)—Two giant motors, designed to hurl a racing car across the sands of Daytona Beach, Florida, at the almost unbelievable speed of 300 miles an hour, are resting on blocks in a manufacturing plant here, awaiting construction of a chassis to carry them.

Molded into the steel of these two 24 cylinder, double ignition power units are the dreams of two veteran drivers of the nation's speedways, Harlan Fengler and Peter De Paolo, who hope next February to eclipse the late Major H. O. D. Seagraves' world record of 231.36 miles per hour.

While the chassis and body will follow generally accepted designs to cut down air resistance and insure stability, the power hookup will be something of a departure from anything previously tried in record attempts.

The machine will be the most powerful ever built for Daytona Beach speed tests. Each motor will develop 1,200 horsepower, and the combined power will be more than twice that in Major Seagraves' racer. The craft will be of four-wheel drive design, which, veteran pilots point out, will eliminate in great degree slippage, which tends to cut down speed. Ordinary water-cooling will be used, tests having shown no need of ice packing.

The machine will be approximately 32 feet long, sufficient to carry the twin motors and give the driver cramped room for himself and his controls, and will weigh five tons. Instead of silk casings for the wheels, as used by Major Seagrave twelve-ply cotton fabric tires with thin rubber tread have been tested and proved sufficient to stand the strain of the tremendous speed.

De Paolo and Fengler hope to have the machine assembled by late December and on the Dayton Beach sands by January 15 for preliminary tests. Just who will pilot the racer has not been decided.

De Paolo has been a racing driver since 1922, winning the national driving championship in 1925. Fengler was injured in a race at Indianapolis in 1923 and since then has not appeared on a speedway.

JONES IS RANKING GOLFER OF THE WORLD

NEW YORK, Sept. 22—(AP)—The United States Golf association agrees with the rest of the world that Robert T. Jones, Jr., is the leading golfer. On the list of the "first ten" announced today for seeding the draw in the match play rounds of the national amateur championship at Merion Cricket club next week, the name of Jones leads all the rest.

Following custom the U. S. G. A. compiled two lists, the first in the order of merit and the second, arranged in alphabetical order, to replace any of the ranking stars failing to qualify.

The name of John Goodman, unplaced last year, is sixth in the first ten. Phillips Finlay and F. J. Wright, Jr., ninth and tenth last year, are not named. Goodman will be remembered as the Omaha youth who eliminated Bobby Jones in the first round at Del Monte.

Cyril Tolley, former British amateur champion, seeded independently last year is eighth in the 1930 list. The other eight were named in 1929, although the 1930 ranking is slightly different. George Voight is No. 3 now as he was then, but George Von Elm, No. 2 in 1929, is No 4 in 1930. Harrison R. Johnston, the amateur champion, is placed next to Jones. Dr. O. F. Willing, runner-up in the last championship, was advanced from seventh to fifth. Jess Sweetser was dropped from fifth to tenth and Francis Ouimet from fourth to seventh.

WESTERLY

O'CONNELL MAY GET NOMINATION FOR SENATOR

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Sept. 22.—Westerly democrats, Tuesday evening, will hold their caucus for the naming of members for the Westerly democratic town committee and delegates and alternates for the democratic state, district and congressional conventions to be held in Providence. Upon the adjournment of the town caucus the caucuses for the first and second voting districts will be held to select chairmen and clerks in the two districts.

Relative to the possible democratic nominations to be made at a later caucus on the Rhode Island assembly ticket, there are current rumors to the effect that Dr. John M. O'Connell, the present democratic representative to the Rhode Island general assembly from the first Westerly voting district, who at one time was mentioned as a possible candidate for the Rhode Island democratic nomination for lieutenant governor of the state, may be named as senator on the Westerly democratic slate. In this event he will oppose Howard E. Thorp, of Potter Hill, who is the present republican member from Westerly in the upper house of the assembly.

The name of George A. Dolan, present chairman of the democratic town committee, may appear on the democratic slate for nomination as a representative to the legislature from the second voting district. Should this prove to be the case, he will oppose the present republican representative, Clifford W. Campbell, of the second voting district and a member of the lower house in the legislature for the past five years.
